'ARBITRATE,' UNIONS AGAIN DEMAND, BUT SHONTS SAYS 'NO'

MAYOR CALLS CONFERENCE

RED CARS IN NIGHT RUNS

Organized labor, through its highest representatives in the city and State, made a second effort yesterday to force the traction companies, now obviously winning in the strike, to arbitrate their differences with their employes.

At a conference with Mayor Mitchel they told him that unless he were successful in bringing the opposing factions together, the oft-repeated threat of a sympathy strike would be made good. In support of this assertion the committee of unionists which has been advising the strikers issued a statement last night that if by Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock the Mayor had failed in his endeavors, the committee would meet and designate an hour for the strike.

Officials of the traction companies said again last night that they had nothing to arbitrate, that the strike was being broken. Nevertheless the Mayor has called a conference for this morning in an effort to see if some agreement preliminary to a settlement cannot be reached.

As sustaining the companies' contention that the strike was waning, nearly all city lines made gains yesterday, and last night, until 11 o'clock, a limited number of cars was run on the Third Avenue system.

The situation was complicated, however, by the entrance of the Queens trolley men into the controversy, members of the union employed by the New York & Queens County Railway having voted at midnight to strike today.

Request Was Unexpected.

The request for arbitration was served on the Mayor when he met the labor chiefs at the City Hall at noon, at the request of Timothy Healy, head of the union of eccentric firemen. James Holland, President of the State Federation of Labor, who is the supreme representative here of the American Federation of Labor in the absence of Samuel Gompers, its President; Hugh Frayne, general organizer in New York for that organization; Ernest Bohm, Secretary of the Central Federated Union, and T. V. O'Connor, international head of the union of longshoremen, were, with William B. Fitzgerald, general organizer of the carmen's organization, members of the delegation.

It had been announced the sole object of the labor men in seeing the Mayor was to complain that policemen had been unduly active in the cause of the traction companies. The request for arbitration came unexpectedly. The labor chiefs told Mr. Mitchel that the members of the carmen's union were willing to have their grievances adjusted under the terms of the agreement of Aug. 6, and that it rested with him to avert a general tie-up.

Mr. Mitchel wanted to know when the threatened tie-up would come, and was informed that it all depended on what encouragement he received from the officials of the companies. In any event, the labor leaders said, they would do nothing until they had heard from the Mayor.

Mr. Mitchel at once got in touch with Oscar S. Straus, Chairman of the Public Service Commission, and discussed the situation with him at luncheon; but Theodore P. Shonts, President of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company and the New York Railways Company, did not wait to hear from either of them before announcing his attitude on the request of the labor chiefs.

"No," Says Shonts.

"My answer is no," said Mr. Shonts when asked if he would arbitrate or resume negotiations with the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes on the terms of the Aug. 6 agreement. "It is emphatically no! Now, after spending a few ducats and inconveniencing the public, this union again asks us to arbitrate. We are asked to let bygones be bygones and to start all over again.

"We will not do it. We will stand by our position. We've got the strike broken, and we do not intend to arbitrate. We have nothing to arbitrate. Everybody seems to forget the rights of the nearly 11,000 men who are employed by the Interborough and have refused to go on strike. These men have gone through hell and high water for us and we are going to stick to them.

"We went through with all of this once and we don't intend to go through with it again. I signed the agreement of Aug. 6 against my judgment and under pressure, and then the union broke its agreement. We are through with the union—Mr. Fitzgerald's union. We will not arbitrate with it."

Mayor Mitchel refused to comment on Mr. Shonts's statement. He said that in order that there might be no misunderstanding with the labor chiefs, he and Mr. Straus had asked them, late

KELVINIA SURVIVORS UNWARNED BY U-BOAT

Twenty-seven American hostlers who were on the British freighter Kelvinia when she was torpedoed in Bristol Channel on Sept. 3 arrived yesterday on the Anchor liner Tuscania, and testified to a representative of the Collector of the Port that she was struck without warning, and it was entirely a stroke of good fortune that they were not all drowned.

Their affidavits were taken by two stenographers at the pier and sworn to before George Lamb of the Law Department at the Custom House, to be forwarded to the State Department through the Secretary of the Treasury.

The submarine was sighted from the bridge at 2:20 A. M., on the port bow, and could be discerned plainly in the bright moonlight. Before the officer on watch had time to alter his course the undersea craft fired a torpedo, which hit the Kelvinia on the port side, just forward of No. 2 hatch, which caused the steamship to list heavily, as the water poured into the hold. All hands were ordered to the boats, which were swung out at the davits.

The submarine circled around the sinking ship for a time, to make sure she would founder, and then submerged, the hostlers said. The boats remained in the vicinity of the derelict until 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when she sank, and they were picked up a little later by a British trawler and landed at Bristol.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—Until information being sought by the American Embassy at London has been received the Kelvinia incident, officials said tonight, will not be made the subject of a diplomatic inquiry. Affidavits of the survivors taken in New York today will be studied in connection with those being received by the American agents in England.

ASQUITH'S OLDEST SON IS KILLED IN ACTION

Lieutenant Had Won Distinction in Oxford as Scholar, and Later as Member of Bar.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Lieutenant Raymond Asquith, oldest son of Premier Asquith, was killed in action on Sept. 15, it was announced today.

Raymond Asquith, who was in his thirty-eighth year, was a graduate of Oxford, President of the Oxford Union, and prominent as a member of the bar, to which he was admitted in 1904. He acted as junior counsel for Great Britain in the North Atlantic Fisheries arbitration at The Hague in 1907. He was made a Second Lieutenant in a County of London regiment in 1914, and Lieutenant of the Grenadier Guards in 1915.

Lieutenant Asquith's two brothers, Lieutenant Arthur Asquith of the Royal Naval Reserve and Lieutenant Herbert Asquith, were wounded in action at the Dardanelles in June, 1915.

AVIATOR OVER LONDON LOOPS LOOP 23 TIMES

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Extraordinary developments in aviation under war pressure were shown in a performance given yesterday by a military airman in the neighborhood of London for funds for war hospitals. As the story goes, Lieutenant Robinson looped the loop three times in his joy after destroying the Zeppelin L-21.

The performer yesterday began his stunt high in the air and made his big biplane do some wonderful bird-like evolutions. It was like figure skating, if you can imagine a skater turning somersaults. By way of varying his intricate patterns he dived, turned over, and shot up again. He looped the loop twenty-three times, getting lower each time until he was too near the upturned faces for nervous watchers. It was a dance in the air as quick and sure as the sportive flight of a swallow at evening.

The flight of aeroplanes over London which was once illegal, owing to fear of possible descent upon some thickly populated quarter, nowadays is no uncommon incident, and in certain districts not far from the metropolis swarms of aeroplanes of various types can be seen in the air at any time, making speed and performing evolutions thought impossible a couple of years ago.

Experts declare that when peace comes the application of aeroplanes to ordinary purposes of life will bring many surprises.

BRITISH ROUT TURKS NEAR SUEZ CANAL

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Defeat of the Turks in a minor engagement on the Sinai Peninsula, sixty-five miles east of the Suez Canal, was anounced officially today as follows:

> A mobile column composed of Anzac mounted troops and a camel corps, with some artillery, left Dir-el-Abd on Sept. 6 with a view to carrying out reconnoissance of enemy troops west of El Arish. The column reached an enemy position at Bir-el-Mazar, sixty-five miles from the canal, at dawn of Sunday.
> A sharp engagement followed, in which our troops penetrated the enemy trenches at several points and inflicted considerable casualties, while our artillery heavily shelled the enemy camps.
>
> The attack appears to have been a surprise to the Turks, and our aircraft saw and fired on several parties of them, among whom were German officers, riding rapidly back to El Arish. We took some prisoners. Our casualties were slight.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 18, (via London,)—On the Sinai Peninsula British cavalry was defeated in an attempt to advance east of Suez, says a statement issued by the War Office today, which says:

> "Enemy airmen, operating by moonlight, dropped ten bombs on El Arish. No damage was caused.
> "Enemy cavalry detachments which tried to advance east of Suez were repulsed."

Another attempt by the British forces in Mesopotamia to take the offensive is reported by the War Office, which says the attackers were dispersed with heavy losses. The statement follows:

> "On the Felahie front we dispersed with our artillery fire forces of enemy infantry which were approaching our positions, and inflicted heavy losses on them."

WAR DEPARTMENT PLANS NEW TESTS FOR AMERICAN GUN

CONFIRM WORD OF INVENTOR

NEW PHASE TO CONTROVERSY

Secretary Baker Intimates He Will Move for Reopening of Whole Question This Week.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—Action is to be taken by the War Department this week with reference to the controversy over the relative merits of machine guns for the United States Army, to which prominence has been given by the publication in THE NEW YORK TIMES today of statements showing that Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood and other army officers regarded the present machine guns in use by the United States Army—the old model Vickers and the Benet-Mercier, or Springfield—as interior to the machine gun invented by Colonel Isaac Newton Lewis, U. S. A., retired, and which is proving a success in the British Army.

It is the Lewis gun which was offered free to the United States Government by Colonel Lewis some time ago, and which offer was rejected.

Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War, said today that in a few days he would make known steps that he had decided to take with reference to the machine gun question. "I am familiar with the controversy affecting the Lewis gun," said Secretary Baker. "It is one of long standing and has been the subject of considerable discussion in Congress in the last few years, and I have taken steps with regard to it that will be made known within a few days."

Further than that Secretary Baker declined to make any statement. He left Washington tonight for St. Louis to deliver a speech in place of President Wilson on Wednesday, and it is expected he will make his announcement on Friday, upon his return here. Brig. Gen. William Crozier, Chief of Ordnance of the Army, who is alleged to be opposed to the adoption of the Lewis gun, will also return to Washington on that day. He is making an inspection of Eastern coast fortifications, and left New London, Conn., today to visit the United States Arsenal at Watertown, Mass.

Whole Controversy Reopened.

What form Secretary Baker's action will take was not disclosed by him, but it is apparent from what was said in army circles that the whole matter of the adoption of the best type of machine guns for the army has been reopened by the appropriation by Congress of $12,000,000 for the purchase of these weapons.

Authority to expend this amount for machine guns is carried in the annual Army Appropriation bill recently enacted. The bill appropriates $6,000,000 for machine guns for the regular army and $6,000,000 additional for machine guns for the National Guard. Responsibility for the expenditure of this money is placed with the Secretary of War, and it is taken for granted in military circles that he will not be willing to make allotments until he has ascertained to his own satisfaction what type or types of machine gun will prove best for military purposes. This indicates that there will be additional tests of the Lewis, the new 1915 model of the Vickers, the Benet-Mercier and such other makes of machine guns as may be submitted to the War Department for trial.

In this connection it was learned today that the War Department has knowledge that an American inventor intends to submit to the Government for tests an entirely new type of machine gun. Army officers having some knowledge of this invention said today that they were not at liberty to give the name of the inventor or to make any statement with respect to the gun itself, but they admitted the department had been informed that this gun would soon be brought to the department's attention.

Army Officers Interested.

While deeply interested in the publication in THE TIMES of details as to the controversy over the Lewis gun, army officers were reluctant to discuss the matter for publication, being restricted by standing orders prohibiting them from commenting publicly on matters of a military nature. The Lewis gun has many warm friends among army officers who, like General Wood, have been impressed by its successful use on the British front in France and the fact that more than 30,000 of the Lewis type of weapon have been purchased by the British Government.

Other army officers indicated that they believed all the various types of guns involved in the controversy had some points of excellence, but they desired to keep their minds open on the subject until there had been additional tests. It was said that Secretary Baker was occupying an entirely impartial attitude in the matter, and that while he had a contemplative knowledge of the points in controversy, he was careful to refrain from expressing any preference, and, for that matter, was believed to be without any prejudice one way or the other. In view of this position of Secretary Baker, the expected forthcoming additional tests of machine guns will be of extreme importance.

The light weight of the Lewis gun has commended it to many army officers, who realize that mobility in a machine gun is an essential to its successful use in action against an enemy. For this same reason it has commended itself highly for use in arming military aeroplanes, and army aircraft on the Mexican border have been armed with it and are testing it out.

It was said at the War Department today that the Lewis gun also commended itself for aeroplane purposes, because

Gen. Crozier Denies Lewis Offered His Gun Free; Tested and Rejected by Best Agencies, He Says

UNIVERSITY CLUB, NEW YORK,

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Sir—I read in your issue of today an article and an editorial upon the subject of the Lewis machine gun and its relations with the Ordnance Department of the army, of which I am the chief, containing certain statements and charges so prominently put forth that I do not think they should remain unnoticed even for twenty-four hours, although in that length of time, being away from my office and its records, I cannot make the complete and conclusive answer which the facts would render possible.

The article contains the following:

> "Why didn't the Government accept your gun when you offered it free to the Ordnance Bureau?" Colonel Lewis was asked.
> "That's a question I am unable to answer, for I don't know. The only thing that I do know is that I tried to give it to them and that they refused to take it," was Colonel Lewis's answer.

I do not know whether or not your representative rightly attributed this statement to Colonel Lewis, but it is untrue. Colonel Lewis never offered his machine gun to the Ordnance Bureau and never, to my knowledge, offered it to any other branch of the Government free of charge. The first formal presentation of the gun for test was by private parties, who claimed full control of it, and neither then nor since made any intimation that they were offering it otherwise than as a commercial proposition; and the gun itself was of foreign manufacture.

It is not true that the gun was tested by any board appointed or controlled by me. There have been two tests by boards appointed by the War Department, upon each of which there was one member only from my department; and there has been no refusal of test. Both tests resulted in reports adverse to the Lewis gun, and if it had been adopted for the service it would have been in contravention of these reports.

The Lewis gun has undoubtedly done a great deal of service in the European war, but not all the reports which we have received of it have been favorable. It has been used by the English, and the Benet-Mercier gun has been used by the French, and there has been no bit of evidence that the conclusions of our own testing boards as to their relative merits would not be borne out by a comparison of their performance in the two allied armies. If there has been error in these conclusions, it has been by the best agencies which the War Department has known how to create for considering the subject.

In the so-called Plattsburg test none of the safeguards of thoroughness or fairness was present. A small number of rounds only were fired, which did not include the essential endurance test. No responsible officer would have been justified in basing conclusions upon its results. Hastily and respectfully,

WILLIAM CROZIER.

TOUR TO BE A SEVERE TEST

First Speech in Peoria Today, Where He Will Meet Party Leaders of Illinois.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 18.—On his second campaign tour of the Middle West, Charles E. Hughes, Republican candidate for President, will employ carefully prepared arguments in an effort to turn the Adamson eight-hour act passed to prevent the threatened railroad strike into a boomerang which will turn voters against President Wilson. He will make one of his chief issues the charge that the President and Congress surrendered to force and endeavor to tear to pieces the theory on which the legislation was built.

Since his earlier attacks upon the legislation Mr. Hughes has given careful study to the act and the conditions under which it was passed. He feels that he is fully prepared to meet any arguments which the Administration may place before the people and will picture the Adamson bill as the worst of many false steps which he alleges that the Administration has taken in the past four years.

Mr. Hughes has a severe test ahead of him, as the present tour is one of the most comprehensive which has been mapped out for a candidate in many years. It is the desire of Mr. Hughes and of his campaign managers that he shall get into close touch with the people, and for the next ten days he will be at work from early morning until late at night. His special train will stop at practically all of the small towns along the route.

To Meet Leaders in Peoria.

Alvin T. Hert, manager of the Central Headquarters at Chicago; Chairman William R. Willcox, Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman and Harold L. Ickes, members of the advisory committee of the Republican National Committee, will meet the special train at Chicago and accompany the nominee to Peoria. Arriving there at 9:30 o'clock, the party will go to the Jefferson Hotel and an hour later Mr. Hughes will deliver the first address of the tour at the Coliseum, where the Republican State Convention is in session. All the political leaders will be on hand and every effort will be made to turn the affair into a love feast.

Mr. Hughes will leave for Springfield, Ill., at noon and will make a speech at the Fair Grounds there at 4 o'clock. This will be followed by a reception at the Leland Hotel in the evening and an address at the theatre. The party will leave at 11 o'clock for Sheboygan, Wis. A big effort will be made tomorrow to get a flying start and awaken Illinois to the realization that there is a national campaign in progress.

Mr. Hughes has prepared himself for the drive with great care and campaign managers, national and State, have been putting forth their best efforts to get Illinois keyed up to the proper pitch. A big time in Illinois tomorrow, the managers feel, means a big time all along the route.

The stage is all set for the entrance of the nominee. Republican managers are figuring on Illinois as pretty safely in the Republican column, according to reports, but they feel also, it is said, that the happenings of the next few days will have a vital effect upon the doubtful States of the Middle West, such as Indiana.

Albany Greets the Nominee.

The day started off with a cordial welcome for the nominee from a crowd that collected at the station in Albany, despite the fact that no extended stop was scheduled. Mayor John W. Stevens was on hand to greet Mr. Hughes, and there was a cheer as the nominee appeared on the rear platform of his car. Mr. Hughes stepped down to the station platform to shake hands.

The Hughes special train made a fast run today, acting as pacemaker for the Empire State Express. From New York to Albany the special train beat the running time of the Twentieth Limited by five minutes.

Early today Mr. Hughes sent this telegram to Mrs. Seth Low:

> Mrs. Hughes and I are deeply grieved to learn of the death of your husband. We extend to you our most sincere sympathy.
> CHARLES E. HUGHES.

Mr. Hughes today accepted, on behalf of himself and Mrs. Hughes, the invitation of Charles W. Fairbanks, his running mate, to be his guest during their stay in Indianapolis Saturday and Sunday.

One of the members of the Hughes party had this story to tell today:

"Charles E. Hughes pulled the bellrope that started the train out of Syracuse on its way to Buffalo. He went through the train and counted the passengers and put the data down in a methodically kept memoranda book. Then he sat down to make out a report."

SETTLE HOT FIGHTS IN PRIMARIES TODAY

COLONEL OUT FOR BACON

Leaders Say the Party Votes Will Be Very Light with Exception of the Progressives.

A Statewide direct primary for the nomination of candidates for Governor and State offices, United States Senator, Chief Judge and Associate Judge of the Court of Appeals, some Supreme Court Justices, Congressmen, State Senators, and Assemblymen, to be elected at the November election, will be held today. Polling places in every election district in the city will be open from 3 P. M. to 9 P. M. Each party has about 150 candidates to nominate.

The interest centres about the contest between Robert Bacon and William M. Calder in the Republican primary for the nomination for United States Senator and the contest in the Progressive primary between Governor Charles S. Whitman and Samuel Seabury for the nomination for Governor.

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt issued yesterday a declaration in favor of Mr. Bacon on the ground that Mr. Bacon favors universal military service and that Mr. Calder has publicly stated his opposition to it.

State Senator William M. Bennett is contesting the Gubernatorial nomination with Mr. Whitman in the Republican primary, while Thomas F. Conway is trying to defeat William F. McCombs for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator. There are several contests in all parties for the Congressional, State Senatorial, and Assembly nominations.

The candidates wound up their campaigns last night with predictions of victory. Friends of Mr. Bacon have been making tremendous efforts, and the eleventh-hour appeal from Colonel Roosevelt in Mr. Bacon's behalf is expected to tell heavily. A few days ago Colonel Roosevelt announced his opposition to Mr. Seabury.

Calder and Whitman Confident.

Mr. Calder said last night that he was not worried over the result, and predicted that he would have a big majority over Mr. Bacon. Governor Whitman's friends said his nomination in the Progressive primary was certain, while Mr. Seabury's campaign managers declared that he would get a majority of the Progressive vote.

The indications are that the vote will be very light, no party polling anywhere near its full party strength, with the possible exception of the Progressives, who are anxious to make a good showing. The Republican enrollment in the State this year is 738,631, and Republican leaders said last night that it was doubtful if half that number would go to the polls, while other leaders asserted that 200,000 would be nearer the mark.

The Democratic enrollment is 651,873, and State Chairman Edwin S. Harris ventured the opinion that not more than 100,000 Democrats would take the trouble to visit the polls. Other Democratic leaders placed the number as high as 200,000. The Progressive Party enrollment is 46,206, and 25,000, at least, are expected to vote.

In New York County the Republican enrollment is 68,061, the Democratic 137,626, and the Progressive 10,003.

Tammany has few fights on its hands, the principal one being that for the nomination for Judge of General Sessions between John F. McIntyre, the organization candidate, and James A. Delehanty, the present incumbent, who was appointed by Governor Whitman. Delehanty is also running in the Progressive primary against Hugh Gordon Miller. For the nomination for President of the Board of Aldermen Henry H. Curran, Republican, is running against William H. Chorosh in the Progressive primary.

Travis Has Opposition.

In the Republican primary there is a spirited contest on between Eugene M. Travis and James F. Hooker for the nomination for State Controller.

BULGARIAN RIGHT WING CRUMPLED, FLORINA CAPTURED, MONASTIR MENACED; ALLIES AGAIN PUSH FORWARD SOMME LINE

Retreat in West Preferred, Say Reports to Berlin, to Wasting Lives for "Unimportant Territory"

BERLIN, Sept. 18, (via London, Tuesday, Sept. 19.)—The mass attack by the British along the Somme front on Friday was, according to advices reaching here, apparently carried out only by means of the concentration of the entire British forces. The Germans assert that there is hardly a fresh British division left.

The Germans, nevertheless, are not disposed to give way to any illusion that the British Army has been completely weakened, although it is asserted in official quarters that the latest battle has served to convince them once again that the British are Germany's chief opponents in the west.

On Sunday, while the Germans were making counterattacks, and among other things regaining a portion of the lost village of Martinpuich, both the British and French continued their efforts at various points along the line, particularly the British, between Thiepval and Combles. These efforts, it is announced, were brought to a standstill. The French concentrated their efforts at Bouchavesnes, but were thrown back.

The belief is held in Berlin that even if Germany's opponents have not been completely weakened, a continuance of the attacks with their former intensity is an impossibility, because the Anglo-French offensive, especially that of last week, has cost them so heavily.

Reports from the front state that little as the German troops like to retreat, this policy is preferred, if thereby lives can be saved at the expense of comparatively unimportant territory.

BRITISH 'TANKS' OF AMERICAN TYPE

DEVELOP 120 HORSE POWER

Lay Their Own Tracks, Seven Feet at a Time, and Can Go Over Anything, He Asserts.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—The British "tanks," the armored motor cars used in recent assaults on German trenches in northern France so successfully as to attract world-wide attention, were built for the most part in Peoria, Ill., in the form of caterpillar tractors designed many years before the war began for the purpose of meeting some of the difficult problems of modern farming. Except for their armor, their machine guns and their crews, thousands like them are in use today in the United States, in plowing, digging ditches, and other labors less heroic than war.

M. M. Baker, Vice President of the Holt Manufacturing Company, explained here today that it was machines made by his company at its Peoria plant that had hurdled German trenches, walked through forests and crawled over shell craters in the face of intense gunfire.

"We have sold about 1,000 caterpillar tractors to the British Government," said Mr. Baker. "We have had nothing to do with putting armor on them, or placing machine guns, but some of our men at Aldershot, Eng., recently were notified that the British Government intended to arm some of the tractors and use them for work other than the usual towing of big guns.

"Germany had some of these tractors before the war began, and although I do not understand just how it occurred, I believe she may have got others since then. We have sent some to France and some to Russia. So far as I know, up until the recent appearance of the armored cars the tractors were used only to tow big guns. I understood that Germany used about forty of them in this work before Liège early in the war and recent photographs show that the British are using some of them now for the same purpose."

No Obstruction Stops Them.

Mr. Baker said he did not know how many of the 1,000 tractors sent to England had been armored and put in service as land battleships, nor did he know what equipment the British War Office had placed upon cars to be used in this work.

"It is true," said Mr. Baker, "that these tractors can go ahead over almost anything or through almost anything. They can straddle a trench, go through a swamp, roll over logs, or climb through craters like a ground juggernaut. It looks uncanny to see them crawl along the ground just like a huge caterpillar. In a thick forest, if they encounter trees they could not brush out of their way they could easily be used to uproot them and clear their own paths."

Mr. Baker said the tractors sent to England weigh about 18,000 pounds each, develop 120-horse power and are built of steel. The caterpillar feature, he explained, is of the utmost importance. Speaking broadly, the tractor crawls on two belts, with corrugated surfaces, on either side of the body. The corrugated surface is on the ground. On the inside of the belts, on each side of the body, are two lines of steel rails, making four lines in all. These rails are in short sections, jointed, and operate over a cogged mechanism that actually lays them down with their belt attachment as the tractor moves ahead and picks them up again, so that the car runs on its own self-made track continuously. The short joints in the rails make it easy to turn to right or left.

Wheel Trucks Support Body.

The body is supported by trucks with five wheels, something like small railroad trucks. These wheels never touch the ground, but run upon the steel rails. In the ordinary tractor about seven feet of belt and rails is on the ground at one time.

Mr. Baker said that the machine would bridge any trench that was not wider than the length of track it laid on the ground at one time. The "bow" might hit the far side of the trench far below

SOMME ATTACKS GAIN FOR ALLIES

FRENCH TAKE DENIECOURT

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Again the Allies attacked the German lines on the Somme today and made substantial gains.

The largest success of the day was achieved by the British troops, who captured a heavily fortified work between Ginchy and Bouleaux Wood, known as the "quadrilateral," and were thereby enabled to advance their line there to a depth of a thousand yards on a one-mile front.

Progress was made north of Flers also after the repulse of German counterattacks.

The French troops edged in closer to Combles, taking trenches to the south only 200 metres from the village.

South of the Somme the troops of General Foch swept over Deniécourt, which had been completely encircled last night. Desperate fighting continues in that vicinity.

The Germans lost heavily in several counterattacks north and south of the Somme last night, according to the Paris day bulletin. The French, it is said, maintained the ground recently won, and made further progress near Clery and Berny.

The night report of the British War Office says:

> South of the Ancre our troops made another important advance today. A strongly fortified German work situated between Bouleaux Wood and Ginchy, known as "the Quadrilateral," which hitherto resisted our efforts, has fallen completely into our hands. As a result of its capture our line has been advanced to a depth of about 1,000 yards along a mile front.
>
> Seven machine guns and numerous prisoners were taken in the course of this highly successful operation.
>
> Enemy counterattacks north of Flers were driven back with loss, and we made progress. Hostile troops massing for a counterattack at Les Boeufs and Morval were caught by our artillery and dispersed.
> Besides the guns already reported since the morning of the 15th, we have taken five heavy howitzers, two field guns, three heavy and three light trench mortars, and a number of machine guns. The total number of prisoners taken in the last twenty-four hours is 10 officers and 500 men.
>
> There was considerable aerial activity yesterday. Several enemy machines were driven down. Four of our machines are missing.

British Gain at Thiepval.

The day report of the British War Office says:

> The general situation continues unchanged.
> South of the Ancre we improved our position north of Martinpuich. East of Courcelette a minor attack made last night upon elements of enemy trenches was entirely successful. Our line has been advanced appreciably at this point.
>
> West of Mouquet Farm the enemy entered one of our trenches under cover of heavy shelling, but was counterattacked immediately and driven out with loss.

BULGARS FLEE IN DISORDER

GREEKS JOIN IN FIGHTING

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATHENS, Sept. 17, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—News of the greatest importance has reached me from the Greco-Serbian frontier. The Serbians, French, and Russians are all following up their successes of the last few days in magnificent fashion and the Bulgar retreat is developing into a disastrous rout. As I wire, the allied advance parties must be within sight of Monastir, possession of which will place the whole of the enemy's line in a critical position.

The Serbians kept up their forward movement splendidly. It was impossible for the Bulgars to stand before their steady advance. The enemy tried to make a stand on the right bank of the Cerna, at the southern bend of the great loop made by that river. Their effort failed completely, and this morning the victorious Serbs forded the river in the neighborhood of Brod, and are still advancing rapidly, thus threatening Monastir from the southeast.

General Cordonnier at Florina.

Further to the left the Russians and French also are doing well. Immediately the Russians had occupied Florina, General Cordonnier and staff arrived there and made the town their headquarters. The French commander at once issued orders that the pursuit should be continued without a halt, so that the enemy would not have time to throw up lines of defense. Consequently, the pursuit of the Bulgars continued all last night, and they were unable to re-form.

An attempt to stem the allied advance was made on the Cerna River, but the French and Russian forces, like the Serbs, further downstream, drove through the Bulgar lines and greatly hastened their retreat, which is now proceeding in disorder. My information is to the effect that the heavy defeat inflicted on the enemy enables General Cordonnier to threaten Monastir seriously, a position from which the Allies will be able to turn the Bulgarian right flank.

Late this afternoon the Bulgars were endeavoring to make a stand on the Knali line, which is within the Serbian frontier. It would appear, however, that they are in great risk of being outflanked there on their right. The fall of Monastir is expected tomorrow or the following day.

Large numbers of prisoners were taken during these operations. Many of them arrived at Kosani today. They complain bitterly against their officers, especially against the Germans, who, they say, treated and led them badly.

The first Greek soldiers to shed their blood for the allied cause and in defense of their fatherland reached Kosani today. They belong to the First Regiment of Greek Volunteers, commanded by Lieut. Col. Gravanis, a Greek officer. The men were wounded in the last fights before Florina, which resulted in the capture of Ekchisu. They fought splendidly, and the commander of the division is loud in his praise. He expressed his high appreciation of Colonel Gravanis's fine leadership.

Tonight the artillery is reported very active on the heights beyond Florina and around the village of Armenochori. The reply of the Bulgar artillery is weak, and tomorrow undoubtedly will see an emphatic continuance of the Allies' advance.

Official Story of the Fighting.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—After a continuous battle of nearly twenty-four hours the town of Florina and Florina station, just south of the Serbian border in Western Macedonia, have been carried with the bayonet by the combined French and Russian forces forming the extreme left wing of the allied front and the Bulgarians are retreating in disorder toward Monastir. Serbian troops also have gained successes in the region of Lake Ostrovo, capturing the Bulgarian first line trenches at Kaimakialan.

Details of these victories are contained in the statement issued by the French War Office today, the text of which follows:

> East of the Cerna Serbian troops have reached the approaches to Mount Vetrinik and repulsed violent Bulgarian attacks. Taken under barrage and machine-gun fire, enemy contingents suffered heavy losses. Further west Serbian detachments continue to advance despite the difficulty of the ground, and have with a single rush carried along the crest of Kaimakialan the first Bulgarian line, which was strongly organized and defended by numerous wire entanglements. Enemy counterattacks launched during the night were repulsed completely.
>

After a desperate struggle lasting through the whole day of the 17th and all of the following night and despite the desperate resistance of the Bulgarians, who delivered a series of counterattacks and cavalry charges, our troops gained a brilliant victory. The town of Florina was carried by assault at 10 o'clock this morning by French troops and is entirely in our power. The enemy is retiring in disorder in the direction of Monastir.

Comparative quiet prevails along the British front, the War Office announced this afternoon in the following statement:

Except for artillery and patrol activity there have been no developments on our Struma or Doiran fronts.

Bulgars Say They Repulsed Attacks.

SOFIA, Sept. 18, (via London.)—An attack made by Entente forces in the Struma Valley, on the Macedonian front, was repulsed by the Bulgarians, it was announced officially today. The statement follows:

The troops on our right wing fought a stubborn battle south of Lerine throughout Saturday. There was lively artillery firing. Night attacks made by the enemy were repulsed.

In the Moglenica Valley and on the right bank of the Vardar calm prevails. On the left bank of the Vardar there was violent cannonading. A weak attack by the enemy west of Doldjeli was beaten back by our fire. We captured three machine guns and took several dozen prisoners.

On the Belaslutza front calm prevails. In the Struma Valley, after strong artillery preparation, the enemy attempted an infantry attack along the front of the villages of Komarlan, Osman-Kamila, and Djamawhale, but was counterattacked and thrown back on the right bank of the Struma.

On the Aegean coast the enemy's cruisers are active.

According to Reuter's Saloniki correspondent the Bulgarians, in extending their line so far south as the region of Lake Ostrovo with limited forces, played a bold but dangerous game. Success would have compromised the whole allied line, but lack of success was bound to prove costly by jeopardizing the whole Bulgarian right.

The first wavering among the Bulgarians, says the dispatch, was caused by the unexpected pressure of the French and Russians on their extreme flank, and the Serbians, profiting by this indecision, attacked energetically on the 12th and 13th. At first the Serbian infantry made little impression on the well-intrenched Bulgarians, but after a strong bombardment with high explosives the Serbians carried line after line of trenches, compelling the Bulgarians to abandon the whole of their advanced position along the Malkanidze range, with thirty-two guns, including two heavy guns. The whole Bulgarian right wing fell back and the Allies obtained command of the ranges dominating the Florina plain.

BERLIN, Sept. 18, (via London.)—This bulletin was given out today by the War Office:

Macedonian front: Several isolated attacks of the enemy on the front between Prespa Lake and the Vardar were without success.

GREEKS CLAMOR FOR WAR.

Island Populations Appeal to King to Save Nation and Throne.

PARIS, Sept. 18.—The populations of Mytilene and Lemnos have addressed appeals to King Constantine, beseeching him to adopt a national policy and save the nation and his throne, says a dispatch to the Havas Agency from Athens.

"Colonel Lelakis, who is now at Saloniki," says the correspondent, "declares that Commander Hadjopoulos of the Kavala garrison announced to the officers there that Field Marshal von Hindenburg had assured him that the Greek Army had been made prisoner as a result of Bulgaria's demand. Former Premier Venizelos wept on learning that the colors of a certain regiment at Kavala had fallen into the hands of the Bulgarians."

ATHENS, Sept. 16, (via London, Sept. 18—Delayed.)—The first boatload of Greek soldiers from Kavala arrived here today. The men marched through the streets cheering King Constantine and crying, "Down with the Bulgars!"

The demand for war is growing rapidly among the people. Even the anti-Venizelos press plans an active pro-war campaign, which will be opened tomorrow.

There was much excitement at the British Legation today when a Greek officer who applied for permission to go to Andros, feeling that he had not received the consideration due his rank, called out the Greek guard.

SEES SIGNIFICANCE IN GERMAN SILENCE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Attention is called by a British official to the fact that on Sept. 7 the German Official Staff announced that "it would no longer record in its bulletins operations of a secondary importance." The announcement was made toward the end of what is regarded here as the worst week the German armies had had since the first week in July. Guillemont, Falfemont Farm, Leuze Wood, and more than 1,000 prisoners had fallen to the British, who had just captured all that remained of the German second line of defense from Mouquet Farm to the junction with the French. Ginchy was on the point of falling. The French had already taken Le Forest, Clery, Soyecourt, and Chilly, with 700 prisoners, and thirty-six guns, many of them heavy.

The British official comments:

"At this point it seemed desirable to the German General Staff to distinguish between important events which should be published and secondary events which should not be judged by any other standards of importance than those of the German General Staff.

"Which of the changes in the war map does the General Staff consider important enough to be mentioned? it is asked here. It certainly admitted promptly enough the loss of Guillemont and Bouchavesnes. It took an extra day to deliberate before deciding to mention the loss of Chilly, and two days before mentioning the loss of Ginchy. In the case of Ginchy it tried to conceal this postponement of admission by saying on Sept. 12 that the British took the village on the morning of Sept. 11, whereas they really took it very quickly and completely on the afternoon of Sept. 9.

No such statement as that mentioned by the British official as having been made by the German Headquarters' Staff on Sept. 7 was contained in the German official bulletin as cabled to this country.

Newspaper Assails German Reports.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 19.—The Daily Mail says this morning:

"The German communiqué, printed today, is a perfect example of the method recently adopted in German official reports. That method is to be silent as to British successes or to represent the British attacks as 'bloodily repulsed,' while the French are given credit for their successes and praised for their bravery.

"Thus today the communiqué impudently asserts that the battle north of the Somme 'terminated favorably to us,' whereas south of the Somme, where the French are attacking, it says that positions had to be abandoned. On Sunday in the same style it declared that 'north of the Somme all attacks were bloodily repulsed.' On Thursday it pretended that 'an attempt by a considerable English force to capture, by means of an encircling movement, our salient south of Thiepval failed. Strong and bravely conducted French infantry attacks failed with very heavy losses.'"

On the left bank of the Meuse (Verdun front) we captured a German trench on the southern slopes of Dead Man's Hill, some prisoners remaining in our hands.

The day report of the French War Office reads:

To the north of the River Somme we have occupied a trench to the east of Clery, and repulsed the counterattacks of the enemy at this point. To the south of the river the enemy last night delivered several counterattacks against our trenches located to the east of Berny and to the south of Deniécourt. In this latter region the Germans delivered no fewer than three violent attacks. Each one was repulsed with heavy losses for the enemy.

To the east of Berny, as well as immediately to the east of Deniécourt, we have made further progress. The latter point is completely encircled.

The number of prisoners, counted up to the present time, reached 1,200. Also ten machine guns of the enemy are now in our hands.

According to information obtained from some of these prisoners, the losses inflicted during the fighting of yesterday in the vicinity of Berny upon the Tenth Division of German Reserves and upon the One Hundred and Twentieth Reserve Regiment was enormous. Two battalions of the Thirty-eighth Regiment, Eleventh Division were almost annihilated by our artillery.

There has been nothing of importance to report from the remainder of the front.

Flight Adjutant Tarascon has brought down his fifth enemy machine. This aeroplane fell near Deniécourt. The same day Flight Lieutenant Huerteaux brought down his seventh German aeroplane.

French air squadrons have conducted various bombardments. Twelve shells have been thrown down on the railroad station at Nantillois, and thirty-three missiles thrown down at Villers-Carborel and Horghy, from an altitude of 800 yards, caused serious damage.

Berlin Announces Loss of Villages.

BERLIN, Sept. 18, (via London.)—Abandonment by the Germans of the villages of Berny and Deniécourt, together with positions between Barleux and Vermandovillers, south of the River Somme, is reported in today's official statement, which reads:

Battles continue both in the west and in the east.

Army group of Prince Rupprecht: The mighty Somme battles, carried out on a front of forty-five kilometres, (tweny-eight miles,) from Thiepval to the south of Vermandovillers, led to extraordinarily bitter fighting. Those north of the Somme terminated favorably to us.

Those south of the river resulted in the abandonment of completely razed portions of positions between Barleux and Vermandovillers, together with the villages of Berny and Deniécourt.

Our brave troops have given splendid proof on their unshakable resistance and their spirit of self-sacrifice. Westphalian Infantry Regiment No. 13 especially distinguished itself south of Bouchavesnes.

FRENCH GAINS MADE ON METHODICAL PLAN

First One Wing Moves, Then Another—Difficult Positions Are Turned.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 18.—Dispatches from the Somme describe yesterday's battle as one of the hardest fought since the allied offensive began, owing to the exceptional strength of the German positions and the character of the dugouts, which were frequently over thirty feet deep.

Despite the heroic resistance of the Bavarian troops, who, according to eyewitnesses, were superior to the Prussian Guard, defending the north of Somme positions, won last week, the troops attained their objectives, and during the subsequent counterattacks, which were exceptionally costly to the Germans, made good their boast that throughout this offensive everything won has been held.

The strategic value of the gains, though less than those achieved last week north of the river, were nevertheless considerable. The important plateau, three miles long and a mile and a half deep, of which Chaulnes is the centre, is now under French fire from three sides, and the capture of Berny, a stronghold covering a series of ravines which run down to the river at Briost, cuts the Germans around Peronne to the north from those on the Chaulnes plateau to the south.

One can see that, despite German assertions that the offensive is futile, the French are pursuing a methodical and predetermined plan with success. First one wing moves, then the centre, and then the other wing. Positions, too strong to be taken by direct attack, are gradually surrounded or turned until they become untenable. Most important of all, the French losses are small, thanks to the artillery and the command of the air, while those of the German are reported appalling.

Prisoners complain bitterly of being hurried to the front in trains or automobiles and flung into the fight without guides or sufficient indications of the position they are to hold in the sector, where for the most part every trench and every landmark has been blasted into nothingness by the hurricane of French shells.

Every day, according to the view here, the Germans' situation becomes worse as the French advance forces them to exchange the comparatively safe and comfortable underground fortresses, constructed at leisure, for horrible shelltorn ditches which are hardly adequate to protect against shrapnel or quickfirers.

The desperation with which the Germans fought yesterday is explained by the fact that the Germans were still holding there some positions that formed part of the original front, and their resistance was steeled by their indisposition to fight in a comparatively open country. But they had to yield, and the French have driven still another wedge into the circuit of fortresses defending Peronne.

The battle began at 2:30 P. M. on a front of nearly eight miles against part of the original German second position, between Barleux and Vermandovillers. Around the latter village the struggle was especially keen, and the defenders died almost to a man rather than surrender.

The French found evidence of the terrible effect of the artillery fire. In a little wood southeast of Berny they literally had to force their way through heaps of corpses. But the Bavarians returned to the charge after each repulse. No sooner was a position won by the French than a counterstroke followed immediately. It was then that the French reaped the benefit of close co-ordination between the artillery and the infantry. Again and again the attackers were cut to pieces by the curtain of fire, which passed over the heads of the French defenders so close that no other gunners in the world would have dared to fire.

The capture of Berny was the finest thing of the day, from the French point of view. In two bodies, charging, one from Estrées Road, the other from the road to Belloy, the French made a junction in the village itself, near the market place, thus surrounding the mass of the defenders. At the same time another French regiment put strong pressure on the German line between Berny and Deniécourt to prevent the advance of strong reinforcements with which the German commander hoped to relieve Berny.

Thanks to this regiment and to the furious cannonade of heavy artillery against the German batteries across the river on Mont Saint Quentin the combat in Berny was brief and at 3:30 o'clock the survivors laid down their arms, among them being the commander of the beaten battalion, who broke his sword in the bitterness of defeat.

The result of this success is that the French were enabled completely to surround Deniécourt, the château park of which, belonging to Comte de Kergorlay, has been transformed by the Germans into a labyrinth, which has hitherto proved a serious obstacle. According to late information all the German efforts to disengage Deniécourt have failed.

CALLS FRIDAY'S STROKE THE BIGGEST YET MADE

LONDON, Sept. 18.—A British official communication issued this evening gives a more complete account of the fighting in the Somme region of France on Friday and Saturday. The communication concludes by saying:

"The result of the fighting is of great importance, and is probably the most effective blow which has yet been dealt the enemy by the British troops. The damage to his morale is probably of greater consequence than the seizure of dominating positions and the capture of between 4,000 and 5,000 prisoners.

"To date since the 1st of July the British forces alone on the Somme battle front have met and engaged thirty-five German divisions, of which twenty-nine have already been defeated and withdrawn exhausted.

"During the last week in the battle area, only fourteen hostile aeroplanes have been reported as crossing our lines, while our machines have made between 2,000 and 3,000 flights across the enemy's lines."

COMBLES WELL FORTIFIED.

But Further Allied Advance Will Probably Compel Surrender.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 19.—A dispatch to The Times from Paris says:

"On the French front the great points of interest now become Combles, north of the river, and Barleux, in the south. Barleux has been under direct fire of the French since yesterday's capture of Berny. Combles is so surrounded, north, west, and south, that there remains only an opening of less than two miles to the east through which it can be supplied. The town is thoroughly well fortified and the château possesses vast underground caverns, extending under the village, over an area of nearly 400 yards, so that it is unlikely that any direct assault will be attempted.

"When the British, advancing from Ginchy, get to Morval the garrison of Combles will not have much else to do but tighten their belts and make up their minds to surrender."

TURKS ATTACK IN ARMENIA.

Claim Success, but Petrograd Says They Were Repulsed.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 17, (via London, Sept. 18.)—A successful Turkish surprise attack against the Russians in Southern Armenia is announced by the War Office in today's official statement, which says:

"On the right wing a Turkish surprise attack was crowned with success. On the left wing we pressed back an enemy reconnoitring detachment, inflicting losses."

PETROGRAD, Sept. 18, (via London.)—"Attempts by the Turks to make an attack in the region of the village of Adisa, on the Caucasian front, were frustrated by our fire," says the official announcement issued here today.

SANK 20 SHIPS IN CHANNEL.

BERLIN, Sept. 18, (via Sayville.)—Figures on the number and tonnage of ships sunk by German submarines recently, given out by the Overseas News Agency today, supplement yesterday's figures showing 53 hostile and neutral vessels destroyed in the period from Sept. 3 to Sept. 13.

"In the English Channel," says the news agency statement, "German submarines in this period sank 20 additional hostile and neutral vessels with a total tonnage of 36,900. The neutral ships were destroyed because they carried contraband and in view of the impossibility of bringing them to a German port.

"From Sept. 3 to Sept. 13 a total of 53 ships, with an aggregate tonnage of 74,088, were sunk by our submarines in the English Channel and in the Atlantic."

Belgian Coal Miners on Strike.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 18.—The Maastricht newspaper Les Nouvelles says a general strike of miners throughout the Belgian coalfields is in progress. The miners are asking for an increase in wages commensurate with the high price of food.

The War Situation

BY THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Little reference has been made recently to the character of the Allies' campaign at Saloniki or to what they have done since the offensive movement has started. As a matter of fact, doubt is again cast on the general belief that the real offensive has yet begun. The French have done some little fighting where their line joins up with the British near the Doiran station. The British have been skirmishing on the Struma, crossing and recrossing the river, but do not appear to have made any consistent effort to advance.

As a matter of fact, it is not altogether apparent just what function this part of the Saloniki forces is to play. The line of the Struma is the least probable line the Allies will take in their efforts to advance. There is no railroad running up the valley. The only means of transportation is by a dirt road, and the country throughout is the tangle of high mountains of Southern Bulgaria. As far as the situation appears at present, the right wing of the allied forces will be used principally to guard the flank on that side while they move forward.

Along the Vardar the fighting has been similar in character to that which has occurred on the Struma. The Vardar has every advantage for a line of attack which the Struma lacks. It passes, of course, through heavy mountains for a part of the way—as far north as the Demirkapu station on the railroad to Uskub. After that point the slopes are more gentle and the country generally much more open.

All of the determined, sustained fighting that has yet been done is by the Serbs, who have been carrying on a persistent offensive for some days with excellent results. It will be remembered that in the movement which Bulgaria began on her own initiative and carried on alone the Serbs were driven back far south of the Florina station on a front between Lake Ostrovo and Little Presba Lake. But little opposition was offered to this advance, the Serbs retiring without making any effort to halt the Bulgarian advance. When it seemed that the general offensive had started, the Serbs struck first and hardest. Not only was the Bulgarian force halted, but the Serbs broke their line and drove them back over ten miles.

The terrain on the Serbian front is more favorable to military operations than that in any other part of the Saloniki position. The valley of the Cerna River, in which are found both Florina and Monastir, is very wide, the floor of it forming the plain of Florina. It is flanked on either side by sloping foothills which rise gradually to high summits, but only at a considerable distance. For this reason there is a tendency to consider the line of the Monastir-Prilep road as a probable line of advance, although there are no railroads running beyond Monastir.

Be that as it may, it is a fact that the Serbian advance has been all at the beginning of this valley and has been uniformly successful. The Bulgarians have, as a matter of fact, been able to oppose no serious obstacle to the Serbian movement and have lost, as a consequence, very heavily in men and guns. The Serbian objective is, of course, Monastir, which lies only about ten miles north of Florina, and which is the terminus of the railroad running north from the latter point. So far the Serbs are still just about this distance from Monastir. They have, however, advanced their line close to and parallel to the Serbian-Greek border along the line of the Brod River. Florina is reported officially to have been retaken, and the entire Florina plain to be in the control of the Allies. If the Bulgarian losses have been as great as has been indicated by the reports, there is a strong probability that the Serbs will continue to advance at least as far as Monastir.

From the standpoint of the Teutonic allies, the Saloniki position is weak in that it offers such meagre facilities for reinforcing such part of the front as may be in need of aid at any particular time. Just as the Allies' lines of advance are restricted by topographical features, so are the Teuton lines of supplies and of communication. There is no central point from which troops can be distributed and sent to the various parts of the front where they are needed. This confronts the Teutonic leaders with an entirely new problem, as it to a certain extent nullifies such advantages as their interior position gives them. From a military standpoint the Allies' general offense, when it gets into full swing, will prove one of the most interesting features of the war.

While the fighting in the west is going all against them, the Germans are making much of their advance in the Rumanian province of Dobrudja. It is still difficult to see how this has yet reached the stage where it is of more than passing interest or importance. Dobrudja, it is true, is a wealthy agricultural country, as is all the flat country bordering on the Black Sea. In fact, the so-called Black Sea belt is the most productive grain area in the world. But this has but a slight effect on the military situation. With the gateways from Russia flung wide open, the loss of such grain as might be produced in Dobrudja is of minor significance.

The whole scheme of things in Dobrudja centres about the railroad from Constanza through Cernavoda to Bucharest. As long as this road is not disturbed Rumania is safe. This road possesses two points of great value. The only bridge across the Danube in all of Dobrudja is found at Cernavoda, where the river is crossed by the Constanza railroad. This is truly a vital point, and if the crossing is forced by the Germans and Bulgars we may regard the invasion of Rumania as having begun. The second point of interest is the fact that the terminus of the railroad is Constanza, the only Black Sea port in Dobrudja which has railroad connections, and consequently the port which could be of the greatest use in the landing of Russian troops via the Black Sea route.

Except for the future effect the Teuton advance may have on the Constanza-Cernavoda line, the invasion of Rumania so far amounts to nothing. At present the situation seems to be approaching a crisis. Both Berlin and Bucharest report the heavy reinforcing of the Russian and Rumanian forces, and a definite line has been established about ten miles south of and parallel to the railroad. Here is where the battle will take place which will decide the issue of the possession of the railroad. From the right bank of the Danube a ridge arises steeply and stretches out eastward as far as the railroad. From the railroad it tapers down to the sea in gradual steps.

It is along this ridge that the Rumanian and Russian forces are forming. The number of troops engaged on either side is not known, nor can even approximate figures be given, as there is no basis for an estimate. Even though we are in the dark to such an extent, this battle should prove extremely interesting, as it is unique in that it is an open pitched battle in fairly open country without the elaborate trench defenses which have been constructed on other fronts. The Teutons will be at a great disadvantage from the outset, as the line is short, permitting an easy defense, and it will be a difficult matter to guard their left flank, which will be under fire from the opposite bank of the river. This will make it extremely difficult for them to manoeuvre their artillery near the river or to maintain anything like a permanent line.

The next few days should see these forces in contact and the preliminaries of the battle under way.

GERMANS HIT HARD TO RECOUP LOSSES

BRITISH ON A STRONG LINE

Artillery, Firmly Planted on High Ridge, Commands Entire Countryside.

By PHILIP GIBBS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Sunday, Sept. 17 (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—The Germans made a desperate attempt to organize counterattacks to thrust back the British lines from the ground gained since Friday morning. They failed. The British hold all the ground captured in the general assault, and yesterday and today they have gone further forward, winning new and important positions.

Mouquet Farm, for which the Australians fought with the most stubborn courage and which they entered several times with their patrols, was taken last night by a swift and successful assault. To the left of that, below Thiepval and to the east of that stronghold, the attack, beginning last Thursday on the fortified position known as the Wunderwerk, a curious and villainous system of trenches and dugouts, has been a brilliant success and has extended the British gain by a mile of frontage along the Danube trench. We have a strong flank line securing Courcelette, and we have pushed out beyond Martinpuich toward Gancourt l'Abbaye and beyond Flers toward Gueudecourt.

Today has not been so sensational as Tuesday, but solid progress has been made and the Germans have been kept nervous. They have been hurrying up reserves from Le Sars and Miraumont and places far back behind their lines. They were reported to be moving up yesterday by motor transport, and the British long range guns "dealt with them," to use a grim phrase of one of the artillery officers. They dealt with them again when they tried to form for an attack against the defences which the British has thrown out around Courcelette and Martinpuich, and they have not been able to come within rifle range.

The German losses certainly were very frightful; eight to one is the estimate of one of the British staff officers. Their dead lie solid in certain parts of the battlefront. There are fields of horror here around High Wood and above Delville Wood and not all the shells which I saw slashing these rows of tree stumps today will give the Germans back those men who were being buried by high explosives.

Across the ridge when the wind blows there comes a dreadful miasma. It is the smell of corruption from those heaps of death. The whole of the great stretch of battlefield along the high ridge to Delville Wood and Ginchy is one great graveyard, and looking across it today as I stood among the shell craters and old German trenches and litter of wide destruction, this great, desolate horror was an evil panorama which chilled one's spirit.

The Germans are flinging over heavy crumps and black shrapnel, but their shooting seemed to me wild and without definite targets. The reason of it is clear. In taking High Ridge the British have the observation which once was theirs, and it is the British artillery which now has the supreme advantage. It has made the most of it.

When the full history of all these great batles in Picardy comes to be written one chapter must be given to the work of the gunners. They have been wonderful—wonderful in science and in spirit. The bombardment of Sept. 15 was the most remarkable achievement ever done by the British artillery and not surpassed, I should say, by any army. Every detail of it had been planned beforehand, every "heavy" had its special objective and its own timetable, working exactly with the infantry, concentrating upon the German trenches and strong points, barraging their lines of communication.

Following in the tracks of those motor monsters whose amazing adventures I described in my last dispatch, and cooperating with the air service to reach out to distant targets, the field batteries were marvelously audacious in taking up new positions and the forward observing officers were gallant in getting up to high ground as soon as the infantry had taken it and registering their batteries from these new viewpoints.

I heard today the whole artillery scheme of one corps and the scientific precision with which the German defenses were destroyed. It made me shiver as in the presence of high intelligence, distributing death on a great scale by means of minute calculations of time and space, which, indeed, is exactly the truth.

The German artillery is still very strong, and it would be nonsense to depreciate his prodigious gun power, but some at least of his batteries are in a perilous position now. The British are able to observe them, and from my own observation of their shell fire today it seems to me they are shifting them further back. They had not shifted them when the attack began Friday morning, and it is remarkable that within two minutes of the attack they concentrated a particularly fierce fire on High Wood, where the British are advancing.

It is possible that their sausage balloons observed the approach of the "tanks" and had seen them behind the British trenches, like ichthyosauri, waiting for their morning meal, but, as I have previously hinted, there is sound evidence for the belief that they had prepared a great counterattack along a wide front at the very time the British attack was launched. This accounts for the great mass of men killed in their lines and for the large number of prisoners who fell into British hands.

The capture of Mouquet farm last night was made by a dash across a short stretch of no man's land. The garrison there retreated into a tunneled dugout, which had at least two entrances, and showed no willingness to surrender, maintaining a rifle fire from loopholes after they were surrounded. The southern entrance to this underground structure was blown in by high explosives, while men kept guard of the other entry, waiting for any Germans who might come up and surrender.

This capture of Mouquet farm, a stick or two above the heap of broken brickwork, has made the position of Thiepval still more closely gripped (the garrison there holds out stubbornly in its tunnelled corridors) and helped to forward the assault upon the Danube trench launched yesterday with absolute success. This carried further the operation begun Thursday.

The British troops made a brilliant assault upon an intricate system of earthworks to the south of Thiepval. On the left, running southward down the ridge, is an extraordinary V-shaped wedge with an open end. This position was not attacked, but the British men drove straight up to the left of it upon the "Wunderwerk," which is one of the nests of dugouts upon which the Germans have lavished all skill in digging and tunneling and strengthening and furnishing in the old days of ordinary trench warfare.

It was no longer a "wunder werk" when the British rushed upon it. The whirlwind bombardment which preceded them and the heavy shell fire for weeks had broken the concrete emplacements, flung up the earth with deep shell pits, so that it was merely a part of the general chaos existing on these battlefields. Five German officers and 116 men were still alive there and they surrendered instantly.

"You were on us like the wind," said one of these officers afterward, "we had no time to defend ourselves."

Other men fled from neighboring shell craters, but ran straight into the British curtain fire and fell.

Counterattacks were attempted yesterday by the Fifth Reserve Regiment of Guards, but was not carried through with resolution. The first wave of men came a hundred yards or so toward the British, then hesitated, flung their bombs, which fell short, and ran back. On the left they were bolder and braver, and a very long and stubborn fight took place with bombs, ending in complete victory for the British after they had flung 1,500 hand grenades.

Northeast of Flers other counterattacks were attempted yesterday, but the British troops, who were advancing toward Gueudecourt, went right through them and over them with irresistible spirit, checked only by concealed machine guns in a harvest field on their wing.

In Bouleaux wood, to the north of Leuze wood, there had been fierce hand-to-hand fighting, and in the centre of it is an unfortunate tank, one of the few casualties among the armored monsters, which lies with the nose in the earth, forming a barricade between opposing bombers. The general situation along the attacking front leaves the initiative in British hands and reveals the temporary demoralization of the German troops and command.

One cannot say more than that the Germans have had a hard blow, but they have reserves of strength, which are controlled by cool brains behind the lines.

LOSE 41,014 OFFICERS.

British Casualty List Adds 603 More Dead in Latter Half of August

LONDON, Sept. 8, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—Officers' casualty lists for the last fortnight of August contain the names of 603 officers killed, 1,396 wounded, and 94 missing, a total of 2,093. This brings the losses of officers in the British Army since the commencement of hostilities to 41,014, of which 12,045 have been killed or have died of wounds, 26,076 were wounded, and 2,893 are missing.

During the fortnight Brig. Gen. Potter was wounded, Brig. Gen. Buckle killed, and five Lieutenant Colonels were killed.

BEAT RUSSIANS BACK FROM HALICZ AGAIN

CAPTURE 3,500 PRISONERS

Drives by Czar's Troops on Vladimir-Volynski and Sereth River Fronts Also Repulsed.

BERLIN, Sept. 18, (via London.)—A German attack against the Russians who are attempting to capture the Galician town of Halicz resulted in the defeat of the Russians, who lost the greater portion of the territory gained on Saturday, the War Office announced today. In addition to inflicting heavy casualties on the Russians, the Germans took 3,500 prisoners and sixteen machine guns. The announcement follows:

Army group of Prince Leopold—West of Lutsk our effective curtain of fire impeded an attempt of the enemy to launch a rush attack against the troops of General von Marwitz. North of Czelvov a feeble attack was repulsed easily. Many thousands of Russian dead cover the battlefield of Saturday.

Between the Sereth and the Stripa repeated Russian attacks against the troops under General von Eben resulted in the same complete failure and heavy losses for the Russians as on the preceding day.

Army group of Archduke Charles Francis: In heavy fighting west of the Zlota Lipa Turkish troops, supported by their allied comrades, successfully defended themselves against superior forces of the enemy. Hostile detachments which penetrated their lines were driven out.

German troops under the command of General von Gerok made counter-attacks on both sides of the Narayuvka, (a tributary of the Gnila Lipa.) The Russians were unable to stem the advance of these troops. A greater portion of the territory lost Saturday is again in our hands. Not taking into account the heavy casualties of the enemy in killed or wounded, he lost 3,500 prisoners and sixteen machine guns.

In the Carpathians Russian attacks were repulsed.

Vienna Tells of Russian Failures.

VIENNA, Sept. 18, (via London.)—The following official statement concerning operations on the Russian front was issued today from General Headquarters:

Front of Archduke Charles Francis: In the Carpathians the enemy attacked between three lands corner, southwest of Dorna Watra, and Hafniawa at numerous points. The allied troops repulsed him everywhere.

On both sides of the Lipnicadolna a counterattack delivered by the Germans resulted in the almost complete recapture of the positions taken by the enemy Saturday. Northeast of the above mentioned place Ottoman troops with the allies victoriously repulsed strong Russian advances after bitter fighting.

The army of General von Bothmer captured sixteen officers, 4,000 soldiers, and sixteen machine guns.

Front of Prince Leopold: Army of General Count von Boehm-Ermolli.—The enemy yesterday repeated his attacks during the afternoon between Zborow and Perpelniki. The enemy's masses gave way everywhere before the stubborn tenacity of the defenders.

The army of General von Terscztanszky had to repulse only a rather weak advance. Other attempts to attack were frustrated at the very beginning.

Russians Expect Defeat of Bothmer.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 18.—News of a new series of battles in the general neighborhood of Halicz, in Galicia, ends an almost unprecedented period of quiet, extending on all the Russian fronts except that in Asia Minor, where the Turks, without marked success, are steadily repeating their efforts to launch an offensive against the left flank of the Russian Caucasian army.

Thus, after weeks of suspended activity General Brusiloff has energetically resumed his campaign against Lemberg. Halicz, which obstructs the way to that city from the southeast, is again subjected to the most violent pressure by the Russians, who are throwing the most weight of their attack north of Halicz on the Narayuvka River, where they are attempting to cut the railway from Halicz along the Narayuvka to Podvysoke.

It is believed by Russian officials here that the left flank of the army of the German General, Count von Bothmer, will soon be obliged to give way before the fierceness of the Russian onslaught, leaving the way to Halicz open from the north.

It is noteworthy that in the first of the present series of battles, in which the number of German prisoners taken argues defeat for the entire German division, all three arms of the Russian forces contributed equally to the result. Russian cavalry particularly distinguished itself by executing a brilliant irresistable charge, reminiscent of old-time warfare.

RUMANIAN GUNS SINK TROOP-LADEN BARGES

Teutons Report That Supports Have Reached Russo-Rumanian Army in Dobrudja.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Rumanian Artillery commanding the Danube sank barges filled with enemy troops, according to the official statement issued today from Bucharest. It reads:

On the north and northwest fronts there were no important engagements. South of Sibia (Hermannstadt) we took forty prisoners and two machine guns. In the Valley of the Streeul there were violent combats.

On the south front, on the Danube, our artillery sank barges carrying enemy soldiers.

In Dobrudja there were artillery duels. South of Kobadin a battery of Russian mortars silenced the enemy's heavy artillery.

the top, and the "stern" would undoubtedly sink a little, but the tenacity of the tractor, he declared, would enable it to go ahead and climb out.

The width of track used on the machines sent to England, Mr. Baker said, was 24 inches. He declared that the ground pressure is about three pounds per square inch where a 30-inch track is used, or less than that of the foot of either man or horse. He suggested that the British authorities probably had lengthened the track on the tractors used in trench work, giving them even greater power to surmount obstacles.

"We've been making these tractors for the British Government for a long time," said Mr. Baker, "and have not talked much about it. Since their recent use in storming trenches I have seen published reports that led me to believe the secret would come out anyway pretty soon, so I decided it might as well be told now."

Although he would not discuss the matter, it was understood the United States War Department is experimenting with armored tractors like those now in use on the British battle line.

HOW THE TRACTOR OPERATES.

They Can Be So Modified as to Cross the Widest Trenches.

Joseph Connah, manager of the New York branch of the Holt Manufacturing Company, confirmed last night the statement of M. M. Baker, the company's Vice President, that the British "tanks" were made out of caterpillar tractors built by the Holt company at Peoria, Ill. Mr. Connah also gave THE TIMES additional information about the latest wonder in scientific warfare.

The British completed car, the American manufacturers believe, is made simply by enlarging the platform on the tractor so that it extends over most of the machinery and furnishes room for machine guns and their crews, and by covering the whole with a tortoise shell of steel armor.

The machine has a fore wheel which is used only for guiding purposes, and indeed in the smaller type of farm tractors is absent. No weight rests on this wheel, and it could be removed altogether without causing the frame of the tractor to dip more than a few inches. The weight is carried on the two caterpillars. These consist of two belts with corrugated surfaces, on the inside of each of which are two lines of steel rails, jointed in short sections and operated by sprocket wheels. As the endless belt turns with the progression of the machine the forward sprocket wheel lays down the track, and the rear one picks it up again.

On the rails thus laid down roll the wheels on which the machine is supported—five wheels to a side, on trucks something like miniatures of those used on railroad cars. They run only on the steel rails, and the rails are supported on the belt of steel plates, two feet wide.

Latest Machines 23 Feet Long.

The newest and largest of the machines which are the basis of the "tanks" are about 23 feet long and 9 feet wide over all. The caterpillars, which are well toward the rear, are normally about seven feet long—that is to say, about seven feet of belt and rails are on the ground at one time. But Mr. Connah said that it was a simple matter to lengthen the caterpillar by inserting additional trucks, and that quite conceivably they might have been made almost as long as the frame of the car.

Each of the caterpillars is under independent control, and by starting one while the other is motionless the entire machine can be turned in its own length—a chartcteristic which would account for some of the strange manoeuvres which led observers to describe the tanks as wallowing about, "eating houses and pawing the débris under their bellies," and so on.

The pressure on the ground under the caterpillar—the string of steel plates seven feet long and two feet wide on which the entire weight of the machine is supported—is said to be less than that caused by the foot of a horse or even of a man. And owing to the construction and location of the engines the centre of gravity of the whole machine is near the back of the caterpillar and not more than eighteen inches off the ground. For this reason the machine can roll along without danger of tipping over on an almost incredible slope, and it can run considerably more than half its length forward over a chasm without any support at all.

How a "Tank" Crosses a Trench.

When it moves across a trench the front wheel, on which normally no weight rests, crosses first. The forward end of the caterpillar would then move forward over the open part of the trench, and the machine would be supported by the rear of the caterpillar, where most of the weight was concentrated, on one side with the guide wheel forward to act as a steadier in front. Then by the time the rear part of the caterpillar had reached the edge of the trench the forward part would already be across and there would be very little displacement of the machine. In this way the machine could cross a trench almost as wide as the ground length of the caterpillar; and with the prospect that the British have lengthened these for war purposes it should be able to get across almost any trench or shell crater with little difficulty.

The machine has been used to knock down trees before the British thought of making a war chariot out of it. The narrow lumber roads through the Florida woods must be widened for the passage of the tractor, and instead of having men go ahead to cut down trees on either side of the road the caterpillars themselves are run against the trees that are in the way. The cogs on the other side of the track plate take hold of the tree and start to run the caterpillar up the bole, but the weight and the force of the engine are too much for the resistance of the tree, and it snaps off almost immediately.

Can Easily Knock Down Houses.

As to knocking down houses, Mr. Connah said that the ordinary frame of the tractor would easily run through a brick wall. "The machine weighs about 25,000 pounds," he said, "as we ship it over. With the armor and armament it would probably come to about 31,000. Take a machine of this weight and drive it with a motor of not less than 120-horse power and it will take something pretty stout to resist it."

The machine has two speeds—one of about two and a half miles an hour and the other of four. With its ease of direction and management the car, Mr. Connah said, can be used to chase a man around in a field and follow almost at his heels, no matter how he turns.

The armor and armament, it is believed, have been put on the cars by the British Government, and the officials of the Holt Manufacturing Company know nothing about this part of it. It has been suggested, however, that an "apron armor," something like the lid of a dish, put down over the entire vehicle, must have been used, and that the platform on which the operator moves about must have been extended to cover all the machinery. Such an apron armor, said the officers of the company, could be run down to within about six inches of the ground without injuring the mobility of the tractors. But from some of the published descriptions it remains doubtful whether the armor has actually been applied in such a way as to cover the caterpillars. It has been estimated that armor of half-inch steel would be sufficient to turn machine gun and rifle bullets and shell splinters, so that, as the war correspondents report, nothing but a shell striking fairly would put the "tank" out of action.

Austria Tried to Get Some of Them.

For twenty years caterpillars have been used for plowing, digging ditches, breaking or pulling down trees, and other sorts of heavy farm work. Just before the war broke out some of the 75-horse-power model, at that time the largest size made, were bought by the Austrian army for the purpose of dragging heavy artillery and transport wagons, but the Austrian officials who brought an army transport over to take the tractors back were caught here by the outbreak of the war and have been here ever since.

Germany, according to Mr. Baker, had some of them before the war began. The French and Russian Governments have bought many of them, and the British Government has ordered two a day until the end of the war, and may perhaps let further contracts. So far about 1,000 of the machines of this newer and larger model have been delivered to the British.

FIAT FACTORY MADE SOME.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Sept. 18.—John Lurie, Vice President of the Fiat automobile factory here, said tonight that 120 chassis of the huge armored motor trucks used on the western front by the British were built in Poughkeepsie.

"Several months ago," said Mr. Lurie, "the British Government placed an order with this factory for 120 chassis made on our regular stock model, but with refinements and special features according to specifications prepared at our home factory in Turin by our experts and revised by experts of the British Government."

There were many features added to the regular stock specifications, Mr. Lurie explained. The chassis are equipped with reversible steering wheels, that is, they have a steering apparatus at each end, so that they may be driven rapidly in each direction whenever necessary. The engines are four-cylinder regular Fiat type, developing more than eighty horse power. The chassis without the armored top and gun weigh 3,600 pounds, while the armored top and the rapid-firing guns, capable of discharging 800 shots a minute, weigh two tons more.

PREDICTS BATTLE OF "TANKS."

British Correspondent Sees a Great Contest of New Land Dreadnoughts

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 19. — The Times Correspondent at British Headquarters, referring to the part played by tanks, says:

"In one short hour they did more military service, killed more Germans in uniform, and had greater influence on the war than all the Zeppelins have ever done. It may be they will not continue their success indefinitely. The surprise, of course, was a factor in their formidableness.

"It may be that before this war is done we, the Germans and all the Allies alike, shall be building other monsters, huger and each more horrible than the last, till there will be land battles of whole fleets of dreadnoughts and terrestrial monitors, but what is obvious at the moment is we have done it first this time. We have used nothing which is not entirely civilized and in accord with every convention that was ever signed and we have scored heavily."

CREDITS CHURCHILL FOR LAND WARSHIPS

LONDON, Sept. 18.—The British War Minister, David Lloyd George, gives credit to Winston Spencer Churchill, the former First Lord of the Admiralty, for the new armored cars which have appeared in the British lines on the Somme front. In an interview today Mr. Lloyd George said:

"It is really Winston Churchill, more than any one else, to whom credit for the new armored cars is due. He took up with enthusiasm the idea of making them a long time ago and met with many difficulties. He converted me, and at the Ministry of Munitions we went ahead and made them.

"The Admiralty experts were invaluable and gave the greatest possible assistance. They, of course, are experts in the matter of armor plating. Major Stern, business man at the Ministry of Munitions, had charge of the work of getting them built, and he did the task very well. Colonel Swinton (of the Intelligence Department of the General Staff) and others also did valuable work."

Asked for his personal opinion about the cars, the War Minister said:

"We must not expect too much from them, but so far they have done very well and reflect credit on those responsible for them. The enemy has by no means a monopoly on inventive ingenuity."

AUSTRIAN ATTACKS ON CARSO LINE FAIL

ROME, Sept. 18.—The Austrians made persistent efforts to drive the Italians out of their new positions on the Carso Plateau today, but all attacks were repulsed, according to the statement of the War Office tonight. The Italians captured 300 prisoners in these operations.

Italian positions in the Trentino and along the Upper Isonzo were heavily shelled, but no infantry fighting developed. Aeroplanes of both sides were active.

Demonstrations were made by the enemy at several points on the front, generally in the form of violent and prolonged bombardments, on the evening of Sept. 16, on Monte Seluggio, in the Posina Valley, and yesterday on Merzli and Vodil, Monte Nero, between St. Daniele and Volzano, west of Tolmino, in the Plava sector, on the middle Isonzo, and against Gorizia. Everywhere our artillery replied effectively, shelling also the railway line in the Upper Fella and the Toblach Station, scattering troops there.

Yesterday on the Carso the enemy launched persistent attacks against our new positions. Despite their being preceded and supported by an extremely violent bombardment, these attacks were all repulsed. The enemy suffered heavy losses and left in our hands 300 prisoners.

Enemy air raids on the Asiago Plateau, Caoria, Vanoi, Cismon, and in the Biois and Cordevole Valleys are reported. Last night an aeroplane squadron again dropped bombs on Mestre. These raids caused no damage and no casualties.

Two of our aeroplanes dropped bombs on Mattarello and near Trent and forced an enemy seaplane to land. Another squadron of our Caproni battle planes, escorted by Nieuports and chasers, dropped bombs on the stations at Dottegliano and Sooppo, on the Carso, hitting the railway establishments, adjoining stores and water tanks, and trains in the station. All the aeroplanes returned safely, although they were pursued by the enemy and fired on by anti-aircraft batteries.

Positions Maintained, Says Vienna.

VIENNA Sept. 18, (via London.)—The War Office issued the following statement today concerning operations on the Italian front:

Yesterday the Italian third army renewed its attacks against the whole of our front on the Carso plateau. During the last four days' fighting the tenacious defenders maintained their position. Wherever the enemy penetrated our first line trenches he was driven back again by counterattacks. At many points, however, his assaults broke down under the concentrated fire of our brave artillery with very heavy losses.

The Eighty-seventh Infantry Regiment played a prominent part near Lokvicza in the successful repulse of enemy assaults. In the front sector of the plateau detachments of the Thirty-ninth Infantry Regiment repulsed three attacks of Italian Grenadiers with sanguinary losses.

Lively artillery firing from Wippach to the region of Plava continues. On the Fiemme Valley front the enemy repeated his fruitless advances by weak detachments against our positions on the Fassan Ridge.

Naval Events—On the 9th, 17th, and 18th of September a hydroplane squadron successfully attacked the railway establishments at Mestre with heavy and light bombs, making several hits on the railway station. Despite a most violent bombardment by the enemy, all our aeroplanes returned undamaged.

CAPTAIN VON PAPEN FIGHTING ON SOMME

BERLIN, (via London, Sept. 18.)—Captain Franz von Papen, former German military attaché at Washington, is now in the centre of the fighting on the Somme front. He is the chief General Staff officer of a division holding one of the crucial sectors on this front, against which the Entente Allies for weeks have been launching their heaviest attacks.

Captain von Papen received his coveted assignment to the front after his return from the United States. He was first given command of a battalion and, as he laughingly told the Associated Press correspondent during a recent visit to the front, he has had an opportunity to learn the new art of war as it has developed in the course of the present hostilities, which has progressed far beyond the text book and theoretical studies of the antebellum era.

HOADLEYS ARE SUED IN ROW OVER YACHT

Lawyer and Detective Arrested on the Alabama Ask $25,000 Damages Each.

OLD LITIGATION REVIVED

When Mrs. Hoadley Testified Craft Was Hers She Was Cited for Contempt.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Hoadley, of 18 East Twenty-second Street, failed yesterday to have Karl Frederick, of the law firm of Satterlee, Canfield & Stone, and John J. Kennedy, a private detective, punished for disorderly conduct in connection with their boarding of the yacht Alabama on Wednesday, and they brought upon themselves summonses in civil suits which will be added to the Hoadley litigation.

Mr. Buckner, who represented the lawyer and the detective in the examination, which was before Chief Magistrate McAdoo, said that the first summonses represented suits brought by his clients against Mr. and Mrs. Hoadley, seeking $25,000 each for false arrest.

In addition, another summons was served upon Mrs. Hoadley which came after the following sequence of events: At the morning session of court yesterday Mrs. Hoadley took the witness stand and swore that the yacht Alabama, which Mr. Frederick boarded in the belief that it belonged to the American British Manufacturing Company, was her personal property. She put in evidence a bill of sale dated July 22, 1914, showing that the company had transferred the yacht to her on that day. Court then adjourned until the afternoon, when Mrs. Hoadley was to continue her testimony.

Mr. Buckner, besides representing Mr. Frederick and Mr. Kennedy yesterday, is counsel for the Mutual Life Insurance Company, and, when he heard Mrs. Hoadley say that she owned the yacht, he recalled that she had not paid the full amount of a deficiency judgment of some $19,000 obtained against her a year or more ago by the life insurance company in proceedings following a mortgage foreclosure. In the recess Mr. Buckner obtained a summons directing Mrs. Hoadley to show cause why she should not be held in contempt of court for failure to pay the judgment in that she was the owner of a $9,000 yacht. This was the summons handed to Mrs. Hoadley with those in the damage suits.

Mr. Hoadley admitted that the American and British Manufacturing Company might have paid as much as $16,000 in four years for the maintenance of the yacht, but this, he said, was because he had used the yacht in the company's business—entertaining customers.

Mr. Frederick testified that, as the counsel for the Receiver for the International Power Company he had been commissioned to obtain all of the property belonging to the American and British Manufacturing Company, and that, as his best information had convinced him that the yacht was the property of the latter company, though in the possession of Mr. Hoadley, he had gone aboard expecting to be ordered ashore and intending, then, to base a suit for the vessel on the ground of Mr. Hoadley's refusal to give it up. He insisted that he had left the Alabama when ordered to do so by Mr. Hoadley.

This was the whole point with Magistrate McAdoo, who said that he would not decide who owned the yacht, but simply whether Mr. Frederick had peacefully left the vessel, and he decided in the affirmative.

Mr. Frederick's nautical knowledge was not directly impeached, but he earned Yachtsman Hoadley's contempt when, meaning the cockpit, he spoke of "the veranda at the back of the boat."

OPENS CHARITY CAMPAIGN.

F. M. Warburg Starts Work of Raising Gifts for Jews to $2,000,000.

The campaign of the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies to increase the yearly total of Jewish benefactions to $2,000,000 was begun yesterday by Felix M. Warburg, Chairman, who said he expected a successful campaign, and would make announcements of its progress from time to time.

The federation was organized recently for the purpose of collecting and receiving donations for member societies or for equitable distribution among them, it being the idea of the organizers that more could be obtained for philanthropic work through a pooling of interests, and that the distribution of benefits would be more businesslike.

DOLLAR DOMINATES FINANCE

Economist Acknowledges Rise of America's Power Due to the War.

PARIS, Sept. 18.—Max Hoschiller, in an article in the Temps today, contrasts America's financial position now in respect to foreign countries with what it was before the war. The article says:

"Then the United States was sending to Europe from $200,000,000 to $300,000,000 in interest on its borrowings, $150,000,000 to $200,000,000 spent by tourists, $100,000,000 to $150,000,000 to expatriates, and $20,000,000 to $40,000,000 in ocean freights.

"Since the war the United States has imported $730,000,000 in gold and has paid back a considerable amount of its previous borrowings, increased its foreign trade by $2,250,000,000 yearly, and loaned to foreign countries $1,470,000,000, so that the dollar now has replaced to a considerable extent the old sovereignty of the English pound abroad.

"Whether the United States will retain, with her deficient financial organization, the position recently won, will depend upon American financial and commercial policies. The arrival in France of an American commercial mission is an indication that Americans are realizing they must follow the law of exchanges between countries, buying in general as much as they sell."

Canadian War Loan Oversubscribed

Special to The New York Times.

OTTAWA, Sept. 18.—The second war loan of $100,000,000 is already oversubscribed. The chartered banks have offered to take up $50,000,000, but it is expected that it will be unnecessary to allot them anything.

BLACKMAIL GANG GOT A MILLION IN A YEAR

60 WERE IN THE BAND

CHICAGO, Sept. 18.—While the Federal authorities here prepared tonight to arraign for a preliminary hearing tomorrow seven members of the alleged blackmail gang who used the Mann act as their chief weapon, detectives fortified with information obtained from two alleged members of the gang who confessed, made arrests in other cities and spread a dragnet for the director in chief of the syndicate.

According to the Federal authorities the confessions which have been made show that the operations of the swindlers netted them $1,000,000 in the last year.

The confessions, it was said, disclosed that the alleged band numbers sixty persons, a third of them women. A dispute over the division of spoils, it was said, led to the confessions. The arrest of a score or more members of the syndicate is expected within a week.

Hinton G. Clabaugh of the United States Department of Justice said tonight he had obtained sufficient evidence to convict the chief members of the gang without revealing the names of some of their wealthy victims. It was understood that none of the names of the victims would be disclosed at the preliminary hearing before a United States Commissioner tomorrow. These victims, principally wealthy men whose flirtations led them into traps from which they escaped only on payment of large sums, will be shielded from publicity except as a last resort, it is said.

The evidence obtained in two cases already generally known, the authorities said, together with a mass of incriminating evidence found in the raid on the apartment where the seven were arrested, would be presented to the Federal Commissioner Clabaugh expects that the seven will be ordered removed to Philadelphia for trial without a stubborn resistance before the Commissioner.

There was a report tonight, however, that four of the prisoners arrested here might be released. Admissions were made in Government circles that the cases against Mrs. Edward Donahue, James Christian, James Bland, and Mrs. Frances Allen were not particularly strong. At the same time, it was asserted, the chain of evidence against Mrs. Helen Evers, Edward Donahue, and Henry Russell was without a single weak link.

The developments in the case reported to Clabaugh today included the arrest at Philadelphia of William Butler, held there in connection with an alleged blackmail plot against the late Mrs. Susan G. S. Winpenny.

Agent Clabaugh also revealed today the source of the information that led to the raid. He said that "Dick" Barrett and Edward J. Thompson were the two members of the syndicate who had confessed. They probably will receive immunity. Their revelations, said Clabaugh, were replete with stories of blackmail, race track swindles, and other ruses.

The seven under arrest here might seek release on bail, it was said tonight by Charles E. Erbstein, their counsel. The men prisoners refused to talk today, but the women scouted the charges.

The operations of the band, it is said, extended from coast to coast. Men and women alike were victims. Persons of wealth were the objects in every case. Five wealthy and socially prominent persons in Chicago, it is asserted, were blackmailed out of $20,000.

The operations of the syndicate were not confined to the blackmailing of wealthy men and women, according to information developed today. Among the effects in the office of Edward Donahue, one of the men caught in Saturday's raid, was stationery of a "Turf Exchange," with "headquarters in New York and offices all over the world." There were also cipher codes for deciphering messages received by wire, telling what horses to bet on, how much to bet, what races and positions to play.

Bogus newspaper clippings telling of the large bets won by a young Eastern plunger in poolrooms apparently had been used to lure victims.

GOT AID FROM CROCKER.

Federal Attorney Helped in His Investigation of the Gang's Activities.

While the chief fight against the blackmail gang is being made by the Federal authorities in Chicago and Philadelphia, representatives of the Department of Justice all over the United States are lending what aid they can. It is understood that Assistant District Attorney J. C. Knox got some information from Frank Crocker, who was indicted here together with George Irwin and David L. David of many aliases, for falsely representing themselves to be Government officials in the blackmailing schemes.

After Mrs. Klipper suddenly disappeared, and while she was out of reach of the Federal authorities, George Irwin, whom she had especially implicated, clamored to be tried. The date of his trial was set, but the absence of Mrs. Klipper caused it to be deferred. Mrs. Klipper was kept a prisoner for six weeks, and was then released. She returned to this city and was immediately placed under the protection of the Federal authorities.

Just how much Crocker has told Mr. Knox of the operations of the gang could not be learned, but it was indicated that he had placed himself at the disposition of the Federal prosecutors, David may also help the prosecution. He is at present serving a term in the Atlanta Penitentiary, where he was sent on Feb. 9 last after a plea of guilty of having used the mails to defraud investors in peat lands in the South.

At the request of the Department of Justice Deputy Police Commissioner Lord yesterday assigned Detective Finan of the Headquarters Staff to aid in the prosecution of the blackmailers. Finan had worked for a year pursuing members of the gang in Eastren cities. Finan left for Chicago yesterday to aid in rounding up members of the gang. It was Finan who arrested Crocker.

SALES TO CHINA DECREASE.

Those of Other Leading Countries Are Increasing.

The prospective visit to China of a commission composed of American Congressmen and business men, to study trade conditions and opportunities there, caused the Foreign Trade Department of the National City Bank of New York to issue yesterday an analysis of the international commerce with that country.

The compilation showed that the share of this country in the imports of China was exceeded only by that of Great Britain, Japan, and India, but that the growth in China's imports from Great Britain, Germany, Japan, India, and other countries had been much more rapid than in those from the United States. In fact American imports into China are declining, while those of the other leading countries are increasing.

According to the bank's statement, the total value of China's imports increased from $343,000,000 in 1907 to $427,400,000 in 1913, the year immediately preceding the war, a gain of about 25 per cent. It appears that in the same period, the imports from Great Britain grew from $60,500,000 to $70,300,000; Germany from $12,600,000 to $20,500,000; Belgium, $8,200,000 to $11,500,000; Russia, from $5,600,000, (in 1908,) to $16,100,000; France, from $2,500,000 to $3,800,000; India from $35,100,000 to $36,400,000, and Japan from $44,900,000 to $86,600,000. On the other hand, imports from the United States fell from $29,400,000 to $25,700,000. It was said at the bank that the figures were in United States currency, being transformed from the Chinese official figures as returned in Haikwan taels.

COLONEL COMES OUT FOR ROBERT BACON

Finds Universal Military Training a Vital Issue He Must Support.

CALDER CAMP DISMAYED

Some Republicans Say Roosevelt, Though a Progressive, Is Trying to Run the G. O. P.

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, much to the dismay of the supporters of William M. Calder, the Republican organization candidate for the nomination for United States Senator, came out flatly yesterday with the indorsement of Calder's opponent, Robert Bacon. The Colonel had repeatedly stated that he would not take part in any Senatorial fights, although pressure had been brought to bear on him in many States where there are contests. The Colonel's declaration in favor of Mr. Bacon was deeply resented by the Calder faction, and he was freely criticised for "trying to run the affairs of the party" while still insisting he was a Progressive.

Colonel Roosevelt says Mr. Bacon favors universal military service, and Mr. Calder has publicly stated that he is opposed to it.

As soon as Mr. Calder saw the Colonel's statement he said his position on military service was well known, and that he was opposed to "compulsory" military training, which, he added, merely meant conscription.

Roosevelt Against Calder.

This is the Colonel's statement:

"Mr. Bacon has come out squarely for universal military service, and Mr. Calder against it. This raises what I regard as a vital issue of principle, an issue which accordingly as it is now decided one way or the other may mean within a very few years whether the next generation of Americans is to walk with heads held high before the world, or with heads bent by crushing disgrace and disaster. I have studiously refrained from taking any part in the primary campaign, but when this issue is raised with such clearness and emphasis, it is impossible for me, holding the convictions I do, not to support Mr. Bacon.

"I suppose that it is too late for my support to be of use to him; but when this vital issue is raised in good faith, and is one real issue between the two candidates, I am bound by every consideration of patriotism and public duty to support Mr. Bacon. This issue relates to the most important plank in the platforms of the two candidates, and puts them in shape and thoroughgoing opposition on a matter literally vital to the welfare of the Republic."

Colonel Delayed Statement.

For the last few days Mr. Bacon and his friends had been urging the Colonel to come out with a public statement indorsing his candidacy, but the Colonel demurred with the plea that he could not play favorites. Finally, when he was informed that Mr. Calder in a speech last Friday night at the Twenty-ninth Assembly District Club had announced that he was opposed to universal military service, the Colonel thought he was justified in acting. On the same platform, that night, Mr. Bacon made a strong plea for such universal service.

The Colonel and Mr. Bacon held a conference at the latter's home at Westbury, L. I., on Sunday night, and the Colonel agreed to come out in the open in his support of his long-time friend.

The Colonel got on the telephone and dictated his statement to his secretary, Mr. Hayes. As soon as some of the Colonel's friends heard of it they pleaded urgently with him to keep his hands off the local situation. The plea had some effect, for Mr. Roosevelt again telephone his secretary recalling the statement. Yesterday, however, he had another change of mind. This is what Mr. Calder said about it last night:

"Colonel Roosevelt says he must support Mr. Bacon because Mr. Bacon is for 'universal military service,' and I am not. If 'universal military service' means anything, it means 'compulsory' service—that all men must give a portion of each year (between the ages of 18 and 45) to military service. I do not believe all men should be compelled each year to render military service whether our country is at war or peace. My stand regarding military service is clear and unequivocal. I have announced it repeatedly in my speeches and have printed it in all my literature. I have not changed front on this question. What I have stood for always I stand for today. My position has been plain and well known at all times.

Calder Against Conscription.

"I stand for a big, efficient navy, an efficient army of 250,000 men, and a system of training young men in times of peace which shall be a basis for whatever service, military or civil, is needed in time of war. Let the people of this State show by their votes on primary day whether they desire 'compulsory' military service and whether they are in favor of conscription."

While it was well known at Republican National Headquarters that the Colonel and Mr. Bacon had long been close friends, Mr. Bacon having served in his Administration as Ambassador to France, and that the Colonel was supposed to be in sympathy with his campaign, it was not thought that Mr. Roosevelt would take sides one way or the other. The Colonel's action is being resented on the ground that he is interfering with affairs that are not national, and have no bearing on the issues which called him back into the Republican Party.

"The Colonel split the Republican Party wide open once and came near wrecking it," said a Republican leader yesterday, "and now, while he is still a Progressive and not even back in the Republican organization, he takes sides on an issue that has nothing to do with the Progressives, but is purely a fight between two Republican candidates. It shows that the Colonel is again trying to run the Republican Party to suit his own whims."

TRAINMEN IN ODD CAMPAIGN.

Wilson Slogans Chalked on New Haven Cars and Engines.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 18.—Engineers and trainmen on the New Haven Railroad have started a novelty in campaign publicity. As many of the trains come into this city today such legends as, "Vote for Wilson and Eight Hours," or "Eight Hours with Ten Hours Pay, O. K. Wilson," were noticed chalked high upon the locomotive boilers, where they could easily be read as the trains sped from one town to another.

On freight trains, the broadsides of the box cars and the cabooses were utilized for similar chalkings, and the abutments of bridges over cuts, like that in the approach to the station in New Haven, were liberally decorated with mottoes indicative of the railroad men's favorable feeling for President Wilson.

WILSON WILL SPEAK TO BUSINESS MEN

At Shadow Lawn on Saturday He Will Outline His Views on Financial Legislation.

FIRST SPEECH OF CAMPAIGN

President Wilson will make the first speech of his campaign at Shadow Lawn, Long Branch, on next Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, it was announced yesterday at National Democratic headquarters. It was reported that the President would make few, if any, campaign speeches, and because of the death of his sister, Mrs. Howe, he canceled the speech scheduled for Friday at St. Louis. But so many requests that he speak were received both at National Headquarters here and at the executive offices at Asbury Park that the President decided to change his plans.

It was at the urging of the business men of New Jersey that the President agreed to make an address on Saturday. All the members of Chambers of Commerce and other business organizations of the State have been invited to hear him. It is also expected that many business men from New York will be present. Although primarily of State interest, national importance is attached to the occasion, as it is expected that the President will discuss the policy of the Democratic administration toward business in general, dealing not alone with the Federal Reserve Act and other measures already in operation, but with the program he proposes to have carried out if he is re-elected.

It was said that the President intends to discuss the eight-hour railroad law, going into details regarding its provisions, and, to express his desire to see passed at the next half of the Sixty-fourth Congress, amendments to the law or entirely new acts providing for the settlement of all future disputes between capital and labor.

Chairman McCormick of the Democratic National Committee returned yesterday from Indianapolis and Chicago, where he spent several days last week conferring with Western leaders.

"I met the Democratic County Chairman, State and county officers at Indianapolis," said Mr. McCormick, "and the confidence they displayed was inspiring. They feel absolutely sure that Indiana will give her electoral vote to the Democratic national ticket, and they are equally as sanguine concerning the re-election of the Democratic State ticket, including two United States Senators. The State Democratic organization is doing splendid work under the direction of officers of State organizations and the campaign is progressing in a manner that is entirely satisfactory.

"At Chicago I met the National Committeemen, State Chairman, and many leading Democrats from Wisconsin, Michigan, Nebraska, Missouri, Kansas, Ohio, and Illinois, and I was impressed with the fact that they are confident. The primaries in these States are over, and the local organizations are working harmoniously for the success of the party, State and national. The reports from all of this Middle Western country are favorable to the candidacy of Wilson and Marshall. The party is united and the leaders are working more harmoniously than ever before, working with an earnestness and enthusiasm born of confidence in their candidates and confidence in the belief that their efforts will be rewarded by victory in November.

"The State organizations in all this territory are doing a splendid work in arousing the people to the importance of the issues involved, and the people generally are responding in a fine spirit of earnestness. I was highly gratified at the reports I received concerning the Progressives of the Middle West. They are co-operating with the Democrats."

DEFENDS REPUBLICAN FILM.

Colby Denies Any Attempt to Create a Religious Issue.

Everett Colby, who is directing the moving-picture campaign for the Republican National Campaign Committee, denied yesterday that there was any attempt to create a religious issue through a movie play depicting scenes in Mexico that the committee is considering sending throughout the country in the interest of the election of Mr. Hughes. Some of the film scenes, it was said, depicted President Wilson asleep at Washington while Mexicans attacked nuns. Mr. Colby and other members of the committee witnessed a production of the films yesterday, and later said he found nothing offensive in them.

"This film has never been accepted or approved by the committee," said Mr. Colby. "We made a contract with a scenario writer who was to furnish us with a scenario, but it has to be submitted to the campaign committee before being accepted. If there is anything indecent or offensive in it, naturally we will not accept it. As the play now stands it is not finished. Unquestionably there will be some 'retakes' and some things will be cut out. It may be that the committee will reject the whole thing."

J. A. H. Hopkins of New Jersey, a member of the Associated Committee of Progressives supporting Mr. Wilson, sent Mr. Colby a strong protest against the use of any picture which might be construed as insulting to the President of the United States.

yesterday and will remain here to get the results tonight. He had a conference with George W. Perkins and other Progressive and Republican leaders, and said he felt confident that he would defeat Mr. Seabury easily. He refused to take seriously the campaign being made against him in the Republican primary by Senator Bennett.

Mr. Bennett said last night:

"From reports received from almost every county in the State I confidently expect to receive the nomination. In my opinion, my platform of economy and less fads and fancies will receive the approval of the enrolled Republicans. I expect to carry up-State by a good majority, and also confidently expect to carry Queens, Bronx, and Richmond Counties and break even with Mr. Whitman in New York and Kings. If nominated and elected I will give a business administration of the State's affairs by Republicans, and that is what the voters wish."

Job E. Hedges, who is managing Robert Bacon's campaign, returned yesterday from a trip through the State, and expressed himself as highly pleased with the widespread indorsement of Mr. Bacon's candidacy.

Bacon's Aggressive Campaign.

"Up to the filing of the petitions," he said, "there had been but little general interest. During the last two weeks the interest has intensified, and there will probably be about 225,000 votes, as near as I can judge, cast at the primaries between the Republican Senatorial candidates. If the enrolled Republicans rise to the importance of this nomination, which I believe they will, Mr. Bacon is sure of success. His fitness has been certified to by the leading men of the party throughout the State, and many who have felt committed to his opponent have written wishing him success."

The Calder managers charged yesterday that great pressure was being brought to bear by certain financial interests on up-State bankers to further Mr. Bacon's candidacy. A copy of a letter on the letterhead of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York City and signed by President Charles H. Sabin, introducing a Bacon canvasser to the cashier of an up-State bank, was given out.

W. M. K. Olcott, Republican State Committeeman from the Seventeenth, issued a statement yesterday in behalf of Mr. Bacon's candidacy.

WOMEN IN WILSON BUREAU.

Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson Heads New Democratic Organization.

Fifty well-known women, responding to an invitation from Vance C. McCormick, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, met in his office yesterday and organized the Eastern Women's Bureau of the committee. Each woman present promised to tell twenty other women about the organization before the second meeting next Monday.

Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson was elected Chairman unanimously. She accepted by wire from Maine, with this statement: "I am a Democrat, and will gladly work hard for Woodrow Wilson's election."

The women who will serve with Mrs. Gibson as Vice Chairmen are: Mrs. Felix Adler, New York; Mrs. Elizabeth Glendower Evans, Boston; Mrs. Joseph Fels, Philadelphia; Mrs. A. PLANS NEW TESTS FOR AMERICAN GUN the ammunition was fed into it from a circular drum, which enabled the gun to be fired more easily at the various angles taken by the aeroplane in its flight.

Bought Lewis Guns for Guard.

The admission was made also that the Lewis gun had advantages in being of simple mechanism and of few parts, and one official who said his mind was open on the subject pointed out that an ordinary cartridge or a cartridge case were practically the only tools required to put it in condition in certain circumstances.

A recent purchase by the War Department of guns of the Lewis type was said at the department today to have no bearing on the controversy. This purchase embraced 353 machine guns of the Lewis type, all of which were supplied to the National Guard. War Department officials said the purchase was purely an emergency measure. The department feared that if a clash came with Mexico the American military forces on the border would be in a bad way if the National Guard went into Mexico without machine guns, it having been reported that the Mexican forces were well supplied with such weapons.

At that time it was found that guns of the Lewis type were the only ones that could be purchased in the United States and Secretary Baker ordered the purchase of all that were available. One difficulty afecting this acquisition of 353 Lewis guns, however, was that they were all chambered to take the regulation British small arms ammunition, and were not fitted for taking United States service ammunition. In consequence of this it was necessary for the War Department to purchase a large supply of the British ammunition for special use in the Lewis guns.

According to what was said at the War Department today, the question involved in making tests of the Lewis gun in competition with the new Vickers guns, none of which has yet been delivered to the Government, and the Benet-Mercier gun, embraces a number of problems which must be worked out carefully by experts. It was said that, admitting the lightweight, the simplicity of operation, fewer parts, and cheaper cost of the Lewis gun, it was nevertheless necessary to determine whether these considerations should outweigh claims made in behalf of the other machine guns that they worked more easily, and were less liable to jam or malfunction, and lasted longer.

Cite Gun's Record in Recent Test.

Attention was called in this connection to the report of a board of army officers consisting of two from the infantry, one from the cavalry, one from the field artillery, and one from the Ordnance Department, which conducted a comparative test of the Lewis, the new model Vickers, and the Benet-Mercier. This board reported that the mechanism of the Lewis gun had not been developed to a satisfactory stage and that in the test it had 206 jams and malfunctions, 35 broken parts, and 15 parts not broken but requiring replacement, as against 23 jams, no broken parts, and no parts not broken but requiring replacement for the Vickers gun, and 59 jams, 7 broken parts, and no parts not broken but requiring replacement for the Benet-Mercier gun.

This test was made in 1913, and it was learned at the War Department today that the disposition there is to be guided by more recent developments and improvements in machine guns in arriving at a conclusion as to which type or types are best adapted for use by the United States Army. One high official said that the war in Europe had taught many lessons, and it was essential to have these lessons in mind in determining the type of machine gun to be adopted as standard for the army.

Confirms Inventor's Offer.

The statement contained in THE TIMES today that Colonel Lewis had offered his gun to the United States Army without compensation to himself was confirmed at the War Department. It was said there that the right to manufacture the gun had been turned over by Colonel Lewis to the Savage Automatic Arms Company of Utica, N. Y., and that Colonel Lewis was entitled to a royalty on the sale of each gun. Colonel Lewis, however, it was said, had agreed not to accept any royalty on guns of his invention sold to the United States Government.

Officials of the War Department were extremely careful today in commenting on the allegation of Robert N. Calfee of Cleveland, attorney for the Automatic Arms Company, manufacturers of the Lewis gun, that "apparently a determined effort was made on the part of General Crozier, Chief of Ordnance, to prevent any test of the Lewis gun at Springfield, and to prevent absolutely any tests of the gun in connection with aeroplane work."

In one quarter it was said that General Crozier was not responsible for the failure of the War Department to accept a report made by a Board of Officers which tested the Lewis gun in competition with the Benet-Mercier gun at the Plattsburg Camp.

The statement was made that while this test may have been made under official service conditions, the report of that board was not taken into consideration by the War Department in view of the intention to go more thoroughly into the matter of the relative merits of various types of machine guns, and while it was not so asserted specifically the impression was made plain that it is the desire of the military authorities to redetermine the machine-gun controversy after new trials under uniform conditions.

The position of General Crozier with respect to the claims of the superiority of the Lewis gun is set forth in two memoranda signed by him and dated May 8, 1916, and June 27, 1916, respectively. These memoranda follow:

Quotes General Wood's Letter.

First report of General Crozier:

War Department, Office of the Chief of Ordnance, Washington, May 8, 1916.
Memorandum for the Adjutant General.
Subject: Report of test of Lewis automatic machine rifle.

1. This test was made by a board of officers convened at the Springfield Armory, pursuant to Special Orders No. 85, War Department, c. s. The test is interesting not only as an effort to secure for the service an improved machine rifle or an alternate model equal to the service rifle for supply in emergency, but also as a means of reaching a conclusion as to the merits of the automatic machine rifle with which the service is now armed, the Benet-Mercier, which has been vigorously assailed in comparison with the Lewis gun.

2. The most considerable attack upon the Benet-Mercier rifle has been made by the Commanding General of the Eastern Department [General Leonard Wood] in correspondence which is recorded in A. G. O. 2,333,911, (O. O. 472.5 E 22-Lewis.) In this correspondence the Commanding General of the Eastern Department states in regard to the Lewis gun:

> It is easily the best machine gun I have ever seen, and it is certainly 3 to 1 in value over the Benet-Mercier. * * * I am interested in machine guns, and this is by far the best I have ever seen. * * * The Benet-Mercier, in my opinion, is of little value, and this is the general opinion of most of those who have tried and used it. * * * We need a good machine gun, and the Lewis gun is, in my opinion, easily the best one in use today. * * * The Benet-Mercier gun, in my opinion, is unfitted for the military service. * * * It is intricate and unreliable. * * *

3. This department, upon inquiry, was not able to obtain from the Commanding General of the Eastern Department any statement of performance upon which his highly favorable opinion of the Lewis gun was based, other than reports of its use by the British Royal Flying Corps, which were of a confidential nature, such that he was not at liberty to go into details concerning them, and its manufacture for the Canadian Government; but the unfavorable opinion of the Benet-Mercier gun was based upon adverse reports in regard to it made by a number of officers. The unfavorable opinion was not accompanied by any detailed statement of the mechanical defects found, nor by any information which would help in forming a conclusion as to whether the difficulties encountered were or were not such as might be expected to result from a lack of knowledge of the mechanical details of the gun, such as might reasonably be expected from the officers and men handling the gun, after proper instruction; and no statement was furnished of the character of the instruction or personnel of machine gun units instituted in the Eastern Department, in order that an opinion might have been formed as to its appropriate character and its sufficiency.

Two Lewis Guns Tested.

4. It must be borne in mind that no entirely satisfactory machine rifle has yet been developed; that is, that we have never had a machine rifle that is not subject to stoppage by reason of some kind of malfunction. These weapons are machines, operated with tremendous pressure and tremendous velocity of moving parts, and are subject to the weaknesses and infirmities of all machines. They have never reached the simplicity and perfection of construction which would insure their operation in the hands of the average soldier or the average officer, with the same certainty that attends that of the ordinary rifle or pistol. Their infirmities have been accepted because of the large effective output which can be had from them when they do work well. The Benet-Mercier is no exception to this general statement, and that it can be relied upon to do good service when well handled by properly instructed men is evidenced not only by the findings of several boards which have been appointed, but also by the reports of officers who have handled it, both in our service and in the navy.

5. The board, whose report is the subject of this memorandum, tested two Lewis guns; one adapted for the use of our service ammunition and the other for the use of British ammunition. The one adapted for use of our service ammunition was soon shown to be too unreliable to justify a continuation of the test and was withdrawn. This fact, however, was not to the discredit of the system, since there had been litttle opportunity and little effort to develop the gun for the use of our service ammunition. The test of the gun using British ammunition was continued to the end, and the following is the conclusion of the board:

"Considering the performance of the Lewis gun in the test reported herein, and comparing that performance with the performance of the Vickers gun (automatic machine gun, model of 1915) and of the Springfield gun (automatic machine rifle, calibre .30, model of 1909) in the test conducted by the board convened by Special Orders No. 191, War Department, Aug. 16, 1913, the board finds that the Lewis gun in its present state of development is not equal or superior to either of the above-mentioned guns. The Lewis gun is not as reliable or as dependable as are the other guns mentioned. * * *

"The Lewis gun, on the other hand, is lighter, simpler, and has a fewer number of parts than the other guns mentioned, and in the opinion of the board the question as to whether or not it can be developed to a satisfactory degree of reliability and dependability is an open one.

The board therefore finds that the results of the present tests were not such as to justify the purchase of four Lewis guns chambered for the service ammunition for further test at this time, but in view of the desirable features of the gun the board recommends that if the Savage Arms Company undertakes to develop a gun for the service ammunition a further test be made upon its request after the development shall have been carried to a satisfactory stage."

Efforts to Encourage Lewis Gun.

6. The "Vickers" mentioned in the above quotation is the one which was adopted as the result of a previous test, but of which it has not yet been possible to secure a supply for the service, a small number being under manufacture. The gun spoken of as the "Springfield gun" is what is otherwise known as the "Benet-Mercier."

7. This department will encourage efforts to develop the Lewis gun to a satisfactory stage, and will continue to use its best efforts to hasten the supply of Vickers guns, although funds at present available will do little toward this end. In the meantime, I think it should be accepted that the gun which the service now has is as good a one as it has been possible to secure, and better than the one put forward by the commanding General of the Eastern Department as superior to it, in a manner which could hardly fail to shake the confidence of the service in the weapon which has been supplied to it; and that the service should be encouraged to go at the mastery of its present gun in recognition of the fact that it is a machine and requires for its successful operation a degree of industriously acquired mechanical knowledge, as do all machines.

WILLIAM CROZIER,
Brigadier General, Chief of Ordnance,
United States Army.

General Crozier's memorandum in part reads:

1. The Lewis machine gun was first offered to the Board of Ordnance and Fortification by a letter dated May 2, 1912, from the Automatic Arms Company, inviting attention to an air-cooled, gas-operated, automatic machine gun, and asking for a field test. Mr. R. M. Calfee, attorney, and Mr. Huberty, machinist of the company, appeared before the Board and exhibited the model of the gun. Arrangements were made for the Board to witness a firing test of the gun at Fort Myer on May 3. (Proceedings of the Board of Ordnance and Fortification, May 2, 1912.) * * *

5. The Board of Ordnance and Fortification, at a meeting on March 6, 1913, considered a "letter dated March 5, 1913, from the Automatic Arms Company, presenting for consideration, with a view to its adoption as a type for use in service, their .30-calibre, air-cooled gun, and requesting that the gun be given a thorough competitive test by a board of officers from the several arms of the service engaged in the manufacture and tactical use of machine guns, such as the Machine Gun Board, constituted by Special Orders, 109, of 1903. R. M. Calfee and R. W. Lewis, representing the company, appeared before the board.

6. In the above record no mention is made of the fact that the gun submitted by the Automatic Arms Company is the "Lewis machine gun." However, in view of the fact that Mr. Calfee represented the Lewis gun at the test there can be no question but that the gun referred to in the correspondence with the Automatic Arms Company is the Lewis machine gun."

English Gun Submitted.

7. The board convened for the competitive test of automatic machine guns submitted to it met at the Springfield Armory on Sept. 15, 1913. The Lewis gun submitted to this board and tested by it was one of two model guns manufactured in England (O. O. 39,153 E 930.) It is presumed that the guns were manufactured by the Birmingham Small Arms Company of Birmingham, England, in view of the fact that on July 18, 1913, Mr. Calfee, as Secretary of the Automatic Arms Company, acknowledged receipt of rifle tools and gauges shipped to Colonel I. N. Lewis, in care of the Birmingham Small Arms Company.

8. In the 1913 test seven different makes of automatic machine guns were considered and tried out. The board consisted of two officers of the infantry, one of the cavalry, one of the field artillery, and an ordnance officer. The arsenal test narrowed the competition down to the present service machine gun—the automatic machine rifle, calibre .30, model of 1909, and the Vickers rifle-calibre gun, light model. It was not desired to adopt a gun on simply an arsenal test, and three additional Vickers guns and four automatic rifles, calibre .30, model of 1909, were submitted to the board for an extensive field test, which was held at Texas City and Leon Springs, Texas. As a result of this test the board recommended the adoption of the Vickers rifle-calibre gun, light model, and the Vickers tripod, Model J.

9. The new gun differs in one essential from the present gun in that it is water cooled instead of air cooled. It is slightly heavier when filled with water than the present gun, the weights being about 29 pounds and 36 pounds, respectively. The cost of the new gun is about twice that of the present gun, unless a tripod be added to the latter, in which case it would be about one and one-half times as great.

10. This test, in so far as the Lewis gun is concerned, indicated that the mechanism had not been developed to a satisfactory stage, having in the endurance test 206 jams and malfunctions, 35 broken parts, 15 parts not broken but requiring replacement, as against, respectively, 23, 0, and 0 for the Vickers gun and 59, 7, and 0 for the automatic machine rifle, calibre .30, model of 1909, the Benet-Merciar.

11. The board concluded, after a careful consideration of the data collected, together with the knowledge of the suitability of the various designs of machine guns gained by observation during the tests, that "the Lewis automatic machine rifle as at present designed is not considered superior to the service automatic machine rifle on account of failure to maintain continuous fire, the large number of parts that were broken, and the large number of jams, many of the latter being reduced only after much difficulty and considerable time.

12. The Lewis gun was therefore not given the field test, in view of the fact that the board recommended a competitive test of this nature for the Vickers gun, and the then service automatic machine rifle only. * * *

14. Effort has been made from time to time within the last year and a half to obtain a Lewis machine gun for further test. These efforts have not been successful until recently, when satisfactory arrangements were made with the Savage Arms Company of Utica, N. Y., the American manufacturers of the Lewis machine gun, to submit a gun to tests similar to those held in the competitive trial of machine guns in 1913. The board testing this gun was composed of one officer of cavalry, one officer of infantry, and one officer of the Ordnance Department.

15. In order to further test this weapon arrangements have been made for the purchase of three Lewis machine guns, chambered for British ammunition, which it is intended to mount on aeroplanes on the Texas border and in Mexico. These weapons have been procured with a view to determining whether this particular type of gun has peculiar and special adaptability for aeroplane work.

WILLIAM CROZIER,
Brigadier General, Chief of Ordnance.
Office Chief of Ordnance, June 17, 1916.

HOW LEWIS GUN EXCELLED.

Plattsburg Tests in June Showed Its Efficiency, Report Says.

Army officers in and around New York were inclined yesterday to expect important developments in the machine gun controversy which has existed in army circles for many months. They were disposed to attribute this expectation to the publication in yesterday's TIMES of the details of the repeated offers of the Lewis gun free to the United States Government and its repeated rejection under the influence of the Ordnance Department, of which General Crozier is the head.

Major Gen. Leonard Wood was Chief of Staff when Colonel Lewis offered to give his gun to the Government in 1910. The offer was made in his presence, General Wood said yesterday. Colonel Lewis himself said to a TIMES reporter on Saturday that "I gave the gun to them, but they would not take it."

If a field test of the Lewis gun with others is ordered by the War Department, such a test, with the single exception of that held at Plattsburg last June by order of General Wood, and declared by General Crozier to be unofficial, will be the first that the gun has had during the tenure of General Crozier as Chief of Ordnance.

In the Plattsburg test last June the Lewis gun and the Benet-Mercier guns were subjected by the Dorey board to eleven specific tests, ranging from mobility to firing with their magazines choked with sand and mud. Under these conditions the Dorey board's report showed that the Lewis gun functioned, the Benet-Mercier did not.

Here is the report of the board in detail:

NIGHT FIRING, JUNE 13, 1916, 8:40 P. M.

The time necessary for each of the guns to go into action was approximately the same—about 15 seconds. A small electric torchlight was used while jams were being reduced. Weather clear; moonlight.

First 600-Yard Test. To Fire Ninety Rounds.

Benet-Mercier.	Lewis.
The first gun finished in 1 minute 15 seconds without a jam. Second gun jammed; cause, stripped shell. Changed barrels after firing some five or ten shots. Remaining shots fired as rifle fire. Would not function because of clogged gas vent in second barrel.	First gun finished in 15 seconds. Second gun jammed, (after firing first shot,) caused by rack assembling spring not being properly adjusted. The rack was replaced, and the gun finished its 94 rounds in 10 minutes 28 seconds. It was reported to board that second gun had been assembled by civilian attendants in afternoon, and they had failed to adjust spring properly.

600-Yard Test. To Fire Ninety Rounds.

Benet-Mercier.	Lewis.
First gun, 2 minutes; one jam; cause, ejected shell rebounding from wooden post back into chamber. Second gun, first clip, 8 minutes 20 seconds; second clip, 4 minutes 40 seconds. 23 misfires. Did not finish clip. Gun out of commission, due to jams caused by clogged gas vent.	First gun, 13 seconds; second gun, 17 seconds.

Second 600-Yard Test. To Fire Ninety Rounds.

Benet-Mercier.	Lewis.
First gun finished in 1 minute 45 seconds. Second gun fired twenty shots out of first clip as single firer. Did not finish clip. Changed spring in three minutes. Fired three shots in second clip. Ceased firing on account of clogged gas port.	First gun finished in about 12 seconds. Second gun did not function until eight or ten shots had been fired. Finished in 50 seconds. Failure due to insufficient gas pressure.

DAY FIRING, JUNE 14, 1916, 2:25 P. M.
To Fire 470 Rounds in the Least Time.
One Benet-Mercier and One Lewis.

Benet-Mercier.	Lewis.
4 minutes 55 seconds. Seven interruptions, two of which were jams.	7 minutes 30 seconds. Necessary to change feed arm and extractor because of burred feed pawl and worn corners on magazine.

To Fire the Greatest Number of Shots in Two Minutes.

150.	752.

Mobility.
Two Benet-Mercier and Two Lewis.

Each carried by one man, advancing up a steep hill and taking a position on crest. Each was handled with equal ease and facility.

Firing 420 Rounds. To Be Loaded and Fired by One Man.
(One expert to reduce jams only.)

Benet-Mercier.	Lewis.
After firing eighty-five rounds firing pin caught, causing serious jam, which after twenty-five minutes' work was not reduced, and another gun was substituted for next test.	3 minutes 45 seconds. Three interruptions, one due to failure to feed, the other two to failure to extract.

Sand Test.
Three Benet-Mercier and Two Lewis Magazines.

The loaded magazines were filled with sand (one with wet and one with dry) and were fired without cleaning, except removal of such sand as fell out when magazines were shaken.

Benet-Mercier.	Lewis.
Fired only eight or ten shots in five minutes' firing, too much head space causing ruptured shells. Gun would not function, and test was stopped.	1 minute 3 seconds. One interruption. Gun then fired four magazines in fifty-three seconds to demonstrate its functioning without sand being removed from gun.

Anti-Aircraft or Aeroplane Mount.

No mount available.	Mount fixed on end of upright post. Gun satisfactorily fired from this mount through a vertical arc of at least 45 degrees above and below the horizontal. The gun could have been fired almost vertically either up or down. The gun was also revolved on the axis of the barrel. Functioned satisfactorily in all positions.

Laconia Back in Merchant Trade.

The Cunard liner Laconia arrived yesterday from Liverpool to take on a cargo of provisions and general war munitions after being away for nineteen months as an auxiliary armed cruiser patrolling the Indian Ocean from the Cape of Good Hope to Aden. She took part in the chase of the German gunboat Königsberg, but could not get in close enough to the African Coast to attack her.

IN NEW JERSEY.

NEWARK.—Motor Vehicle Commissioner William L. Dill suspended the chauffeur's license of Leonard Setaro, Jr., son of Commissioner of Public Safety Leonard Setaro of Irvington, yesterday, for two months, for driving a car with its rear light out, and which was emitting smoke.

HACKENSACK.—Frances Weiner, 2 years old, daughter of Bamert Weiner of Park Ridge, and Tony Guica, 3 years old, son of Vincenzo Guica of Emerson, were both burned to death yesterday when their clothing caught fire while they were playing around bonfires.

NEW BRUNSWICK.—The four Socialists who were arrested, fined $20 each, and sent to jail for seven days on Saturday, have started a fight, through their counsel, Henry Carles of Newark, for "free speech."

NEW BRUNSWICK.—Lawrence E. Bochert, a farmer living near Plainsboro, was killed yesterday by a Pennsylvania Railroad train near that place.

NEW BRUNSWICK.—Frederick Kersten of this town was put on trial yesterday for the murder of Louis Horvath, with whom it was said he quarreled over a cow.

ATLANTIC CITY.—The Grand Temple, Ladies of the Golden Eagle of New Jersey, with 200 delegates attending their convention, yesterday elected officers for the coming year. Mrs. Bertha Cresse of Cape May was elected Grand Templar and Mrs. Jennie Benson of Millville Vice Grand Templar.

The Perfect Headlight

Ample distance—full powerful headlight—no glare

Perfect in its protection to others, and perfect in providing a full, powerful light, without glare, for those who drive.

It's the Osgood—a prismatic glass lens that fits into the lamps in place of the plain lens.

The scientific prisms bend the strong light rays downward along the road where the light is needed. The powerful beam is only 3½ feet high—below the eye level of approaching drivers, thus eliminating entirely the dangerous glare. This diverting of the rays does not lessen the light as with dimmers or diffusers, but actually strengthens the light's power.

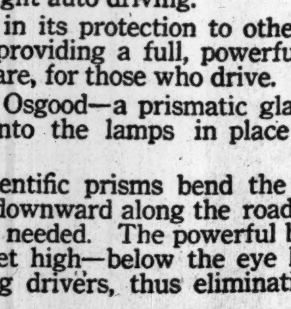
The Osgood Lens meets every need for city driving at night, is approved by police officials wherever an ordinance is in effect.

For country driving the Osgood Lens is a real necessity because it lights the ground far ahead—for a distance of over 500 feet, illuminating every object along the road. Ruts, holes and dangerous bends are visible long before you reach it.

There is nothing like them. They make night-driving safe any time, any where.

$2.50 to $5.25 a pair

Guaranteed to satisfy you or your money back



There is nothing to compare with the Osgood Lens—there is nothing like them at all. They do away with dangerous dimmers because they make dimming unnecessary.

Thousands of Osgood Lenses are in use and are giving wonderful satisfaction. One user writes: "I have tried every kind of device, but nothing filled the bill until I used the Osgood." Another says: "Best I ever saw—do not see how they could be improved upon." They are just what every motorist wants and [illegible]

CARRANZA CENSORS PARLEY ON MEXICO

Cabrera Says Only Pershing's Recall and Border Guard May Be Discussed.

QUESTIONED BY FIRST CHIEF

Lane Insists Broad Study of Conditions Will Proceed, and Expects No Friction.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Sept. 18.—After receiving a message from First Chief Carranza asking about reports that the Joint Commission had been discussing the internal affairs of Mexico, Luis Cabrera, Chairman of the Mexican section, asserted today that its deliberations were confined to the withdrawal of American troops from Mexico and the protection of the border.

Mr. Cabrera said it was true that the Mexican Commissioners had furnished information about Carranza decrees and the condition of the Mexican railroads, but that this was laid before the American Commissioners as a matter of politeness in answer to questions and was quite apart from the formal deliberations. He made it plain that any hopes that the commission would reach an agreement, or even enter a discussion, on the question of modifying the alleged confiscatory decrees of General Carranza or on Mexican internal affairs in any way, were ill-founded.

Franklin K. Lane, Chairman of the American section, insisted tonight that there was no difference of opinion between the two sections as to the subject before them, and that no hint of a misunderstanding had occurred at any of the sessions. He said that the commission would go ahead with its plan of making a broad study of the problems of Mexico. It is known that the American commission feels that a settlement of the border question alone would leave the field open for a continued recurrence of international trouble.

The first intimation from any of the Commissioners that the two sections were at cross purposes in their view of the limitations of their deliberations came after the morning session, when Mr. Cabrera told the newspapermen that the American press had embarrassed him greatly by conveying to Mexico an impression that the internal affairs of that country were being allowed to come up for consideration by the commission.

"I have received a telegram from Mexico asking about this matter," he said, "and in answer I authorize a denial that we are considering anything except the withdrawal of the troops and the border situation. I am not empowered to consider anything else."

When it was called to his attention that formal typewritten statements had been handed out by the commission relating to talks on the subject of the Carranza tax decrees, the railroad situation in Mexico, and the proposed reconstruction of the judicial system, Mr. Cabrera said:

"Certain questions were asked us by the American Commissioners relative to various phases of the Mexican national life, and it would have been extremely impolite for us not to have given them such information as they wanted. We understood that this information was intended to enable the Commissioners to form an intelligent opinion of the Mexican situation in the light of which they might decide the question of the withdrawal of the troops. There was no discussion of these questions, however."

The American Commissioners have been studying the Carranza decrees in the light of complaints made to them by Americans, who say that the decrees amount to disguised confiscation. They are now awaiting statements being prepared by the leading American interests in Mexico for the information of the Mexican Commissioners. These statements cannot be received before the joint commission, according to the interpretation by the Mexican Commissioners of their authority, as the basis for a request for modifying the decrees or adopting a more lenient attitude toward American interests.

At the request of the American Commissioners the attitude of Carranza toward foreign investments was described by the Mexican Commissioners. A formal statement from the commission on the subject was as follows:

"The policy of the Government toward American and foreign interests was given consideration in which an explanation was made that it was the Carranza idea to put both Mexican and foreign interests upon the same footing, allowing preference to neither. It was said by the Mexican Commissioners that the hope was that such a policy would be effected as would make Mexican development by foreign capital both possible and profitable, instead of the present conditions, or of those heretofore in existence, which have given rise to complications with foreign Governments by reason of preferences given to foreign nationalists. It was expected that by the new policy of equal rights a great opportunity would be given to all with capital and the conditions in Mexico would become more peaceful by reason of becoming less subject to outside contentions."

Villa's attack on Chihuahua City and the repulse of his forces by General Jacinto Trevino will tend to clarify international relations, in the opinion of the Mexican delegates. The Chihuahua battle figured prominently in the discussions of the commission today. The Mexicans said that if Villa had been found by the action at Chihuahua the task of running him down would be greatly simplified. The difficulty never had been to fight Villa, they said, but to find him. A statement issued by the commission read:

"The attack upon Chihuahua was made some 200 miles south of the Pershing forces and across two ranges of mountains from the point where the American troops at present have their base. If the American troops are withdrawn it has been proposed that a substitute Mexican force should take their place, which shall be able to cut off the possibility of Villa raiding to the northward."

Shall the Child Victims of Infantile Paralysis Be Crippled for Life?

Can you realize what it will mean to these little tots (most of then under 5 years of age) to hobble through life on crutches?

Can you look ahead 15 or 20 years and see them being pushed about the city in wheel chairs or at best wearily dragging their deadened limbs as they go to their daily toil?

The threat of such a future hangs over the heads of more than 3000 Brooklyn children who have survived the acute stage of the disease. But fortunately the struggle to rescue them from permanent crippledom has begun already.

The Nurses of the Committee on Crippled Children which, during the past three years, has had experience with over 3000 crippled children, are visiting every child who has had the disease, are giving instructions for its after-care and, where no private physician is in charge, are arranging for the regular visits of the child to the clinics. In needy cases transportation is provided. An important part of the clinic treatment is the massaging of the paralyzed parts. Masseurs are furnished by the Committee, each one treating four patients an hour.

The Committee already is attending over 600 of the paralysis victims and hopes to reach every case as soon as discharges from the hospitals occur. This work will continue as long as funds hold out, but several thousand dollars in addition to present resources will be needed for extra nurses, masseurs, braces, etc.

Contributions of any size will be welcome. If you cannot give $100 send $50 or $25, or $10, or $1. Please attach checks to this clipping and mail to Room 1.

SEIZED IN CHIHUAHUA AS ALLIES OF VILLA

CHIHUAHUA CITY, Mexico, Sept. 17—Delayed.—Numbers of residents of Chihuahua City were arrested today and charged with complicity in Villa's attack on the city yesterday.

Martial law was proclaimed throughout the State. This action followed the discovery that during the attack numbers of residents, among them amnestied revolutionists, had been sniping from their windows and that others had provided information to the bandits.

General Jacinto Trevino also issued orders that any other than the military on the streets after 10 o'clock at night shall be shot.

EL PASO, Texas, Sept. 18.—Two columns of Government cavalry under General Matias Ramos and Colonel Jose Marrero today were pursuing Villa and his main band, which Saturday made the Hidalgo Day attack on Chihuahua City, into the rugged Santa Clara cañon district to the northeast, according to reports to General Francisco Gonzales, commandant in Juarez. The bandits are well mounted and apparently were leading the de facto forces over the jagged rocks, ruinous to the feet of horses, into the cañon.

Today's reports indicated that Villa's force numbered approximately 1,500 and was opposed by the garrison of about 7,000. The Villa casualties also were said to be considerably larger than was first indicated. From the number of dead and wounded picked up, it was estimated the losses were 250.

Search today was being made among the bodies in an attempt to identify prominent outlaw leaders. It is reported that among the bodies was found that of José Inez Salazar, known as "the perpetual revolutionist," who was in the penitentiary on a charge of treason and was released in the attack.

UNIONS DEMAND STRIKE ARBITRATION

yesterday afternoon, to submit their request for arbitration in writing.

He said he expected to receive a letter from them some time last night which he would not make public until today. He will consider the letter at a conference with the representatives of the Merchants' Association and the Chamber of Commerce.

The representatives of the Merchants' Association and the Chamber of Commerce with whom Mayor Mitchel and Mr. Straus will confer this morning were those named on last Wednesday at a meeting of business and professional men at the Lawyers' Club, 115 Broadway. They are Lindsay Russell, M. Friedman, Robert E. Dowling, Alfred E. Marling, B. J. Greenhut, and E. F. Darrell. These men, who had appointed a committee to call on Mr. Straus at the offices of the commission while it was holding its investigation of the causes of the strike, told the Chairman and the Mayor that they would hold themselves in readiness to help the city out of its transit difficulties whenever called upon.

TIME LIMIT FOR MAYOR.

Sympathy Strike Threat for Friday Unless He Wins Traction Peace.

The new threat of a sympathy strike, made yesterday before the Mayor, contingent on his ability to force the traction companies to arbitrate with their striking employes, was final, according to labor leaders.

Assertion was made that further ratification by individual locals was unnecessary. Subsequently this was modified to a declaration that strike votes by each local might be technically necessary, but that the favorable action already taken by the Central Federated Union of New York, the Central Labor Union of Brooklyn, and other numerically less important organizations would make such voting a formality. The leaders insisted that the strike was a foregone conclusion as soon as a date was set.

BENEFITS FOR STRIKERS SOON.

Amalgamated Promises to Begin Payment Next Week.

The charge was made by an Interborough official yesterday that the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America did not intend to pay strike benefits to its men. This official, who refused to let his name be used, declared that he had learned from private sources that the organization would seek to evade taking care of the men by alleging that they had struck voluntarily before Amalgamated officers arrived and directed them to do so.

Theodore P. Shonts, President of the Interborough, added to the statement of this official that he thought "the boys ought to find out about their money," and that he wondered how much money had been taken away from "the foolish men who followed the leadership of the union," and what was going to be done for them.

Mr. Shonts repeated his challenge to the Amalgamated Association that it open its books to the Public Service Commission and his offer that the Interborough would do the same. He asserted that the challenge, though it had reached William B. Fitzgerald, General Organizer of the Amalgamated, had remained unanswered.

Replying to Mr. Fitzgerald's statement of Sunday in which the latter charged the cost of the strike to the traction companies had been $1,032,000, Mr. Shonts asserted that he was not yet aware of the cost, but thought that matter concerned the Directors and the stockholders rather than the general public. He added in answer to Mr. Fitzgerald's estimate, that damage claims already were $1,000,000, that the cost of the elevated accident of last Friday night, he was informed, would be but $1,800.

Amalgamated leaders denied indignantly that benefits would be refused the strikers.

It was explained that the men were not entitled to benefits under the rules of the organization until they had been out two weeks, and that they would receive their benefits a week from next Thursday at the end of the third week of the strike. The amount per man has been variously stated at from $5 to $7 a week.

PARTIAL NIGHT SERVICE ON THIRD AVE. SYSTEM

Three Cars Run Until 11 o'Clock Without Interference—Transit Conditions Improve.

Trolley cars ran in Manhattan after dark yesterday for the first time since the surface car men joined the transit strike a week ago last Sunday.

There were only three of them—red cars of the Third Avenue Railway Company on the Fifty-ninth Street crosstown line. Their operation was an experiment in restoration of night trolley service, and as such was regarded by the traction heads as an important move in their warfare on the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes.

Inspector Myers, in charge of the Police Department's strike bureau at Headquarters, said the experiment was a success from the police standpoint, at least, since the three cars, plying far apart under lengthened headway, encountered no resistance from strikers. The three cars were run until 11 o'clock, the time at which the company had announced in advance it would discontinue them. They were crowded with passengers on most of the trips.

No further announcement of night service came from President Theodore P. Shonts, who on Sunday night said after-dark service on the green car lines of the New York Railways Company would be restored "sometime this week," but even the slight restoration of night service was hailed by the public as happy augury of better accommodations to come.

The Third Avenue Company yesterday operated at the maximum hour 129 cars, a gain of nineteen over Sunday.

The New York Railways Company, at its rush hour, ran 433 cars, a gain of 68 over the day before, and the largest individual day's progress it has accomplished. The result represented just a trifle over one-third of its normal maximum of 1,291.

The Union Railways Company, the Bronx subsidiary of the Third Avenue Company, ran 168 cars out of its normal maximum of 252 yesterday. It fell off nine from the day before. The Second Avenue Railroad gained one more car, operating 27, instead of 26 as on Sunday.

200 QUEENS CARMEN STRIKE.

Fourteen Lines Will Be Affected by the Walkout.

More than 200 motormen and conductors of the New York & Queens County Railway Company voted to strike shortly after midnight last night. They notified the police that they would abandon no cars on the road, but would run them into the Woodside car barns and there leave them at the end of each run. There are at least as many more motormen and conductors who are not affiliated with the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America, and William O. Wood, President of the company, will have these men available to operate cars today. He said he would send out about 100 cars on the main line at 5 o'clock this morning. This makes the fifth surface system to be involved in the present transit strike.

Daniel J. Haley, Chairman of the Union Committee, issued a statement explaining that a strike had been voted because the company had sent seventy-five motormen to Manhattan yesterday to be employed as strike breakers. He said this was in violation of a statement of Presinent Wood on Sept. 5 that his company was not concerned with the affairs of the surface lines in Manhattan. Mr. Wood denied he had sent any motormen to help out in Manhattan.

ARREST MANY DISTURBERS.

Police Strike Activity Increases and Magistrates Are More Severe.

The police redoubled their efforts yesterday to check strike disorders, making many arrests, and Magistrates increased the severity of their sentences.

Four men got thirty days in the workhouse. They were Thomas Kelly of 313 West Forty-seventh Street, Cornelius and John Sullivan, brothers, of 129 West Sixty-seventh Street, and Conrad Derrick of 879 Tenth Avenue. The men, all formerly conductors on the Eighth Avenue line, threw bottles and stones at a green car.

Michael Stafford of 328 East Eighty-fourth Street, a striking motorman and walking delegate for the Amalgamated, was held in $1,500 bail by Magistrate Duell in Essex Market Court yesterday, on a charge of assault. Charles Miller of 500 West Twenty-first Street, a conductor on the Twenty-third Street Crosstown Line, accused Stafford of knocking him down and kicking him.

Charles Herman of 1,524 Madison Avenue, arrested on Sunday, was held in $2,000 bail by Magistrate McQuade in the Harlem Court. Herman was accused of having placed a plank across the Madison Avenue tracks at 103d Street.

One man was injured and twenty other passengers shaken up yesterday when two Third Avenue cars in charge of new crews came together in a rear-end collision at 139th Street and Third Avenue. A car operated by Motorman John Behrman of 204 East Fourteenth Street had stopped at 139th Street to discharge passengers, when the second trolley rammed it.

Two men who said they were James Tracey, 35 years old, of 3,463 Eighth Avenue, and John Sansy of 54 West Ninety-third Street, arrested yesterday at the Ninety-ninth Street station of the Third Avenue elevated, were fined $10 each by Magistrate Krotel in Yorkville Court on charges of disorderly conduct. They went to jail.

The four Silverman sisters, Esther, Rose, Martha, and Rebecca, all of 328 East 100th Street, who were arrested Sunday, accused of hurling epithets at crews of Madison Avenue cars that went by 102d Street, were held in $500 bail each for examination tomorrow.

A TARKINGTON PLAY WITH OTIS SKINNER

APERIPATETIC PHILOSOPHER

So rare on our stage in these days and so thoroughly enjoyable is the kind of fine, flashing, colorful performance Otis Skinner is able to give, that it is a pleasure to have him fitted in his new play with a rôle that makes room for his abundant vitality, his ringing, resonant voice, and his great grandeur of gesture. But the rôle affords him no more than just this revel of picturesqueness. It is a pity that the play itself is little more than a pleasant short story spun out for an entire evening, a talky and tenuous comedy that makes a most promising start and fails to keep the promise. So it is with "Mister Antonio," which was given to us for the first time last evening at the Lyceum Theatre. It is an offering of the house of Frohman and is the work of no less a man than Booth Tarkington.

It is not surprising that Mr. Tarkington, who, for all his many contributions to the theatre, is still pre-eminently a writer of fiction, should turn out a play in a novelist's vein, one so essentially undramatic that its climax is pasted on from without like an afterthought or a revenue stamp. This climax is so palpably an external contrivance that it might have been inserted bodily at the last dress rehearsal.

But it is decidedly surprising that so penetrating an observer, so discerning and sympathetic a student of human beings, should put forth anything so entirely shallow and unreal as this new piece at the Lyceum. It is decidedly surprising that the father of two such immortals as Penrod Scofield and William Sylvanus Baxter, Jr., (to say nothing of Jane,) should turn out such a piece of theatrical fiddle-faddle as "Mister Antonio," should dream of releasing a small-town comedy that is not much more faithful a piece of observation than "Broadway and Buttermilk." Avalonia, Pennsylvania, is a pale picture of the stage, stagey, and yet it is drawn by the man who, on the printed page, can make you breathe the very air and hear the very overtones of a little American community. It is surprising.

Antonio Camaradonio is a peripatetic philosopher, carrying his own version of the Golden Rule along the highways and byways of the country because he makes his living by the hurdy-gurdy. At the first sign of Spring, he shuts up his flower stand in New York and takes to the highroad. He sees many men in many places—sometimes the same man in many places.

For example, he is present in a Third Avenue saloon in time to rescue, at the fag-end of an ignominious debauch, a visitor from out of town who had come down to Jericho and fallen among thieves. Later he encounters this worthy as the Mayor and most dazzlingly whited sepulchre of a small and righteous Pennsylvania town. How he tries to use his knowledge about the Mayor as a club to protect a pretty servant girl they are all for running out of town because she had been seen at a roadhouse dance—that is the story of "Mister Antonio."

It is also the excuse for Antonio's outbursts of philosophy, his own theory that you must help all those who are in trouble lest the memory of your failure trouble you. How he himself is governed by a tyrannical "boss inside," who will not let him run off with the pretty servant girl until she simply insists on coming along—all this is set forth in a way that, after the first two pleasant and entertaining acts, becomes tedious by much repetition. It puts you in no humor to swallow the preposterous climax when, rather than take the mildly dissipated girl back into his household, the Mayor tries to have Antonio killed.

He attempts this by the neat device of putting a revolver in the way of a peripatetic lunatic, whose delusion that he was a General had always found expression in taking pot shops with cap pistols at his friend and companion, the hurdy-gurdy man—a delusion which, by way of exceptionally obvious preparation, had been kept in evidence off and on all evening.

Thus clumsily does "Mister Antonio" move on its way and even the delightful performance by Mr. Skinner does not make it satisfying. Imaginative, skillful, charming, Mr. Skinner, who is wont to burst the seams of a more restrictive modern rôle, is a treat to watch as the hurdy-gurdy man. And both in his appearance and in his unflagging vitality he seems not a day over 40.

Others in the play do well, notably Joseph Brennan, Robert Harrison, John McCabe, Agnes Marc, Eleanor Woodruff, Walter F. Scott, and Ernest A. Elton. The production is good enough, although the producer was careless to send to the rescue of the hurdy-gurdy man a girl who, from her window, could not possibly have seen his danger. But it is no such trifle as this as afflicts the playgoer at "Mister Antonio."

RUSSIAN BALLET ARRIVES.

The Lafayette Also Brings William Guard of the Metropolitan Opera.

The French liner Lafayette arrived yesterday from Bordeaux, bringing a number of opera singers and the Russian ballet for the coming season. William Guard, the press representative of the Metropolitan Opera Company, said that he had seen Gatti-Casazza, the general manager of the company, in Milan, and he expected him to sail from Bordeaux with Enrico Caruso on the French liner Espagne Sept. 30, or on the Lafayette Oct. 7.

"I saw Arturo Toscanini, the former conductor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, at Milan," Mr. Guard continued, "and he looked to be in excellent health. He is still as full of patriotism as ever, and I do not think there is much hope of Mr. Toscanini returning to wield the baton at the Metropolitan until the war is over."

The Russian ballet consisting of forty dancers, who have been brought over by Otto Kahn of the Metropolitan Opera Company, to tour the United States, will give the first performance at the Manhattan Opera-House before starting on the road. The première danseuse is Ekaterina Galanta, who is said to have received the prize for beauty at the Imperial Opera House in Petrograd from the Czar. Other dancers in the troupe are Mme. Drobecki, Mlle. Galina Chabetzkaia, Mme. Valentine Kashuba, and Mme. Lopokova, who has married Randolfo Barocchi, the Secretary of the organization.

Rawlins Cottenet of the Metropolitan Opera House, who went abroad to engage the Russian ballet, also returned on the Lafayette. Another passenger was Nadina Legat, a Russian coloratura soprano, who will make her début in this country with the Boston Opera Company at the Lexington Opera House on Nov. 9. She is a daughter of General Schuyaloff, a Russian naval officer doing land duty with the rank of General. Enrico Arensen, a Russian tenor, also arrived here for the first time to join the Boston Opera Company.

VERS LIBRE IN VAUDEVILLE.

"The Magical City," by Zoe Akins, Grievously Maltreated at the Palace

The unusual values of "The Magical City," a little tragedy in vers libre that was written by Zoë Akins and given last Spring with great success by the Washington Square Players, were scarcely recognizable in the lamentable performance exhibited yesterday afternoon at the Palace, when the piece had its first presentation in vaudeville. Of the original company three have been retained by Arthur Hopkins for this production, and of these only Frank Conroy was able to rivet the attention of the large and restless audience. As Petronelle the beautiful Margaret Mower was quite lost in the large auditorium, adding to a colorless performance the supremely unpardonable thing in any player—inaudibility. Indeed, the fear that a vaudeville audience would grow too impatient during Miss Akins's long preliminary exposition apparently goaded the players to destroy by sheer gabbling the really fine text. Lee Simonson's beautiful, but somewhat too erotic, setting is also retained, and, in addition to the hint contained in the silhouette of the Madison Square Garden Tower glimpsed through the window, the posters out front frankly describe the play as a dramatization of one of New York's "celebrated cases."

Bessie Clayton and Mildred Macomber are the dancers of the week, Lew Dockstader is there with a new monologue, and the clever Charley Grapewin repeats some old tricks of his. Wynne Pyle, an unusually proficient pianist, was cordially received, and pleased particularly with her least showy selection, a Grainger Irish melody. And then there is Ruth Roye. Miss Roye has some new songs, among them one of a vulgarity so shocking that it is enough to make the late B. F. Keith turn in his grave. Such exhibitions leave a taint in the theatre, attracting few and keeping out of it untold thousands.

STADIUM OPERA POSTPONED

Rain Puts Off "Die Walkuere" Until Tonight—Ticket Holders Confused.

The open-air performance of "Die Walküre," which was to have been given by members of the Metropolitan Opera Company at the City College Stadium last night, was postponed on account of the rain. The performance is now scheduled for this evening, beginning at 7:30. Owing to the short length of time between the storm and the scheduled hour for opening the performance there was some confusion among the ticketholders, and many persons went to the Stadium to find themselves locked out.

The tickets bore eight numbers which the holders were advised to call up in case they had doubts on account of the weather. Such was the rush on all of these lines that many patrons could not get in on them at all, and took a chance on going to the grounds. One telephone Opera House was at the wire for two hours steadily answering calls as rapidly as they came in. Last night's tickets will be honored at tonight's performance.

NEILSON-TERRY TO MARRY.

English Actress and Cecil King May Have Wed in New Orleans.

Phyllis Neilson-Terry, the English actress, and Cecil King, an English actor and stage manager, who are touring the United States in a vaudeville act, have canceled this week's engagement in Chicago, and are to be married during the week, if, indeed, they were not married yesterday in New Orleans. It was reported yesterday in theatrical circles that the ceremony was to have been performed during the day in the office of the British Consul in the Southern city.

Miss Neilson-Terry is the daughter of Julia Neilson and Fred Terry, the English players, and a niece of Ellen Terry. She came here two years ago to make her début in a production of "Twelfth Night." She has been here ever since playing in both Shakespearean and modern drama. Mr. King arrived in this country shortly before Miss Neilson-Terry. He was Sir Herbert Tree's stage director last Spring at the New Amsterdam, and appeared in "The Merchant of Venice."

Portmanteau Theatre Performances

Stuart Walker's Portmanteau Theatre, which can be set up and dismantled within a few hours, will play an engagement of three weeks in the Booth Theatre, beginning Monday afternoon, Nov. 27. Performances will be given Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday afternoons and Saturday mornings, and will not interfere with the regular performances of the current offering. A group of four one-act playlets will make up the first week's repertoire. Max Elser is managing the Portmanteau for Mr. Walker, and later will send it on a transcontinental tour.

London Pastor for Brooklyn Church

The Rev. Richard Roberts of London, England, has accepted a call to the Church of the Pilgrims, Henry and Remsen Streets in Brooklyn. This church has been without a pastor since the resignation last year of the Rev. Edward A. Sanderson. Mr. Roberts will take charge of the church on Jan. 1.

'POLLYANNA' STORIES CHARMING ON STAGE

COMEDY OF SENTIMENT

POLLYANNA, a comedy in four acts, by Catherine Chisholm Cushing, based on the book of that title by Eleanor H. Porter. At the Hudson.

It seems almost superfluous to record at this late date that Pollyanna is the "dear, glad girl" of a book and its sequel by Eleanor H. Porter, since "Pollyanna" and "Pollyanna Grows Up" were both widely read when they were first published. The mere mention, then, that "Pollyanna" is the title of a play that was acted here for the first time in the Hudson Theatre last night will undoubtedly make a great many persons glad because each is that kind of person and it is that kind of play.

Catherine Chisholm Cushing, who has contributed a number of plays to the New York stage, fashioned this comedy from the material of the two books. Pollyanna's many friends will want to know that the play sketches her life briefly from the time she comes to live with her aunt, Polly Harrington, to her return from the five years spent abroad, completely recovered from the accident that paralyzed everything but her gladness.

The first act takes place in Miss Harrington's parlor and discloses the "Lady Aiders" in the midst of one of their ear and barrel filling bees. Nancy, the Irish serving maid, is there tantalizing Mrs. Carmody, Miss Carroll, and Mrs. Gregg, the "aiders." Arrives then Pollyanna with Sodom and Gomorrah, her kitten and puppy, and shortly afterward Jimmy Bean, the amusing orphan.

In the second act Pollyanna scales the castle walls of John Pendleton, the hermit next door, who shut himself in twenty years before when Pollyanna's mother apparently jilted him and went to the Ozarks to marry a missionary. She carries the castle by storm, and the next act shows her moving in with Sodom and Gomorrah, Jimmy Bean and her other meagre effects. Then comes the motor accident just outside the door and Pollyanna is carried in, apparently crippled for life. But she is still glad, and even one who hasn't read the stories might safely hazard the guess that in the last act Dr. Chilton would marry Miss Harrington and be glad, that Pollyanna would recover and still be glad, and that Sodom and Gomorrah would grow up to be a fine, glad old cat and dog, respectively.

Criticism of such a play would be futile because it achieves its purpose—it makes a great many people glad. It has some of the elements that made "Peg o' My Heart," "Daddy Long Legs," and "The Cinderella Man" popular, and, like these, it will undoubtedly prosper. "Pollyanna" has already, in fact, made its sponsors glad by long engagements last season in Chicago and Philadelphia. The fact that it is a crudely constructed play, that all of its situations are hackneyed, that it often mixes pathos with bathos and that some will depart determined never to be pleasant again, does not matter. It oozes sentimentality and the crowd will love it.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"Arms and the Girl," the comedy by Grant Stewart and Robert Baker that William Harris, Jr., will present at the Fulton next Tuesday night, was produced last night in the Apollo Theatre, Atlantic City. Cyril Scott, Fay Bainter, Francis Byrne and Suzanne Jackson played the principal roles.

In Washington another play that will be seen here next week was produced last night. This was "Upstairs and Down," the comedy by Frederic and Fanny Hatton that will come to the Cort next Monday night.

A smoking and tea room is being built under the stage of the Princess Theatre. As soon as the alterations have been completed the little playhouse will be reopened with St. John Ervine's drama, "Jane Clegg," which will be followed by the musical piece, "Go To It."

Silvio Hein, who is responsible for the revival of "The Merry Wives of Windsor" in which Thomas A. Wise will be starred, has prepared a score of incidental music inspired by the Elizabethan period and pieced together with original passages. A symphony orchestra will play the score in conjunction with the performance.

Peggy Brooks, a singer of character songs who is new to New York, has been engaged by Florenz Ziegfeld for the new edition of his "Midnight Frolic."

Raymond L. Ditmar, curator of the Bronx Zoological Gardens, will lecture during the showing of his motion pictures of animal life at the Strand next week.

Marilynn Miller will dance in the new Winter Garden revue. This will be her third engagement there.

SCHWITOFSKY'S TERM CUT.

Governor Commutes Sentence of Prisoner Whom He Helped Convict.

ALBANY, Sept. 18.—Governor Whitman today commuted the sentence of Alfred Schwitofsky, convicted in New York County of burglary in the second degree and assault in the first degree, and sentenced on June 5, 1911, to twenty years in Sing Sing Prison. The sentence was commuted to five years, three months and two days, making the prisoner eligible for release at the next meeting of the Parole Board. Schwitofsky had twice been convicted of larceny in New Jersey and once in Pennsylvania, and before he was convicted of the crime for which he was sentenced, had pleaded guilty to a burglary charge in New York.

Alfred Schwitofsky was convicted on the charges of burglary and assault in the home of Theodore B. Dale, a women's tailor, at 71 West Forty-fifth Street. The case attracted attention because of the prominence of the persons who went to his assistance from the day he was sent to Sing Sing, and was the basis of a book by Rabbi Jacob Goldstein which resulted in the bringing about of an investigation of the State Parole Board.

The Prison Association, after examining the evidence in the case, lent its aid to the cause of the prisoner. Samuel Untermyer, who had given his services free in representing the convict in the courts, appeared for him before the Parole Board, assisted by Mark Eisner, Francis D. Gallatin, and K. Henry Rosenberg, all of whom volunteered their aid without compensation.

From affidavits obtained in 1912, they were able to show that Schwitofsky could not have been guilty of the assault charge. On Jan. 12, 1914, Mr. Whitman, then District Attorney, whose office had prosecuted Schwitofsky, recommended that Governor Glynn commute the sentence from twenty to ten years, on the ground that his investigation of the case had "raised doubt" in his mind "as to the prisoner's guilt of the crime of assault."

Several witnesses who had struggled with the Dale burglar at the time of the alleged robbery declared Schwitofsky was not the man. The Parole Board advised that Schwitofsky be freed. But Governor Glynn did not act on the suggestion, and Governor Whitman, on April 6, 1915, said he contemplated taking no action in the case.

Schwitofsky asserted that he was framed up by the police as the result of his having served a sentence in a Pennsylvania prison for robbing his employer of jewelry valued at $20,000. His identification and the testimony of Dale were said to be false. Dale, who was afterward charged with a serious crime, committed suicide on the eve of his trial.

Some of the most important testimony in Schwitofsky's behalf was given by Albert B. Unger, member of a law firm representing Dale. Mr. Unger said Dale had announced his threat to "send his accuser up," as he had done with another fellow, "for twenty years." Mr. Unger said Dale undoubtedly referred to Schwitofsky.

ON TRIAL AS SLAVER.

Samuel Kirsch, known in the underworld as "Sam the Peddler," was put on trial yesterday before Judge Rosalsky in General Sessions on a charge of white slavery. Kirsch was indicted following the testimony of Yushe Botwin, who charged the defendant with controlling a number of houses and the inmates in them. Botwin said that Kirsch was his most formidable competitor.

Rose Michaelson was one of the witnesses against Kirsch. Under examination by Assistant District Attorney James E. Smith she told of the life which she said Kirsch forced her to lead. While the defendant was out on bail she asserted that he visited her and threatened her with bodily harm if she testified against him. The trial will be continued this morning.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 18.—After living two years with a broken back, Henry Tolapke died last night in the Westchester County Hospital at Eastview. More than a year ago a delicate operation was performed on the patient, so that it was possible to remove him from the United Hospital at Port Chester to Eastview. He was paralyzed from his head down, but after the operation he was able to sit up in a wheeled chair.

In July, 1914, Tolapke, an employe of Louis B. Rolston at his home in Purchase, was struck by an automobile owned by Assistant Fire Chief Bealer in Main Street, White Plains. For six months the man lingered between life and death, and for months he was kept in a plaster of paris cast. Three operations were performed on his spine, which relieved some of the paralysis.

STUDENTS MARCH 100 MILES

LAKE GEORGE, N. Y., Sept. 18.—With complete military equipment, seventy Cornell students arrived here today after a march of more than 100 miles from the Plattsburg military training camp.

At the conclusion of the regular march to the Canadian border and back to Plattsburg, which is part of the training in the camp, the students left on the down-State trip Sept. 7, following the road along the shore of Lake Champlain. They expect to reach Schenectady on Friday, when they will entrain for Ithaca. By that time they will have covered about 200 miles on foot.

WAR MISSIONS BRING NOTABLES TO PORT

Parents of Aviator William Thaw Return from a Visit to Their Son in France.

Four liners arrived yesterday from Europe, landing 2,686 passengers of all classes. Among the 407 passengers on the French liner Lafayette, from Bordeaux, were Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Thaw, who have been to France to see their son, Lieutenant William Thaw of the French Army Aviation Corps, who was recently wounded by a shrapnel bullet in the left arm.

Another passenger on the Lafayette was Prince Poniatowski, the Polish-French banker, who has come over for two weeks on a special mission for the War Department in Paris in connection with the purchase of machinery for aeroplanes.

Lewis M. Iddings, who has been Secretary of the United States Embassy at Rome for five years, arrived on the Lafayette with his wife and daughter on leave of absence. He has been in charge of the relief work organized by Ambassador Thomas Nelson Page in Rome and will try to obtain American aid for the relief work for needy families that has been carried on by the clearing house in the Italian capital. He will return to his post shortly, Secretary Iddings said.

Another passenger who has been engaged in relief work in France was Miss Ethel Crocker, daughter of William H. Crocker, President of the Crocker National Bank of San Francisco. She was met at the pier by her mother and members of the family. Miss Crocker brought back a fine specimen of Belgian police dog.

One of the most interesting passengers on the Lafayette was Lieutenant Zinovi Peschkoff, a son of Maxim Gorky, the Russian novelist, who lost his arm at Arras while leading his men of the Foreign Legion against the German trenches. He was decorated by the French Government with the War Cross with palms, and has come here to spend three months lecturing. The Lieutenant, who is a modest young soldier, explained that he lost his arm through being hit with an explosive bullet.

Another passenger on the Tuscania was Johannis D. J. Visseer, one-time secretary to President Paul Kruger of the Transvaal Republic, who has come over on a mission for the South African Government. C. Rattray, director of the Union Steamship Company of New Zealand, arrived on his way home to Wellington via San Francisco.

One of the New York passengers was Lieutenant L. M. Tobin of 490 Riverside Drive, who has been serving at the Somme front with the first Canadian field company, and who has returned to recuperate from an attack of trench fever, he said. The Tuscania had 420 passengers.

The Regina d'Italia brought 1,272 passengers from Genoa and Naples and carried a quick-firing gun mounted at her stern for protection in case of submarine attacks similar to those on the Lafayette and Tuscania. The Holland-America liner Noordam, with 577 passengers from Rotterdam and Falmouth, was the only liner out of the four which was not armed. Instead of guns she had the Dutch flag painted on both sides of her hull on a large scale with her name so that German submarine commanders could make no mistake.

NOTED FEUDIST KILLED.

Mose Feltner Shot by Federal Officer While Resisting Arrest.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Sept. 18.—Word reached here today from Perry County that Mose Feltner, known throughout the county as one of the leaders in the Hargis-Cockrell feud in Breathitt County in 1906, had been shot and killed by United States Marshal G. A. Sizemore while Feltner was resisting arrest.

It was Feltner who testified that he had accepted employment to kill James Marcum in 1906, but had instead warned Marcum that an attempt would be made on his life. It was this confession that led to the arrest and trial of Judge James Hargis, Sheriff Callahan, Curtis Jett and numerous others. Both Hargis and Callahan were acquitted, but the feud was apparently broken.

STIRRING UP DISCORD.

The sincere desire of all but a very few Americans and Mexicans in the present crisis is that friendly relations between the two countries shall be maintained and increased, that an international understanding may be developed which cannot be shaken in the future by the rash circulation of misinformation and the false testimony of the few on both sides of the border who would like for their own purposes to involve the nations in war. The international commission which sits at New London is pursuing its deliberations with commendable zeal and patience. The question of safeguarding the border line is the first difficult problem to be solved. It is no secret that the American and Mexican Commissioners have not yet agreed on this point, that agreement will be difficult. We cannot consistently remove our troops from Mexican territory while there is a good reason for keeping them there; we cannot lessen our strong guard of regulars and militia on this side of the border until we are assured that border raiders have been suppressed. When a band of desperadoes strong enough to invade the important city of Chihuahua and take possession of its public buildings is operating so near our territory, it is clear that if our troops were not held in readiness more border raids would be inevitable. The Chihuahua bandits were defeated and many of them were put to death, but many more remain. Until CARRANZA can prove his ability to suppress outlawry in Northern Mexico it will not be safe for us to relax our precautionary measures. While that point is in dispute the situation will remain critical.

But the de facto Government is restoring order elsewhere in Mexico. It is beginning to put its promised reforms into practice. They may not all be conceived in wisdom, but they are intended to serve the good purpose of elevating the standards of citizenship and manhood and the republic, and they include neither general confiscation nor repudiation. In this situation it would be well if disturbing influences in the United States could be checked. Probably the lie factories cannot be suppressed and the activities of the confirmed interventionists will never cease. But well-meaning American citizens can surely refrain in speech and action from stirring up discord. We had thought that all the mischievous stuff relating to the acquisition of Mexican territory by the United States had been effectively discarded. But a new proposal that our Government should acquire by purchase all that part of Mexico lying north of the twenty-eighth parallel, between Laredo and Guaymas, has now been conspicuously put forward, and it will serve only to awaken new distrust among our neighbors.

The United States does not want a foot of Mexican territory. The only way we can really help Mexico is to help her, as best we can, to settle her own troubles. Just such proposals as this cause a lot of mischief, no matter how well meant they may be. CARRANZA's fresh anxiety lest the commission at New London may be disposed to interfere in the internal affairs of his country is based probably on false reports and the persistence of such profitless and ill-advised discussions as this in our newspapers.

THE SIXTEEN-INCH GUN.

It is gratifying to know that our first sixteen-inch naval gun has fired its first shell in such a manner as to prove its efficacy in war on land. The shot, to be sure, accomplished more than was intended, as it penetrated the carefully prepared target of armor plate and sand and smashed a dwelling occupied by inoffensive folk. The targets in the future will be somewhat stouter. But the utility of the gun when mounted in the Indian Head proving grounds is assured, and it only remains to be seen what can be done with such heavy ordnance on shipboard.

Our heaviest marine guns, until now, have been the fourteen-inch pieces on the larger dreadnoughts. The ships of the Queen Elizabeth class in the British Navy carry fifteen-inch guns. Our sixteen-inch guns should, when fully charged, carry a shell weighing more than a standard ton many miles and penetrate at about ten sea miles armor plate ten inches thick. There has been some doubt expressed of the utility at sea of larger guns than the fourteen-inch. For coast defense, of course, no gun that is workable from a firm base can be too large. The trend of opinion in the navy, however, has been toward the largest possible gun, and the naval sixteen-inch gun, having proved effective on land, will soon have a trial at sea.

THE UNMENTIONABLE.

Unreconciled and irreconcilable Mr. JOHN J. O'CONNELL, Chairman of the Progressive County Committee, cannot be persuaded of the affectionate ardor of Mr. ROOSEVELT for Governor WHITMAN:

> He thinks so little of WHITMAN that he never mentions him.

Mr. ROOSEVELT thinks so little of Mr. FAIRBANKS that he never mentions him in public. The Oyster Bay list of the unmentionable includes all the Taft leaders of 1912, all the sinners against the light of social justice, all the "crooks" of 1912. What of it? They ought to be glad that he doesn't mention them. His notices wouldn't be complimentary. But unforgivable as the unmentionable are, the Colonel will work with them, on his own hook, to "beat WILSON," who, in the Colonel's simple psychology, has succeeded the Republican Party as the sum of all villainies. His speech is all-hot against WILSON. His silence covers the Republican undesirables.

CONTROLLING CITY SALARIES.

The expenditure by the city of $100,000,000 annually in salaries for duties for which there is no standard either of duties or pay necessarily involves waste. There may be no more waste than the conditions make necessary, but the first step toward placing the blame for the waste is to devise a rule by which it may appear whether the duties and the pay are in right relation. A long step in that direction, if not the last step, is taken by the report of the Bureau of Standards which now awaits utilization in connection with the budget under preparation. There remains something which the bureau recommends, and which the city cannot do for itself. Many city salaries are fixed by the State, including the salaries of county officers paid by the city. An appeal must be made to the Legislature to adopt the standards of the bureau, or to allow the city to use them in payment for duties imposed upon the city by the Legislature.

An example of the wide swath the application of this rule would cut in the city's salary list is afforded by the proposals respecting the county officer group. It is proposed that the duties of the Sheriffs in all the city's five counties should be distributed among suitable city departments for the most part, and that for the remainder there should be one Sheriff at $12,000, instead of five at from $15,000 to $6,000, with fees sometimes carrying the total above that of the President's salary. As that is too thorough for present adoption the proposed alternative is that the salary of the Sheriffs of the several counties should be about halved, without fees.

Specific mention, for illustration, may be made of the office of Chief Clerk of the Surrogate of Kings. He is a leading politician, and receives $9,000 by statute. The Bureau of Standards thinks that duties of that sort are sufficiently paid at a range of $4,440 to $5,100. In the present case it is said that there would be no objection to appointment at the highest salary at once, since there is nothing personal in the proposal, and no criticism is intended of the manner in which the duties are performed. The sole [illegible] is that establishing a rule by which appointments and pay should be regulated would safeguard the city and do justice to faithful workers. The Legislature will be asked to authorize such changes, just as the Board of Estimate now has a guide which it can use if it will, and which can be perfected by use better than in any other way.

It will be seen at once that the merits of the proposal are an incentive to opposition. There may be officials who will agree that others are overpaid, but there is none who will not resist reduction in his own case. As so many of them hold their positions for political reasons, there are impediments such as wrecked similar proposals before the Constitutional Convention. Opposition of this sort is silent, persistent, and efficacious. It can be overcome only by equal persistence in pressing the merits of the plan. The proposed standards of duties and salaries have been in practical application for a year. Previously the salary list had been growing at the rate of from $2,000,000 to $2,500,000 yearly. Since 1915 the increase within the control of the Board of Estimate has been reduced to $300,000, without any hardship to those already holding places. The Tax Budget Committee is now making such use of the standards as is practicable in connection with the budget for next year. There have been increases to new minima, compensated by reductions of overpayments. There have been additional appointments compensated by abolition of useless offices. Already there has been a saving of $625,000, excepting salaries of policemen, firemen, and teachers. The economy was realized although there were 5,500 increases of salary to 1,100 decreases, and although there were 2,100 new appointments, there having been 2,800 unnecessary offices abolished. With that example of what the city is doing for itself the State will be, or should be, embarrassed to find reasons for not lending a hand.

THE WRONG WAY.

It is a strange and much-belated request that the striking street car men and some members of allied unions who sympathize with them have made to the Mayor. They want him to use his influence to adjust the differences between them and the traction companies. The "difference" about which the strikers are chiefly concerned is that between their present condition of unemployment and the happier situation of the men who, wiser than they, refused to go out.

The strike has failed and the men want to get back to work, but they have gone about it in the wrong way. Obviously, the Interborough can have nothing to say to them, since nine-tenths of its men, perfectly satisfied with their own brotherhood within the trade, have declared that they would consider any negotiation with the Fitzgerald Association as an injury to them. The Third Avenue men who went out are even worse off, for they have been informed by the Mayor and the Public Service Commission that their strike was an act of bad faith, a violation of their agreement with the company, and that it should be called off at once. The men from the "allied unions" who, whatever pretense may be set up, are taking part in the agitation not because of their own grievances, but in response to appeals for a sympathetic movement in other trades, have, of course, no standing in any negotiation with the traction companies. The "sympathetic strike" has gained no headway, partly because of the knowledge that under recent court decisions the risks are very great, but also for the reason that men in receipt of good wages are little likely to give up their jobs to show their sympathy for misguided fellow-workers betrayed into a disastrous blunder.

The strikers who left work on the street car lines do not need the Mayor's help. They can recover the places they have lost by giving up the futile strike and asking to be taken back. All the strikers, by this time, should be aware that Mr. FITZGERALD has done them an ill-service, that he was wrong in the beginning, and that his strike has failed. For their own comfort the best thing they can do is to return to work. But first they should ask Mr. FITZGERALD to discontinue his labors, which have got them into so much trouble, and recommend to him prompt departure from the scene where he has gained so little credit.

A CONTEMPORARY OF THE FIRST FOLIO.

Dover on the Cocheco is the oldest town in New Hampshire. It was settled in 1623, and in its first century at least was hardly visited by foreigners. The old American families whom the Puritan pleasantly called the "Bloody Salvages," and whom COTTON MATHER described as "the Tawnies," had the habit of raiding Dover; and the massacre and captivities of the Doverians in 1689 were long famous in New England. Remote from public haunt, "pure Anglo-Saxon," whatever that is, Dover lived its peaceful life until in our time it came to be a considerable manufacturing city. Immigrants of many races came in. The inflowing tide of cosmopolitanism is significantly indicated in a Dover dispatch to The Manchester Union which tells us SHIKERY ABOARAB—is he Arab, Syrian, Armenian?—has got a verdict of damages against BOLUS [BORIS?] SESSINE, presumably a Russian, for an alleged assault with a club.

While regretting the impetuosity of Mr. SESSINE, we can't but be grateful for an incident which throws such light on the polygeneity of the ancient capital of Strafford County. The good old race of Eleazers and Ezekiels, Eliakims and Shearjashubs would stare and gasp at SHIKERY and BORIS, wondering if Parthians, Medes, and Elamites had invaded the Granite State at last. The East is transferring itself in part "Down East." No doubt the not distant successors of Dr. GALLINGER and Mr. HOLLIS will be Aboarabs and Sessines; and no doubt they will be worthy of the succession. Meanwhile it fillips the imagination not uncheerfully to think of SHIKERY ABOARAB and BORIS SESSINE in the senior settlement of Yankee New Hampshire.

MR. HUGHES'S SECOND TOUR.

Mr. HUGHES's first tour was preliminary, his advocates said. Now he is starting his definitive campaign. At Peoria today he will begin his second progress. Twenty-five speeches are to be made in Indiana. The number seems to denote a strong apprehension among the Republican managers that the Hoosier State is one of superdubiety.

Fair-minded Democrats, and in particular the independents whom Mr. HUGHES or Mr. WILSON must win, will hope that the Republican candidate's arguments will be able, clear, worthy of the great place he holds in the public mind, of the great post to which he aspires. It may be that hitherto he has been groping his way, wandering in a multiplicity of unreal issues, that the intellectual grasp, the expression of courageous and concrete policies, the power of lucid thought and speech, which have not been too apparent in his public utterances since his nomination, will now be displayed.

Let us hope so. For the illumination of the public mind, for the dignity of the canvass, a great debate between him and Mr. WILSON is desirable. They do not have to speak from the same platform to insure such a debate, nor is the local effect of their words of primary importance. The country reads their speeches; and all but those who are docile Republicans or Democrats by habit can make up their minds, if they have not done so already. Mr. WILSON is one of the most forcible and most persuasive of public speakers. In any generation of American statesmen he would have been eminent among the memorable debaters and masters of speech. In the next month and a half there should be between him and Mr. HUGHES such an exposition and discussion of Republican and Democratic policies as will inform and enlighten every reader. Mr. WILSON's ample competence as an exponent and an advocate will not be questioned. If Mr. HUGHES has so far seemed to critical observers somewhat discursive, scattering, cautious, and not wholly frank, his limping cause is full apology; and he may concentrate in his closing, as he has been diffuse in his opening, speeches. The country has the right to look for an intellectual treat. Perhaps the best wine has been left for the last.

The Adamson eight-hour legislation, not, it is to be hoped, without just reference to the supplementary measures which Mr. WILSON urged upon Congress and will urge in its next session, is to be conspicuous in Mr. HUGHES's new Western journey. Mr. WILSON can ask nothing better. The immortal and indispensable protective tariff will be advanced as the cure of "false prosperity." Wasn't the Payne-Aldrich tariff regarded, and not by "Democratic freetraders" alone, as a "hold-up" by the protected interests?

A STORY THAT "CAME TRUE."

Polonius has become a war correspondent, and describes the new monster diversely. By the mass, and 'tis like a camel indeed. It is backed like a weasel. Or like a whale? Very like a whale. So we hear that "Willie," the new terror, is like an ichthyosaurus; no, like a toad; no, like a caterpillar. It leans against a brick wall, and the wall falls; then it "rises," as if it had legs, and walks over the ruins; "tramples around the machine-gun emplacement, having a grand time"; crushes the guns "under its heavy ribs"; "plows about"; "sits down on heaps of ruins"; breaks down trees as if they were matches, and goes "over the barricades like an elephant." Its gait is described as a waddle. It is constantly spoken of as "walking," as if it had legs. It "takes ditches like a kangaroo." It cannot in any respect resemble any armored car that ever existed, or the soldiers, used to strange shapes, would not laugh uproariously at the sight of it when they see it "lolloping along over the roads."

Overhead come the British airmen, "like a flock of birds, flying low over the mists." Only a few years ago such a battlefield would have seemed a Jules Verne dream. The most gifted imagination fails when it undertakes to penetrate a quarter of a century into the future. By all odds the most real novel of the future ever written was H. G. WELLS's "War of the Worlds." It depicted a descent of the Martians on our planet. The idea was that if there are intelligences on Mars, they must be countless ages in advance of ours, because life began on that planet so long before it did on ours. So Mr. WELLS sought to imagine what a civilization ages ahead of ours would devise in the way of military science; and to make the difference clearer he divested the Martians of muscles and almost of bodies; they had outgrown these and become little else than immense brains.

But this daring speculation about the future has been practically realized in the twenty years since the novel was written. In those two decades mankind has come up with Mr. WELLS's Martians. In vain the earthmen assailed the Martians with bullets. The Martians sent out against them a great black gas which fell upon their armies and asphyxiated them. That was a wild imagining, but the Germans used that black gas early in the war, the Allies promptly followed suit, and it is a commonplace now. He imagined a "heat ray" which destroyed men, fell upon their magazines and blew them up. Liquid fire is in use in this war. Lastly, the Martians moved about in armored cars raised on stilts high in the air. These things walked about among the helpless armies, trod them down while they fired in vain, trampled on them, threw down buildings. The very deeds of "Willie," described in the dispatches, were anticipated almost in the very words; the Martian "Willie," too, made ruins of brick walls, rose and walked over the ruins, trampled around, having a grand time, crushed guns, plowed about, sat down on heaps of ruins, broke down trees like matches, and all the rest of it.

The little brain of man, so abjectly helpless in Mr. WELLS's fiction, has beaten his Martians in twenty years; for his Martians had no submarines of war and commerce. The Martian had something like a periscope, but only for use when "Willie" was abroad. It is evidently of no use for any imagination to try to prefigure the world even a hundred years hence; Mr. WELLS thought he was making a not inadequate guess at what brains would come to in ages, and he only guessed what they actually have come to in twenty years. The mind of man seems adequate to any task except guessing at its own possibilities.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Municipal School of Business.

In adding to its curriculum a new course that includes commercial law, mathematics for engineers in minor positions, and advanced instruction in the theory and practice of accounting, as well as the elementary studies of the ordinary business schools, the College of the City of New York is extending its activities after the manner made familiar by the State universities of the Middle West.

Some may regret, indeed, that the city should be thus expanding its educational system at the top while the imperfection of the results achieved in the lower parts are the subject of much justified criticism, but it is probable that the reforming of our elementary schools is hastened rather than delayed by changes like this one. They give, at least, needed recognition to the fact that not only children need teaching—that there is social profit, also, in increasing the efficiency of those who have passed what used to be considered the school-going age.

The new course at the College of the City of New York has been carefully planned by an Advisory Committee selected by Mayor MITCHEL from among the city's best-known and most successful business men, and the names of its members—GANO DUNN, HENRY BRUERE, M. FRIEDSAM, HENRY W. DODGE, HENRY MOSKOWITZ, C. G. PFEIFFER, CHARLES STRAUSS, L. M. WALLSTEIN, and A. D. FLINN—give assurance that the work to be done will be practical, and that there is real need of special training for business and for public service. Both are to be provided under the plan as formulated, and the lectures in the several branches are to be by experts. For their services only nominal charges will be made. As a result, some of the courses are free and for the others the fees are only enough to meet running expenses and make unnecessary an additional charge on the city treasury.

As most of those expected to take advantage of the opportunities thus offered are already employed during the day, the lectures will be delivered in the evening.

Retired Only to Die.

From Chicago comes what is called the story of a man who died because his heart was broken. The description is certainly inaccurate, but it will serve, and the story has its lesson, though it is not exactly the lesson that lies on the surface.

JOHN AGNEW, it seems, had worked in one of Chicago's municipal departments for sixty years. The right to retire on a pension had long been his, but he refused to exercise it. At last, when he had reached the age of 84, which was on July 1, his desire to remain at the desk he had occupied so long was overcome as gently as possible. He protested—said that he would go on working for nothing rather than fall into a state of idleness, which he felt would be fatal. He had to go.

When the old man drew his first month's pension the Mayor and other officials made something of a ceremony of the payment, and congratulated him on his well-earned leisure. AGNEW thanked them for their good-will, but again insisted that retirement was a sentence of death. And already he is dead!

It is more than likely that the retirement did have something to do with his demise, for though that conclusion is open to doubt, as are all assumptions of "afterward, therefore because," still the frequency with which such changes as that forced upon AGNEW are followed by death indicates the existence of a causal relation in at least some of the cases. The chances are, however, that in most instances these deaths really result from the same physical changes that brought about retirement, whether voluntary or involuntary, and it may well be that AGNEW lived longer, though idle and unhappy, than he would have done had he kept at work.

It was his fault—or misfortune—that in the course of his long service he had not developed interests other than those connected with his routine activities. If he had done so, perhaps his record as an employé would not have been quite as good, but, on the other hand, it might have been even better. At any rate, retirement on a pension untainted by charity would then have made him happy instead of disconsolate.

A Mistake Proves Disastrous.

In the town of Elgin, Ill., though the people there are in most ways intelligent and progressive, there is just now a brisk little epidemic of typhoid fever—a fact showing lack of those qualities in other and important ways. The explanation of the epidemic is simple.

Elgin has the commission form of government, which, of course, is all right when it is all right, but it is seriously wrong when the various city departments are put in incompetent hands, and Elgin intrusted the guarding of its health to a harnessmaker—an amiable and respected citizen without any knowledge of sanitation. When reports of typhoid began to come into his office a few weeks ago, he allowed them to pile up on his desk and did nothing.

Naturally the disease spread rapidly. At last the doctors of the town started an investigation of their own, and, without the exercise of any official authority, they soon discovered that the drinking water used by the employés of the watch factory, which is the town's chief industrial centre, was coming in part from a river that was seriously contaminated. That has been remedied now, and the epidemic will soon cease, but it has already cost eleven lives, and more victims are sure to die before it ends.

It is to be expected that Elgin will now abandon the decidedly antiquated notion that the head of a Health Department need not be a specialist. It may even so amend its charter as to prevent that office from going to anybody who can convince the local politicians that he has a claim to its salary or dignity.

An Opinion on the War's Course.

The war is progressing most satisfactorily from the Allies' standpoint. I was never so confident as now in their eventual complete triumph. All of them are at length getting into the irresistible stride with which the Germans began the war. The spirit of England is manifestly determined to go on and on, no matter at what cost, until Germany's overthrow is accomplished.

There are optimists who believe that the end is rapidly approaching, but they trust, unduly, I think, to the early collapse of Germany. This, in my judgment, is still remote, and I believe the Summer of next year will still see fighting going on, but so close to Berlin that the Germans will then, perhaps, throw up the sponge in a contest already hopeless for them.

A NEW WORK FOR FRANCE.

Paris, Sept. 6, 1916.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Nearly one hundred thousand soldiers have come back from the French front with the germs of tuberculosis. These soldiers, often incompletely cured after their first treatment in the military hospitals, return home to their families to be nursed and supported until they are well enough to work; and during that time they spread the contagion of their disease and too often die of it themselves.

Yet tuberculosis is one of the most curable of diseases. Except in the last stages it rests with the patient to recover if he chooses; but to "choose" he must have help, moral and material. He must be shown how to get well, and he must be given the chance to get well.

Hurried measures are being taken by the French Government and by various private organizations to meet this appalling situation; but every resource must be called upon to make even a beginning, and at no moment have American initiative and American sympathy for France had a more magnificent opportunity for showing themselves. America leads the way in the open-air treatment of tuberculosis; and a group of Americans here in Paris, wishing to make this treatment available, are already organizing a formation of American sanatoriums where French soldiers affected with tuberculosis will receive the most modern and scientific care.

The American Ambassador in Paris is the Honorary President of our committee, the President is Mrs. Edward Tuck, and Mlle. Chaptal, well known for her long experience in philanthropic work, and I are the Vice Presidents. A hard-working committee, composed of French and American members, all equally devoted to the work and experienced in the administration of hospitals, have taken up the task of starting these sanatoriums as rapidly as possible. We propose to put an American specialist on tuberculosis at the head of the general medical management, and our hope is to start auxiliary committees in all the large cities of the United States, to make this American charity known in America. The cost of establishing a bed is estimated at $200, and the running expenses of a bed for one year at a little less than $400, so that $600 will cover the founding of a bed and a year's nursing. We hope that in time American cities, and also private individuals, will be willing to found either a ward or a whole sanatorium, to which their name can be given, and of which a regular record will be sent to them, so that they will feel themselves to be participating directly in the work.

We are opening this week in Paris a small trying-out hospital, in a large garden, where the men will be received and their cases studied before their final destination is decided on. We are also preparing two houses of about seventy-five beds each in the country, and are negotiating for a large place near Paris, where we shall have the same number of beds. The object of our committee is not only to cure the curable, but to teach them a trade or occupation, enabling them to earn their living in the country, or at least away from great cities. A member of the committee has already placed at our disposal a château in Touraine, surrounded by a large park and vineyards, and this will be used as an agricultural training school to which suitable tuberculous subjects may be sent. It is the intention of the committee to keep each patient as long as his condition requires, thus supplementing the work projected by the Government, which, owing to the immense numbers to be dealt with, cannot give more than temporary treatment.

This is only a beginning; but it is all that our funds will permit us to undertake at present, and we cannot carry on these houses for more than six months. I may add that the Ministry of War is much interested in our plan, and that we have just been notified that it will extend to us the same privileges that have been given to the American Ambulance at Neuilly since the beginning of the war. This adoption by the "Service de Santé" is of the utmost importance, as it facilitates our work in every way, besides being a guarantee of the approval of the French Government.

Meanwhile, numbers of poor tuberculous soldiers, after preliminary treatment in the Government sanatoriums, are coming daily to our office imploring to be taken in, and we feel that never could it be more truly said of any charity than of this, that he who gives quickly gives twice.

I therefore venture to urge you to publish this letter as early as possible, mindful of the splendid response that your readers have made to all my former appeals, and begging them to remember that, great as the other needs of France have been, none has been greater or more urgent than this one.

We hope in a few weeks to have organized a committee in New York, but meanwhile gifts of money may be addressed directly to me, at 53, Rue de Varenne, Paris, and donations in kind, such as woolen sweaters, warm woolen blankets, gauze for handkerchiefs, and woolen socks and dressing gowns, may be sent, through the War Relief Clearing House, to the office of the "Oeuvre des Tuberculeux de la Guerre," 61, Rue de Varenne, Paris.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Surely no one will deny the price of the Danish islands is tremendous when compared with their natural resources and industrial possibilities; but when it is considered that these islands may be used as an impregnable naval base to supply ammunition and protection to the Panama Canal the issue is seen to be not size, industry, nor economic possibilities, but military necessity.

TENEMENTS.

It is far inferior to her neighbor's;
But she has taken it on a life-lease,
And the Landlord is beyond any appeal.
With envious eyes, sometimes,
She sees rosy cheeks and scarlet lips,
And eyes that are dark and beautiful;
She sees thick, rippling hair, and regular facial contours;
But she cannot see that her neighbor-Soul
Is any more worthy than she
Of such a magnificent dwelling.
Why should the Landlord
Have shown this partiality?
Or was it all mere luck?
The carriages of the nobility
Drive up to the neighbor-Soul's porte-cochère,
And my Soul watches them, from her shabby tenement;
The wise, the great, the gifted—
They are all attracted by the dwelling
Of the neighbor-Soul;
And my Soul is attracted, too;
But her admiration is tinged with despair!
She looks forward longingly to the termination of her lease;
And every day of her life she whispers to herself
That if the Landlord is possessed of any justice
He will give her a better tenement—
Next Time!

FLORENCE VAN CLEVE.

SHALL BELGIUM BE INDEMNIFIED?

Socialist Leader, Answering Morris Hillquit, Insists on Payment for Injury to the Country.

By EMILE VANDERVELDE,

Member of the Belgian Cabinet and Delegate of the Belgian Labor Party to the International Socialist Bureau.

At the end of the European war should the victors exact indemnity from the vanquished?

My comrade and friend Morris Hillquit, in an article in THE NEW YORK TIMES, expresses an opinion in the negative.

He supports his view of the matter by (1) the platform of international socialism, (2) the resolutions recently adopted at The Hague by the Socialists from neutral countries, and (3) the opinion of Belgian Socialists, and, especially, the opinion of the undersigned, Emile Vandervelde, member of the Belgian Government charged with our national defense, and also member of the International Socialist Bureau.

As I have been thus brought into the discussion, I ask the hospitality of your columns in order to reply.

First—I agree perfectly with Hillquit in the opinion that, for the sake of future peace, Socialists should oppose punitive indemnities, which might be the germ of new conflicts; but this is no reason for rejecting the principle of giving reparative indemnity to a country that has been the victim of unjust aggression.

In the second place, I have read attentively the resolutions adopted by the neutral Socialists at The Hague, and, contrary to what Hillquit seems to say, I do not find a word—not a single word—which, either explicitly or by implication, declares against the principle of reparation for damage inflicted.

Finally, and this brings me to my personal attitude in the matter, I cannot avoid protesting against the assertion that many Belgian Socialists, including myself, have declared ourselves for the restoration of Belgium, but not for her indemnification.

Indeed, when I spoke of "restoring" ("restaurer") Belgium, I meant, as I could only mean, "to replace her in the situation in which she would be if the Germans, who had guaranteed her neutrality, had respected that neutrality."

Would this be the case, or would the ends of justice be satisfied, if, at the termination of the conflict, the invaders of Belgian soil should be allowed to withdraw, with the honors of war, leaving behind them devastation and ruin—factories emptied of their machinery and of their raw materials, 20,000 houses destroyed, the public debt increased by two billion francs, Dinant sacked, Visé and Termonde burned, the University of Louvain in ruins, the churches and other historic monuments of Flanders reduced to dust and ashes?

No! That would really be too easy!

Suppose that tomorrow the United States, in spite of their strong desire for peace, should be attacked without provocation, and that an enemy fleet should bombard, burn, and ravage the most beautiful sections of New York, or of Boston, or of Baltimore, killing thousands of innocent people, children, women, and old men; would there be found, I ask, a single American citizen—even the most pacific of Socialists—who would maintain that, on the day when the aggressor acknowledged his defeat, it would not be elementary justice to compel him to repair the damage he had caused?

Hillquit, however, holds a different opinion when it is a question of us in Belgium, or of the Serbs, or of the unfortunate inhabitants of unfortunate Poland.

He fears that, by exacting indemnity from the authors of the war, new wars may be brought about in the future.

Nothing would be more dangerous to future peace than the acceptance by the world of the idea that Governments may disregard good faith and law, that they may do anything they please, that they may pillage, burn, despoil, and ruin peaceful neighbors without incurring the penalty of repairing the damage, without incurring any risk, in case of defeat, except to relinquish what they have not already destroyed.

I am a Socialist, as Hillquit is.

I hope, as he does, that at the end of this terrible conflict there will not remain in Europe any oppressed nations, neither on the one side nor on the other.

I am as hostile as he is to a system of punitive indemnities exacted with the chimerical object of ruining the vanquished for the profit of the victors.

But I do not cease, and I have never ceased, to demand justice for martyred Belgium.

From the financial point of view, the question of indemnity is only of secondary importance. With or without that money, Belgium will rise again from her ashes. But, on the other hand, from the moral point of view the question of indemnity is essential. It is essential to know whether in international law, as in private law, he who by his own act causes damage to another shall be compelled to repair the damage.

If, in reply to this question, socialism answers in the negative, then socialism denies its own principles.

NEW BILL-OF-LADING LAW

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read your editorial regarding the Federal Bills of Lading act with a great deal of interest, and have noted with pleasure the importance you attach to this constructive legislation.

The enactment of the law at the session of Congress just closed was the result of the efforts of Secretary McAdoo and other members of the International High Commission. The commission has given careful consideration to the question of bills of lading as instruments of international trade, and at its meeting in Buenos Aires, in April, 1916, recommended that the American Governments adopt uniform legislation on the basis of the uniform act which has been adopted by sixteen of our States, and which served as the model of the Federal law just enacted.

The great importance of the subject was impressed upon all delegates who attended the Buenos Aires meeting, and immediately upon his return to the United States Secretary McAdoo took up the Pomerene bill with members of Congress and urged its prompt passage. Its enactment is one of the most important practical benefits resulting from the activities of the commission to improve financial and commercial relations between the United States and Latin America.

One of the purposes of the commission is to secure the simplification and uniformity of inter-American commercial law, and similar action on the subject of uniform bills of lading is anticipated in several other countries. The United States section of the commission is circulating translations of and commentaries upon our legislation.

The passage of the new law has placed the United States section of the commission in a most favorable position to take up this question with the countries of Latin America. Without the new law, it would have been difficult and rather incongruous to advise other countries to enact adequate legislation to protect commercial credit and stability at home and abroad when our own Government had not passed a similar law.

Many organizations have sought to secure such legislation during the last decade, and none has worked harder in this cause than the American Bankers' Association, as you rightly state in your editorial; but it should be added that without the active support of Secretary McAdoo and the International High Commission the bill unquestionably would still be pending in Congress.

I thought you would like to have this information about the practical work of the International High Commission in this connection, especially in view of the fact that the passage of the measure is only the beginning, as far as the commission is concerned. It will continue its efforts to draw the importance of the question to the attention of the republics of Latin America, so that the result will be not only a uniform bill of lading in the United States but a uniform bill of lading in the Western Hemisphere.

C. E. McGUIRE,
Assistant Secretary General, International High Commission.

New Jersey Colleges for Women.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In today's (Sunday's) paper you published an article in which you state that "for the first time in the history of New Jersey young women of that State will be able to begin a college course this year."

Allow me to state that the College of St. Elizabeth, Convent Station, N. J., was founded as early as 1899. The degrees of A. B., B. S., B. M., and A. M. have been conferred in that institution ever since and have full recognition at all our big universities. I think it is exceedingly unfair to ignore St. Elizabeth simply because it is a Catholic institution. Rutgers and a few other colleges are likewise sectarian, but, being Protestant, they are not ignored by the general press, of course. We can boast of a large number of graduates filling all kinds of positions, having studied at all kinds of universities where they took the higher degrees. All these women came from the various States of this country, even from New York.

JUDGE NIPPERT'S REPORT.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have only recently read in your Sunday Magazine Judge Nippert's article on his visit to the German front, his interview with the Emperor, and his account of Russian atrocities in East Prussia.

I was especially interested in what Judge Nippert said in reference to Rheims and Louvain, and the ability of the visitor to Zerney in the German lines to count "every tile in the roof" of Rheims Cathedral. So far as Louvain is concerned, if Judge Nippert knows anything about it, he must know that the library of the university, which was destroyed by the Germans, is quite distinct from the Hotel de Ville, to which he refers, which, as every one knows, has been preserved. To put it mildly, his statement in regard to Louvain is disingenuous.

As to Rheims, six days after Judge Nippert was at Zerney, I was not in a neighboring village but in and about the Cathedral itself, and, as an architect, I can give positive assurance that, although the vaulting still stands, the roof of the Cathedral was non-existent. As the custodian told me that no shells had fallen on the Cathedral for some weeks, I have no reason to believe that the roof had been destroyed in the short interval between our visits! As to the tiles which Judge Nippert was able to count so easily, those who knew the Cathedral before the fire of September, 1914, know that its roof was covered, not with tiles, but with metal.

All of this is of relatively slight importance, except in its bearing on the other statements contained in the article. As a Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, Judge Nippert must know just how much weight is given in a court of justice to the testimony of a witness a portion of whose evidence is untrue, and, in view of the fact that his statement concerning Rheims Cathedral is absolutely at variance with the facts, it seems fair to assume that the other statements in his article are equally unfounded.

The Wisconsin Primary.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The vote in the Wisconsin primaries, as furnished to me by A. T. Rogers, Republican National Committeeman from Wisconsin, stating it in even thousands, is as follows:

Jeffries, candidate for Senate	50,000
Philipp, candidate for Governor	63,000
McGovern, candidate for Governor	26,000

Hatton and McGovern were the Progressive candidates for Governor, the former, however, being favored by Senator La Follette personally. Philipp was the Stalwart candidate for Governor. La Follette and Jeffries were the only candidates for the United States Senate, Jeffries, of course, being the Stalwart candidate. The total vote for Senator, as these figures show, was 122,000. The total vote for Governor was 123,000.

There could have been no votes cast other than Republican exclusively for either candidate for Senator, otherwise the total Senatorial vote would have exceeded the Gubernatorial vote, whereas the facts show that the Gubernatorial vote was slightly larger than the Senatorial vote.

Philipp's so-called victory is to any one familiar with Wisconsin politics a decided defeat for the Stalwart forces. Philipp was the candidate for Governor for a second term. It is a part of the unwritten law of Wisconsin that a Governor who has served one term shall have a second term. This rule has not been departed from more than once or twice in the entire history of the State, and only under the greatest provocation. That Philipp only received a few votes more than the Progressive candidates, with all the force of his second-term plea to help him, together with the division among the Progressives, is the best possible evidence that the vast majority of Republicans in Wisconsin are still Progressive.

"Foreign Trade Lessons."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I must express my sense of indebtedness to your great journal for the sound sense of the editorial article on "Foreign Trade Lessons." I hope it may be reprinted through the country, as so many seem strangely ignorant of the simplest laws of trade, apparently taking partisan hopes or animosities as their teacher in economics.

GEORGE FOSTER PEABODY.

Believed His Fortune Had Been Wiped Out in Its Collapse—Was a Confederate Officer.

When Colonel Henry Octavius Seixas, one of the most picturesque speculators in Wall Street, committed suicide in Central Park on May 19, 1911, by shooting himself, he believed that his fortune had been wiped out largely through the collapse of the Hocking pool in January, 1910, and that he was almost penniless. The appraisal of his estate was filed yesterday and showed that in addition to having a personal estate of more than $150,000, the bulk of which was in New York, he owned valuable real estate in Louisiana and Alabama and was worth more than $200,000.

Colonel Seixas was past 70 years old when he killed himself and was a member of one of the best-known families in Louisiana, and a Confederate veteran. He came to New York more than twenty-five years ago, but never gave up his residence in New Orleans, and his property accordingly was taxed here as a non-resident. The appraiser found that the total net estate taxable here was $120,988.

The appraisal shows that while Colonel Seixas had more than $38,000 in banks and deposited with his brokers, claims of $800,000 had been made against him by persons who suffered loss in the Hocking pool collapse. The claims were made on the ground that he was one of the subscribers to the pool, which was operated by James R. Keene, and which was alleged to have failed as the result of the sale of stock owned by certain members of the pool.

The tax report states that Colonel Seixas was erroneously alleged to have been a member of the pool, and shows that claims have been made by the Seixas estate against Stock Exchange firms, some of which failed at the time, for the alleged unauthorized sale of the pool holdings. The estate has rejected a claim of Henry D. Hotchkiss as trustee for certain Hocking losses on the ground that Colonel Seixas was in no way responsible. Another claim rejected is one for $17,500 by E. B. Gethin, who was agent for Colonel Seixas in the management of certain property.

Colonel Seixas owned all the stock of the Octav Land Company, which held realty valued at $161,400, but which was mortaged for $130,500. The net value of the stock was $30,000. He owned paintings, jewelry, and other personal effects valued at $5,988. One of the paintings was Dupre's "Cows Drinking at a Pool." This picture was appraised at $2,500. Although Colonel Seixas was said to have paid between $6,000 and $6,500 for it the executors have been unable to sell it for the appraised valuation. Among the decedent's most valuable bond holdings were Houston Electric Street Railway, $20,365; Columbus and Hocking Coal and Iron Company, $17,000, and Atlanta Street Railway Company, $20,160.

Colonel Seixas in his will gave to Mrs. Mary E. Bullock of New Orleans, "my good and true friend," bonds worth $8,064. He left to Harriet A. Stoll bonds valued at $5,460, and to Emily H. Florence a life interest in bonds valued at $1,400. On the death of the life beneficiary these bonds go to the New Orleans Home for Incurables.

The residuary estate was divided in equal shares among Henry O. and Charles L. Seixas, nephews, and George A. Wiegand, a friend, of New Orleans. The bequest to the latter, who was named executor, was made "in payment of any money I may owe him and for many kindnesses he has shown me."

Colonel Seixas was a Director of the Columbus and Hocking Coal and Iron Company, the Sloss-Sheffield Steel Company, and the Lanston Monotype Company.

Debts and Deductions Made Politician's Net Estate $52,670.

The estate of Martin Engel, for many years an east side Tammany leader, who died July 16, 1915, was appraised yesterday at $77,013. He had debts aggregating $22,108, and other deductions reduced the gross estate to $52,670.

The bulk of his estate consisted of equities in six parcels of realty which were heavily mortgaged, and had a net value of only $65,684. He gave to his friend, Miss Edith A. Whitford of the Hotel Endicott, a life interest in one-fourth of his residuary estate, and also gave her his household effects at 25 East Third Street. His sons, Alfred S. and Henry W. Engel, got the remainder of his estate.

INSISTS GERMANS TOOK BANK CASH FOR LOAN

Belgian Finance Minister Answers Berlin's Statement About the Transfer.

HAVRE, Sept. 18.—Aloys van de Vyvere, Belgian Minister of Finance, this evening issued a statement concerning the funds of the Belgian National Bank and the Societé Generale de Belgique, which a German wireless dispatch recently said had been transferred to the Reichsbank and there credited to the Belgian institution under agreement with the Belgian banks.

"The German wireless on Sept. 16 explicitly admits the fact denounced by the Belgian Finance Department of the transfer, after long resistance, of the funds of the National Bank and the Societé Generale de Belgique to the Imperial Bank," says the statement. "The terms of the wireless, in addition, permit of the presumption that the Germans decided to replace the funds extorted by placing in circulation the forced currency without a real guarantee, which can only aggravate the inquiry to Belgium.

"In accordance with its usual tactics the German Government denies that there is any connection between that extortion and the arrest and deportation, also admitted, of M. Carlier, Director of the National Bank. It is enough to oppose to that denial the fact that M. Carlier was arrested and deported, without trial, on Aug. 1, at the time of the manoeuvres for the extortion, which the wireless called 'pourparlers engaged in during several months.'"

POLLNER'S FLIGHT IN JULY.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless to The New York Times.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 18, (via London.)—The plan of the young Danish naval officer, Ensign Pollner, of flying across the Atlantic in an aeroplane is quite serious with him. I saw Pollner today, and he is considerably disheartened over the premature disclosure of his plans, which occurred by an accident, and Pollner now fears that some clever and daring American may forestall him. Meanwhile he says the approaching Winter will, of course, prohibit any trial now, and atmospheric conditions in the North Atlantic will probably not be favorable for his experiment before next July.

Ensign Pollner authorizes the statement that the hydroaeroplane in which he intends to cross the ocean will be built in Denmark by engineers from the Polytechnic Academy of Copenhagen, and that it will have two motors of 160 horse power each. It will carry a benzine supply of two and a half tons. Pollner means to start from Copenhagen early in July, flying directly to the Faroe Islands and await his chance there to take the trip across the sea. Mechanical Engineer Severinsen will accompany Pollner, who already is eagerly busy with his preparations.

FRANCE PRAISES TOWNSEND.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 18.—The latest American in the French ambulance field service to be cited in the army orders of Sept. 8 for good work before Verdun is Assistant Section Commander Herbert Pell Townsend, son of Mrs. Thomas G. Townsend of 128 East Thirty-fourth Street, New York. The citation runs:

"Engaged voluntarily since Manch, 1915, as Assistant Chief of American Section No 1, he has never hesitated personally to contribute largely, by organization and direction, to the removal of the wounded under continuous hostile fire. He is courageous, devoted, and of rare modesty."

MISS PARKER A BRIDE.

The marriage of Frank Hasbrouck Earle, Jr., son of Mrs. Frank Hasbrouck Earle of Roseville and Spring Lake, N. J., and Miss Marguerite Virginia Parker, a sister of Dr. Ransom J. Parker of 155 Lexington Avenue took place quietly at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the residence of the bride's aunt, Mrs. P. T. Starin, 169 West Ninety-third Street. The house was decorated in pink and white hydrangeas, gladioli, and other flowers, and the ceremony was performed by the Rev. William Wise Chapman.

The bride, whose brother, Dr. Parker, gave her in marriage, wore a gown of brocaded white satin embroidered in pearls and a veil of rose point lace, an heirloom in the family, held with orange blossoms. She carried orchids and lilies of the valley and wore a diamond and sapphire bracelet, the gift of the bridegroom.

Miss Jennie Devine, the bride's only attendant, was gowned in pink taffeta, trimmed with silver lace and topped by a silver lace hat. She carried clusters of pink roses. The bridegroom's brother, Louis Earle, was best man. There were no ushers.

A small reception for the relatives and a few close friends followed the ceremony, the wedding and reception being small owing to the recent death of the bride's mother. Mrs. Starin, who gave her niece the reception, is a daughter-in-law of the late John H. Starin.

Mr. and Mrs. Earle have gone South on their honeymoon and on their return will live in East Orange, N. J.

A VETERAN OF TWO WARS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—Major Gen. Albert L. Mills, Chief of the Division of Militia Affairs of the War Department, one of the best-known officers of the active list of the army, died at his home, 1,523 K Street, at 12:30 today, very suddenly of pneumonia, after an illness of less than twelve hours.

The death of General Mills was a great shock throughout military circles. Until Saturday General Mills, who was only recently promoted to be a Major General in recognition of his brilliant service in connection with the plans for federalizing the National Guard, was on active duty in his office at the War Department. With friends he went out motoring late yesterday afternoon. He caught a severe cold during this ride, which developed into pneumonia during the night. The heavy work that he had done since June in connection with the plans for mobilization of the militia had weakened him physically and is believed to have been a cause contributing to his sudden death.

General Mills's Career.

Distinguished services in the Indian wars and in the Spanish-American war, in which he was shot through the head, rebuilding the system of military training at West Point during eight years' detail as Superintendent, and revolutionizing the system of the Federal control of the militia are among the noteworthy achievements of General Mills's long military career.

The story of his rise in the army is unique in its history. A native of this city, he was graduated from West Point in 1879, at the age of twenty-five. In 1886, while he still held the rank of Second Lieutenant, he was detailed to teach military science and tactics in the South Carolina Military Academy. The following year he was sent with his regiment to the West to help control and keep at peace the Indians of Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, and other States. He took part in a campaign against the unruly Crow Indians in 1887, and in the Sioux campaign of 1890.

When the war with Spain began General Mills, then a First Lieutenant, was an instructor in the departments of strategy, cavalry, and tactics in the officers' school at Fort Leavenworth. He was appointed Captain and Assistant Adjutant of Volunteers, and engaged in organizing the regiments of recruits. In June, 1898, he was detailed as Adjutant General of the Second Brigade, Cavalry Division, Fifth Army Corps, and accompanied the brigade on the Cuban expedition.

His Bravery at Kettle Hill.

He won commendation for bravery at Las Guasimas and at Kettle Hill, in the Santiago campaign, and was shot through the head after helping Colonel Theodore Roosevelt to distinguish himself. Colonel Roosevelt on that occasion had become separated from his troops and, meeting Lieutenant Mills, asked him what he ought to do. Mills found a horse for Colonel Roosevelt and told him to ride off as hard as he could, brandishing his sword, to see if he could not rally some of his troops. The plan succeeded, and when Colonel Roosevelt, returning a few hours later, met the young cavalry officer again, Lieutenant Mills's face was streaming with blood and one of his eyes had been shot out. Congress awarded him a Medal of Honor for the occurrence "for distinguished gallantry in encouraging those near him by his bravery and coolness."

Upon his return to this country President McKinley appointed him to the Superintendency of West Point, with the rank of Colonel, to which he jumped from a First Lieutenancy.

Head of Army War College.

After he was relieved from West Point in 1906 Colonel Mills served successively as Commander of the Department of the Viscayas, Department of Luzon, Department of the Gulf, and President of the Army War College. He became a Brigadier General in 1904.

In September, 1912, General Mills was appointed Chief of the Division of Militia Affairs in Washington. He originated the system of Federal aid for the militia and when the army reorganization bill went into effect he began the work of federalizing militia.

In 1883 General Mills married Miss Alada Thurston Paddock of Brooklyn. Their home was at 1,523 K Street, Washington. He is survived by his wife, a son, Lieutenant Chester P. Mills of the Ninth Cavalry, and a daughter, Mrs. Emil P. Laurson, wife of Lieutenant Laurson of the Eleventh Cavalry. General Mills was a member of the Army and Navy, Riding, and Hunt Clubs of Washington and the Union League Club of this city.

CITY MOURNS SETH LOW.

Flags at Half Mast—Mayor Mitchel and Others Pay Tribute.

Mayor Mitchel and other city officials paid tributes yesterday to Dr. Seth Low, former Mayor of the city and for many years President of Columbia University, who died Sunday evening at his country estate, Broad Brook Farm, near Bedford Hills, N. Y. In addition, the flags on City Hall and other public buildings were placed at half mast and will remain so until after his funeral, which will take place tomorrow.

"Seth Low was an exceptionally useful citizen," Mayor Mitchel said. "He was always ready to give his effective help to any movement which affected the welfare of this city. During his term as Mayor he accomplished things upon which his successors in the City Government have been building ever since. This administration, especially, is grateful to him for his co-operation with it. To me, personally, his death is a very great loss, for I always found him a strong and courageous friend and a valued counselor.

"Through his death the cause of nonpartisanship in city government loses its most distinguished advocate. Not alone is this city indebted to him for his work as a pioneer, nonpartisan Mayor, but the movement for nonpartisan municipal administration throughout the country has been profoundly influenced by his efforts.

"At this time of labor unrest it is especially fitting that attention be called to Mr. Low's contribution to the cause of industrial peace through the method of arbitration. Labor and capital found in him a just judge and the public interest a devoted champion."

At a meeting of the Board of Estimate yesterday afternoon resolutions on the death of Dr. Low were presented by President Dowling and adopted.

The Vice President and members of the Executive Committee of the New York Chamber of Commerce, of which Dr. Low was President during the two years preceding May, 1916, were designated yesterday by President Outerbridge to represent the chamber at his funeral services. The large flag of the chamber was placed at half mast on its building in Liberty Street, and the building will be closed all Wednesday afternoon.

The Vice Presidents include J. Pierpont Morgan, Jacob H. Schiff, George B. Cortelyou, Cleveland H. Dodge, Henry Hentz, Eugene Delano, Anton R. Raven, William Skinner, Philip A. S. Franklin, James A. Farrell, and Samuel Rea. The members of the Executive Committee are Welding Ring, Frank A. Vanderlip, Williard Straight, Samuel W. Fairchild, Irving T. Bush, Darwin P. Kingsley, Isaac N. Seligman, Charles L. Bernheimer, Howard C. Smith, Eugenius H. Outerbridge, J. Pierpont Morgan, William H. Porter, A. Barton Hepburn, and John Claflin.

Ralph M. Easley, Chairman of the Executive Council, has called a meeting of the Executive Committee of the National Civic Federation, of which Dr. Low was President, for 10:30 Wednesday morning at its headquarters on the thirty-third floor of the Metropolitan Tower, 1 Madison Avenue, to take appropriate action on his death and to attend his funeral.

Private funeral services will be held at Broad Brook Farm, where Dr. Low died, at 9 o'clock on Wednesday morning, which will be attended by relatives, friends and employes. The Rev. Lea Luquer, pastor of the Bedford Centre Episcopal Church, will officiate.

Telegrams and messages of sympathy were received at the Farm yesterday from Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Hughes, from college professors, judges, lawyers, and politicians in every part of the country.

Dr. Low's funeral here will take place at noon on Wednesday in St. George's Church, the Rev. Dr. Reiland officiating. Bishop Greer, his intimate friend, will deliver the eulogy. Tickets of admission will not be required and it was announced that any body or delegation wishing to attend could have seats reserved by applying at the Parish office. The burial will be in Greenwood Cemetery.

PRESIDENT'S SISTER BURIED

COLUMBIA, S. C., Sept. 18.—President Wilson came here today to attend the funeral of his only sister, Mrs. Annie E. Howe of Philadelphia, who died Saturday at New London, Conn. He attended simple funeral services at the church, and then walked with relatives to the adjoining cemetery, and stood with bowed head and tear-stained face during the simple rite. The people of Columbia gathered along the streets and outside the church to see the President, but there was no cheering.

The special train bearing the body and members of the funeral party arrived here shortly before noon. Automobiles took the President and members of his family directly to the First Presbyterian Church. At the President's request the city and State officials gave no official recognition to his visit.

In the party were Joseph R. Wilson, the President's brother; John A. Wilson, a cousin; Mrs. Anne Cothran, daughter of Mrs. Howe; George Howe and Wilson Howe, sons; Miss Margaret Wilson, the President's daughter, and Dr. C. T. Grayson.

The last services took place inside an inclosure in the graveyard where are buried Mrs. Howe's husband, the father and mother of the President, and several other relatives.

The President left this evening for the Summer White House at Long Branch, N. J. He will arrive at West End, N. J., shortly after 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon and go by automobile to Shadow Lawn.

After the funeral the President took an automobile ride around Columbia, visiting relatives and places he had known in his boyhood days. He was accompanied by Mrs. Wilson, Miss Margaret Wilson, and Dr. Grayson, the White House physician. When the President's special train pulled out several thousand people thronged the station and stood silently with bared heads. The President bowed quietly.

On his ride the President visited, Mrs. James Woodrow, an aunt, who welcomed him as "Tommy" and remarked to Mrs. Wilson:

"Since he took to writing books he calls himself Woodrow."

Mr. Wilson also called at the Columbia Theological Seminary, and was shown the chair and room used by his father as an instructor there. He was told of a plan to name a library designed by the seminary after his father. Afterward he walked to the house planned and built by his parents and in which he lived for several years. There he talked with four small boys who now live in the house. Dr. Grayson asked one of them if he expected to be President.

"I would not wish anything like that on you," said Mr. Wilson.

The President plans to spend tomorrow afternoon and night quietly at Long Branch and on Wednesday will resume active direction of his campaign plans which were interrupted by the illness and death of his sister.

Y. M. C. A. TO SPEND $4,500,000 NEXT YEAR

Big Outlays for Uplift Work Will Be Made on the Border and in Europe.

TROOP SCHOOLS POPULAR

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 18.—Plans which called for the expenditure of $4,500,000 for its next year's work were completed at the closing of the annual meeting of the International Committee of the Y. M. C. A. here today. The money will be spent in uplift work in every part of the world.

The Y. M. C. A. has founded schools and missions along the Texas border where American troops are stationed, and $500,000 is laid out for the work there. Already there are nearly forty schools with 155 secretaries as instructors in Spanish, electricity, science and many other branches of study for the benefit of the soldiers. The work along the border costs approximately $1,000 a day. Spanish is said to be the most popular course.

In Europe, where there are 10,000 workers, the budget calls for nearly $2,000,000, or four times the amount spent in the war zone last year. John R. Mott, General Secretary, who returned from abroad a few weeks ago, told of the great need for systematic and thorough work among the nations now at war. He estimated the number of men under arms at 43,000,000, with 5,500,000 in prison. Close to 3,700,000 men had been killed, he said.

The Y. M. C. A., said Mr. Mott, has done very good work among the prisoners. From the eastern border of Switzerland to Central Russia there are about 250 Y. M. C. A. graded schools and colleges. In these the instructors are prisoners as well as the students. They try to teach a little of any subject desired. Their enrollment is nearly 3,250,000 men.

For the first time in its history the Y. M. C. A., through its workers in the foreign field, has gained a foothold in Austria and Russia. War helped the association to enter these countries. American sports are taught, and recognition of their benefit to both mind and body has come in a remarkably short time.

More than $1,000,000 will be spent in the Industrial Department in this country. It is reported that the erection of more than a hundred new buildings is contemplated. These buildings, to be finished within the coming year, will be established at railroad centres.

The International Committee reported the need of trained men, the extraordinary opening of the foreign field causing a demand for workers which would not be satisfied for years to come. Each year about 200 qualified men are coming from the Y. M. C. A. schools, but the need is far in excess of the supply. According to a report of the committee, the Y. M. C. A. now has 6,000 Secretaries scattered all over the world.

SAYS CROWN PRINCE KNOWS ALL HIS MEN

BERLIN, Sunday, Sept. 17, (via London, Sept. 19.)—The personal human side of Crown Prince Frederick William is portrayed in an unusual way by Karl Rosner in the Lokal-Anzeiger in the course of a description of an automobile ride Rosner had with the Crown Prince recently.

As a long column of soldiers passed the automobile on their way from the front to reserve positions the Crown Prince, so far as was possible, greeted each of the soldiers personally. He reminded the correspondent of the time when he had only the Argonne army, and said he had made it his business to know each private personally, if possible. Shortly after he was given charge of an entire army group the Crown Princess in Berlin visited a hospital and found one of his old troopers wounded. He told her to warn the Crown Prince of the danger in the trenches.

"My wife sent me the message all right," said the Crown Prince, "though it did not do much good. You see here, with the huge numbers of men that are under me, I cannot come into as close personal touch with the individual as I would like to, but I believe that here, too, the men know that each single one of them is a personal factor whom I never forget for a moment. He is a human being as I am—a part of our German people. That which gives us superiority and strength over others is this feeling on the part of German army leaders, this respect for an ethical estimation of the individual—for when all is said and done we are fighting for the maintenance of Germany and the future of the German blood.

"So it is that we prepare each move down to the smallest detail in order that results may be achieved with the least possible sacrifice of the costliest of all treasures—blood."

MORE WILSON MONEY OUT.

$3,000 to $6,000 on Wilson to Win—Best Hughes Offers 8 to 5.

Betting on the election in the financial district yesterday progressed considerably beyond the talking stage, several large wagers being placed, according to betting agents on the Curb. Edward McQuade reported that $15,000, if not $20,000, was wagered. Wilson money was more plentiful than last week.

A Curb house was reported to have placed $3,000 to $6,000 on President Wilson's chance of re-election. These 2 to 1 odds were quoted until the close of business, but in rather a half-hearted fashion, by the Hughes supporters. Later the best offering heard was at the odds of 8 to 5 on Hughes.

L. J. Stokes on the Curb sought without success to place $5,000 Wilson money at the odds of 1 to 2½. He said he knew of $100,000 waiting uptown to be laid on President Wilson's candidacy if the odds lengthened to 2½ to 1 or better on Hughes.

Even money was quoted on Governor Whitman's race, without any bets being made. The wager market had nothing to report on the Bacon-Calder contest in the primaries.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 18.—A report of a commission sent to the German court known as the Royal Amtagericht at Oldesloe, Germany, received at the Westchester County Surrogate's Court today, determines that the Burgerliche Stodschule in Oldesloe is entitled to a legacy of $20,000 bequeathed by Frederick Durhkop of Yonkers, who left an estate estimated to be worth $300,000. It was not known which school in Oldesloe Mr. Durhkop had intended to aid. The money will be sent to the German school as soon as the accounting of the executors is approved by the Surrogate.

German Baron as Hotel Porter.

Baron von Wagenheim, brother of the late German Ambassador to Turkey, was found recently by a correspondent of The London Daily Mail in the livery and gold lace of the head porter in the fashionable Hotel des Indes at The Hague. The Baron, according to the story of the correspondent, which was printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES last Saturday, admitted his identity as well as the fact that, being unfit for military service, he was thus serving his country as a spy. Baron von Wagenheim was formerly an officer in the Prussian Guard. The picture shows him in his uniform of head porter.

GIANTS KEEP NEW SLATE CLEAN BY VICTORY AND TIE

GIANTS' STRING IS TWELVE IN A ROW

The emotional winning streak of the Giants has not been halted, by any means. No, Siree! Romping ahead as if the future welfare of the universe were at stake, McGraw's latest edition of ball players hung up their twelfth straight victory in the first game of a double-header with Pittsburgh yesterday in a shutout spasm, by a score of 2 to 0.

In the second installment of the afternoon the count was sewed up at 1 to 1 when the rain came down in bucketsful in the ninth and shut down on a game which gave promise of ending in a barrel of fun and another barrel of excitement.

The Pirates and the Giants will resume activities on the Harlem front today with yet another double-header. If the Giants can bridge over that Jonah thirteenth game they have a fine chance of equaling the seventeen straight they won on their first Western trip.

Manager Jimmy Callahan of the Pirates hasn't piloted his club in the present series, but is sick at his hotel. The very thought of his men going against the fast-traveling Giants may have been the cause of his indisposition.

Schupp Works Parsimoniously.

Ferdinand Schupp performed with grace and ability in the first game, holding the Pirates to three scattered blows, and Frank Miller of Montreal, who pitched for the Pirates, allowed only half a dozen hits.

A recruit from Birmingham named Grimes pitched for the Pirates in the second game, and was opposed by Pol Perritt. Grimes permitted only three hits, but one of these was a home-run belt by Benny Kauff. Perritt was a lucky citizen, and three different times he got out of difficult excavations into which he had pitched himself. He got good support in his most trying moments.

Jimmy Smith, who played short for Pittsburgh while Honus Wagner was doing duty at first, was a bright spot in the Pirate line-up. Jimmy played with Toronto this season, and was formerly with the Feds. He covered the short field like a vacuum cleaner and behaved as if he were mounted on springs.

Miller pitched himself into several ticklish situations in the opening game, but he squeezed out of the difficulties more than once. In the second, Zim singled, and was forced by Fletcher, who stole second. Kauff fouled to Hans Wagner. Holke got a pass, but McCarty's out at first brought the inning to an end.

In the third inning Miller almost had his big toe knocked off by a red-hot bounder from Schupp's bat, and he took some time to recover from the shock. The ball bounded from his toe to Bigbee, and Schupp was thrown out at first.

Robertson Gets a Triple.

The other run came in the eighth, when Robertson hammered a ferocious triple to right centre and counted on Zimmerman's hit through second. Zimmerman tried to steal second, but when he saw that the ball would arrive several minutes ahead of him he tried to sneak back to first, but was run down. In the same inning Kauff walked, and was caught fast asleep off first.

Between games Manager McGraw got out his latest batch of recruits and cut up capers. Young Kelleher, the former Princeton catcher, and Schepner and Sandberg, both from Albany, warmed up in fine style.

The first thrilling moment of the second game came in the first of the fifth inning, when Perritt found himself in a pretty serious plight. Grimes led off with a single and Warner got an infield hit. After Bigbee struck out, Max Carey shot a single to right and Grimes darted for home. Robertson made a great throw to the plate, and Rariden momentarily juggled the ball. He picked it up quickly and tagged out Grimes. Then Hinchman walked and filled the bases.

Hans Wagner was at the bat, and every mother's son and daughter held his and her breath. All eyes were glued on the fence when Hans hoisted a line fly to Robertson, who made a nice catch and saved the day.

Benny Runs Around in the Fifth.

It was in the last half of the fifth that Benny Kauff laced the ball on a wild, tearing trip to the fence in right centre field. Benny gathered up speed like a race horse, and just got over the plate as Carey's wide toss arrived. It was a good thing the throw wasn't perfect, because Benny might have been nabbed.

The Giants led at 1 to 0 up to the eighth, when Carey started out with a two-bagger, went to third on Hinchman's out at first, and scored on Hans Wagner's sacrifice fly to Burns.

PHILLIES HAVE EASY TIME.

Bat Out Four Runs in Eighth and Trim the Cubs by 6 to 1.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 18.—Errors while McConnell was pitching and bad work by Carter and Clemons, Chicago's battery, in the eighth inning gave Philadelphia an easy victory today, 6 to 1. Catcher O'Farrell, who reported to Manager Tinker yesterday, had a finger on his right hand split by a foul tip in the first inning. He was the fourth catcher of the Chicago team to be hurt on the club's present Eastern trip, the others being Archer, Wilson, and Elliott. The score:

Reds Purchase Two Orioles.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 18.—The Cincinnati National League Club announced today that Outfielder Twombley and Infielder Kopf had been purchased from the Baltimore team of the International League.

EVEN BREAK BEST DODGERS CAN GET

Robins Take First from Reds, but Chase Puts Them to Flight in the Next.

Hal Chase caused 12,000 fans to leave Ebbets Field yesterday with grief-stricken faces when he crossed the plate in the tenth inning of the second game of the double-header, spoiling a tie just when darkness was enveloping the field. This gave Cincinnati a victory by 2 to 1, to offset the first encounter, which resulted in favor of the league leaders by 4 to 1.

In the curtain-raiser Cheney had no trouble in keeping the visitors in check, his opponent in the box being Schneider, who was touched up for ten hits to the seven accumulated by the Reds. The struggle, though productive of some brilliant fielding feats in spots, was tame in comparison with the bitterly-fought contest that closed the afternoon's sport.

Marquard was chosen to defend the home citadel against the onslaught of the former Federal Leaguer, Knetzer, in the second, and until Prince Hal made up his mind to break up the party in the tenth the battle was waged with little advantage to either. It was punctuated with scintillating fielding that helped to head off the desperate attempt to score after the opposing nines had once hit their stride.

Unusual evidence of the tenseness of the encounter was the fact that during the whole game the Reds did not have a man left on bases. Not that Marquard showed anything extra in the way of strike-outs, but the runners were taking so many chances to break the existing tie that they were caught stealing or else forced out. Up to the extra inning, Marquard and Knetzer had allowed six hits each, but the closing frame gave the lead in this respect to the Redlegs, as the Robins went out without a flurry.

Until the fatal break came the fielding of the Dodgers, as well as the pitching of Marquard, seemed to improve under the strain of successive innings, but they had little in this respect on Matty's men, as neither side made an error. Chase was as competent as ever at first, and handled a couple of poor throws so neatly that Robbie's hitters found it a difficult task to reach the initial sack safely. Groh was another factor in holding down the score. He made a sensational stop of Wheat's stinging single in the sixth with his bare hand, and the cheers that greeted this effort were repeated again when, in the ninth, he raced for many yards to fasten on a terrific hit of Stengel's.

Stengel was the star of the home contingent. He disposed of Griffith by swinging his right had across his body to envelop a mighty drive of Griffith's to right field in the first game, and in the second an accurate throw caught Huhn racing to second on a hit to the fence that in ordinary company would mean a certain two-bagger.

Though Marquard's wild pitch allowed Chase to dance to third after his convincing hit for two bases in the tenth, the lapse was not directly responsible for the run which followed, as Hal would have crossed the plate on Griffith's single to centre. With disaster in sight Robinson did his best to avoid it by sending in Merkle to bat for the pitcher after Olson had been thrown out by Knetzer and Chief Meyers had fallen victim to a pop foul to Chase.

Knetzer was determined he would not be deprived of the victory in sight, but Merkle was equally insistent, and with two strikes on him delayed the inevitable by fouling ball after ball until Knetzer finally sent one in with burning speed and squelched the last hope of the Dodgers.

Chase scored both of the runs that brought about the downfall of the Robins. He was first man up in the second inning and gave a sample of his hitting ability by whaling out a long one to left field, reaching the third bag before Wheat could return the ball. Griffith was thrown out by Cutshaw, but McKechnie produced the single which scored Chase. McKechnie got no further, as he was caught trying to steal second, and Louden retired the side with a fly to Myers.

In the Brooklyns' half, Knetzer showed symptoms of wildness and Wheat walked, going to second when Cutshaw struck out. Mowrey doubled to centre, scoring Wheat, but Louden stopped the rally by tossing out Olson and Meyers. Brooklyn had another chance to score in the fifth, when they gathered two hits and a base on balls, but not a man could get over the plate, so perfect was the Cincinnati defense.

The moist ball pitched by Cheney helped along Cincinnati's run in the fourth inning of the first game, Griffith going to second because Olson's throw to first wandered around the infield, because of the ball being slippery. McKechnie sacrificed and Louden was hit. Griffith scored on Wingo's sacrifice fly to Myers, and Schneider was thrown out.

In the eighth, Daubert singled to centre after Myers struck out, and went to third on Stengel's duplication of the hit. Wheat was safe on first because Schneider dropped Chase's throw to first. Cutshaw hit to short, and Daubert was forced at the plate. Mowrey's hit to right scored Stengel and Wheat, Olson ending the lively session by a fly to Groh. The scores:

ATHLETIC BOARD AT YALE.

Corporation Formally Approves the Plan of Governing Body.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 18.—The Yale Corporation today formally approved a plan whereby all athletic activities at the university will be governed by an organization to be known as the Board of Control. The board will consist of two members of the college Faculty, two members of the Scientific School Faculty, five graduates of the university, and eight more members to be chosen by the corporation annually from the alumni or undergraduates, at its discretion.

The Treasurer of the university reported the receipts of payments of gifts and bequests since the commencement meeting of $717,913.23.

TIGER SCRIMMAGE PUT OFF.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKE MINNEWASKA, N. Y., Sept. 18.—Coach John Rush of the Princeton football eleven has been devoting a great deal of time in the preliminary practice to the kicking end of the game and from all appearances he is planning to use his punter Driggs a great deal this Fall. Despite the fact that the abbreviated field at Lake Minnewaska handicaps the kickers to some extent, Driggs has been hoisting the ball from fifty-five to sixty yards on all his kicks. The coaches have found another kicker of ability in Jack Eddy, a candidate for backfield position.

No shoulder pads have arrived at the Tiger camp as yet, so Coach Rush put off the scrimmage that he planned to hold today until tomorrow. The regular drill in the fundamentals and a signal practice were held in both the morning and afternoon despite a thundershower in the afternoon. Ames, Haas, and Eddy appear to be the most likely candidates for quarter back. A keen contest is already under way among these three men. Eberstadt, another quarter back candidate, has not put in an appearance at the camp, and it is not known whether he will play this Fall.

CLUBS WITHDRAW DRAFTS.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 18. — Drafts on five of the twelve players the Philadelphia Americans obtained at the meeting of the National Baseball Commission here last Friday were cancelled, according to an announcement late today by John E. Bruce, Secretary of the commission.

The Athletics withdrew their drafts on Infielder Johns of Columbus, Infielder McGaffigan of Vernon, Shortstop Jennings of Minneapolis, Outfielder Bratchi of Muskegon, and Catcher Bassler of Los Angeles. These withdrawals give the New York Americans first choice on Minneapolis and Cleveland first pick of the Vernon team.

Cleveland was named Catcher McAvoy as their choice from Baltimore. The draft of the Chicago Americans on Kopp from Buffalo has been set aside by the commission, as the player has been purchased by the Boston Americans.

RED SOX TAKE LEAD AGAIN.

Beat White Sox by 4 to 3 and Displace the Tigers, Who Lose.

CHICAGO, Sept. 18.—Chicago forced Boston back into first place today when they tossed away the final game of the series with the world's champions, while Philadelphia won from Detroit. The score here was 4 to 3. Boston scored its first run in the second. Lewis singled after one was out, and went to third when Leibold juggled Gardner's single. On an attempted double steal, Lewis counted when E. Collins threw wild to the plate.

Terry's fumble of Walker's grounder after Janvrin had walked and Lewis's double netted two more for the champions. Chicago's runs were made in the fourth, seventh, and ninth innings. The local team had numerous chances to get runs, but did not avail themselves of the opportunity. The score:

SECRET DRILL FOR CAMBRIDGE SQUAD

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 18.—The Harvard 'Varsity coaches took their players behind the secret practice fence for the first time this afternoon, and henceforth the public will see little of the eleven except in the games. There was no scrimmage, but the men were drilled on plays for two hours.

Two of last year's regulars were on hand today. Moseley Taylor, who played guard against Princeton last Fall, was used at right tackle on the first team. He is in fine trim, weighing about 190 pounds. Dick Harte, the end who scored Harvard's first touchdown against Yale last year, came over from Philadelphia and worked in his old place on the right wing. Harte is down pretty fine, but after he gets used to a little football he will be allowed to rest until Saturday's opening game. Caner, one of last year's substitutes and Harte's lawn tennis partner, also reported. He is fifteen pounds under weight and will be handled carefully.

The coaches put the linemen through their paces today, the breaking-through drill being brisk. There was a lot of kicking and Charley Brickley took the drop-kickers in hand again. The line-up, with all three of the veterans on the team for signal drill, was: Hartley and Harte, ends; Batchelder and Taylor, tackles; Dadmun and Clark, guards; Harris, centre; Gardner, quarter, and Bond, Horween, and Flower, backs. This evening the coaches tried out the new lighting system in the stadium, but a satisfactory reflecting system has not been found.

STIFF PACE FOR ELI SQUAD.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 18.—Head Coach Tad Jones of the Yale eleven this afternoon praised the squad and the atmosphere at the practice. At the close of the hardest afternoon's drill since the candidates reported, he said:

"The spirit of the fellows is fine and they are willing and are working hard. If we can only get the candidates for the team who are enrolled in the artillery battery soon it will be a great help."

As there are fully two complete elevens who are members of the Yale Battery which has been sent from Tobyhanna, Penn., to Niantic, Conn., but not yet disbanded, the coaches are greatly concerned. The present squad was today limited to less than fifty candidates.

Today's morning and afternoon drill kept the squad hustling for nearly three hours, rudimentary morning work keeping them occupied for half that period and punting and signal drill, followed by more than half an hour of scrimmaging this afternoon, rounding out the day's exceptionally heavy program.

Jones kept the 'Varsity hammering in straight line plunges in the afternoon, and they scored three touchdowns over the scrub defense, in one instance propelling their attack seventy yards without being checked. Three touchdowns were registered, the veterans, Harry Legore and Bob Bingham, counting once each, and Emil Jacques, who has been at full back for three days, plowing over for the third. Jacques's work was extremely clean-cut, and, although he is thirty pounds lighter than Rex Hutchinson, who is commonly regarded first-string choice for the berth, he rarely failed to get his distance.

The scrubs only once succeeded in gaining ground for material advance, taking the ball from midfield to the 'Varsity thirty-yard line, where Full Back Joe Neville lifted a neat field goal over the cross bar for the first score of the season against the regulars.

Charley Taft was a left tackle after an absence of five days. Voris was at centre, Callahan, who began the season there, being out with a slight muscle bruise.

Charley Comeford, Captain of the freshman eleven last Fall, was installed at right end, where Rosener has been since the opening of the season. Smith of the third eleven last year was tried at quarter back, making the fifth candidate placed there since the season began. Ex-Captain Brink Thorne was the only new visiting coach.

COLUMBIA OUT TOMORROW.

Vanguard of Candidates Arrives for First Practice on South Field.

The vanguard of Columbia's 1916 football squad reported at South Field yesterday afternoon to inspect the condition of the playing field and to exchange theories on the prospects of the season, which will start tomorrow with the first practice. Captain Jeff Healey, left tackle, was one of the first to meet Coach T. Nelson Metcalf, and later the veterans, Jimmy Cleveland, Henry Munroe, and Howard Miller, joined in the conference.

The work of disguising South Field from a baseball diamond to a gridiron playground commenced yesterday. Harry A. Fisher, graduate manager, set to work a corps of laborers to replace the north stands, removed after the season last Fall, and when this is finished the new tier of seats on the east end of South Field will be constructed. Goal posts were set in place, together with the necessary padding around their bases, and the first coat of lime for the network of boundary and yard lines will be applied to the field this morning.

No definite hour for tomorrow's drill has been announced, and it is probable that Coach Metcalf and the managers will meet the candidates before noon to issue the uniforms, and that a very light work-out will be held about the middle of the afternoon.

PENN STATE DRILL HARD.

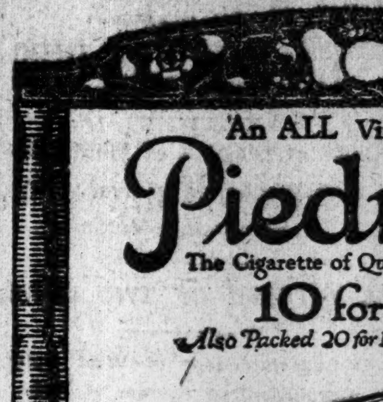
Special to The New York Times.

STATE COLLEGE, Penn., Sept. 18.—A long drill in tackling down the field under punts this afternoon was Penn State's preliminary step to actual scrimmage work. This is scheduled to begin tomorrow, when Harlow will match the regulars against the freshman eleven. For the next three days scrimmages will constitute the preparation for the opening game with Susquehanna University here next Saturday.

An innovation in Penn State's training quarters was established today with the announcement of first and second 'Varsity training tables. Heretofore the football squad has been seated indiscriminately in the dining room. The first 'Varsity table is temporarily made up of the following: Captain Clark, Hess, Ewing, Higgins, Cubbage, Parrish, Kraft, Krushank, Ege, Thorpe, Robb, Morris, Swain, Gross, Edgerton, Czarneckie, Jones, Beck, and O'Donnell. The following are seated at the second table: Sniderman, Locke, Tavener, Bortz, Robison, Smith, R. Clarke, Conover, Levison, Unger, and Lindquist.

Dinner in Honor of Chick Evans.

CHICAGO, Sept. 18.—The Indiana Society of Chicago tonight feted Chick Evans, national open and amateur golf champion, at a banquet set on a table equipped as a miniature golf course. George Ade, President of the society, was toastmaster.



A. A. U. ELECTS OFFICERS.

Rubien Again Chosen President of Metropolitan Association.

The annual meeting of the Metropolitan Association of the Amateur Athletic Union was held last night at the Union Settlement A. C., 104th Street and Second Avenue. Frederick W. Rubien, for the third time, was selected as President; Jacob Stumpf, Vice President, and Andrew F. Tully, Secretary-Treasurer, were named to succeed themselves. Congressman Murray Hulbert, in nominating Mr. Rubien, lauded him for the passage by Congress of an act creating a national athletic stadium at Washington.

John F. O'Hara of Newark, in charge of the recent national championships at Weequahic Park, was defeated for re-election to the Registration Committee. O'Hara's place will be filled by E. Wetmore Kinsley of Yonkers. The Registration Board is composed as follows: George P. Mathews, Long Island A. C.; Fred A. Niles, Jr., Morningside A. C.; Charles A. Elbert, Anchor A. C.; E. Wetmore Kinsley, Hollywood Inn A. A., and Stephen Byrne, Trinity Club.

The delegates to the Amateur Athletic Union were selected as follows: Frederick W. Rubien, Justice Bartow S. Weeks, Jacob W. Stumpf, Herman Obertubessing, George Mathews, and Fred Delany. The alternates will be Terence Farley, Otto Wahle, P. J. Walsh, Congressman Murray Hulbert, William J. Lee, and Lester J. Stevens. President Rubien appointed as delegates at large J. J. Walsh, J. T. Mahoney, and Murray Hulbert.

ALUMNI HELP FORDHAM.

The coaching staff of the Fordham football squad received two additions yesterday when Bill McCaffrey and Bill Kelliher, both stars on the strong 1909 team, came out to help with the present candidates for the opening tussle with Lafayette. McCaffrey will have charge of the flank candidates this season. Kelliher, who played tackle at Fordham and centre at the University of Pennsylvania, is assisting Moriarty, Fordham's new line coach.

Frank Gargan kept the linemen busy most of the afternoon perfecting their work with the forward pass and trying out new kickers. Dave Mulcahy, who has been transferred from tackle to the back field, was given a tryout. With the first scrimmage due for today, the tackling dummy was used a great deal yesterday. The tackling drill lasted more than a half hour.

SYRACUSE HARD AT WORK.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 18.—Football practice at Syracuse is well under way in spite of the fact that the opening of the university has been delayed until Oct. 3. Twenty-five men are reporting regularly to the head coach, Bill Hollenback, and the line coach, Bill Horr. This number is being supplemented each day by the arrival of men who have been working during the Summer and could not get away for the opening days of practice.

Captain White, Schlachter, the All-American guard; Cobb, Meehan, Rafter, Du Moe, Brainey, Newbury, Brown, Boutin, Ruttstein, Crandall, Schultz, Gilmore, and Trigg are the veterans reporting. From last year's freshman team Malone, Witter, Planck, Alexander, Livshin, Wright, Matteo, Dunn, and Payne look particularly good. These men, with last year's scrubs, furnish the material from which the Orange mentors expect to produce a winning team.

The great problem that faces the coaches is to build up a new backfield. Meehan, quarterback; Brown, halfback, and Rafter, fullback, are all the men that are left of last year's wonderful backfield. Captain Rose, Slater, and Glass were lost by graduation. Huycke has left college and Red Wilkinson is down in Mexico with the troops. The schedule follows:

Sept. 30, with Grove City, at Syracuse; Oct. 7, Ohio University, at Syracuse; Oct. 14, Franklin and Marshall, at Syracuse; Oct. 21, Pittsburgh, at Syracuse; Oct. 28, Michigan, at Ann Arbor; Nov. 4, Dartmouth, at Springfield, Mass.; Nov. 11, Susquehanna, at Syracuse; Nov. 18, Colgate, at Syracuse; Nov. 25, Tufts, at Boston.

On New Year's Day the team will play in Pasadena with the Pacific Coast intercollegiate champions at the Rose Tournament Association.

CAMPFIRE FROM KENTUCKY.

Campfire, which won the Futurity for Richard T. Wilson, President of the Saratoga Racing Association, is a product of Kentucky. He was bred and foaled at Arch Hamilton's Kirklevington Farm, near Lexington, his sire being Olambala and his dam the young Voter mare Nightfall, a daughter of an English mare, Sundown, by Springfield-Sunshine, by Thormanby.

Campfire is Nightfall's first colt to be trained, and he likewise is one of the first of the get of his sire. Nightfall's first foal came in 1913, and died, Campfire is her second. At Kirklevington there is a weanling brother to him, and Mr. Wilson has there ten other mares with foals this year by Olambala. They are Lady of Navarre, Roman Gold, Fantasque, Madchen, Maha, Mauviette, Mexoana, Mont Rose, La Follette, and Reticule. Dr. J. D. Neet, master for the Kindergarten stud, near Versailles, has Olambala foals from Aralia, Dancing Wave, Doreen, Glass Slipper, and San Andres, while Lee Smith of Chilesburg has foals by the sire of Campfire from Artful Art, Foneda, Lady Kensington, and Lizzie Gilman, and on all of these Mr. Wilson has options, which equals the control of the 1916 crop of Olambalas for his owner. Thirteen of the twenty foals this year are colts.

WOMEN BEGIN PLAY FOR TENNIS TITLE

With nearly all of the leading women tennis players in the East among the entrants, play started yesterday on the clay courts of the Montclair Athletic Club at Montclair, N. J., for the New Jersey State championship in singles. There will be a new champion crowned this year, for Mrs. Marshall McLean of the West Side Tennis Club, who captured the title last year, is not defending. She has not played in any tournament this season.

The present national champion, Miss Molla Bjurstedt, is the probable winner of the crown. The Norwegian girl attained the third round yesterday without playing a single match. In the first round she drew a bye and in the second round she won by default. Her first match will be played today, with Mrs. Robert Mills as her opponent.

A thunderstorm put a stop to play yesterday while nearly a dozen matches were in progress. The elements were not sufficient to put an end to the feature match of the tournament, however. Although it poured throughout the last set, neither Miss Hazel Sawyer, champion of the Montclair A. C., nor Miss Muriel Parker would leave their court. The match resulted in a three-set victory for Miss Sawyer, at 6—4, 3—6, 6—4.

Mrs. C. V. Hitchins, who still holds the championship of Mexico City, won easy victories from Mrs. S. W. McAneny and Mrs. Lynch.

The summaries:

About the Entree—and other things

You don't simply say, "I'll have an entree," "I'd like a salad," or "Bring dessert."

You specify exactly the kind of each you want.

Then, why not be as careful to specify your drink as clearly?

If you carelessly order just a cocktail, or rickey, or fizz, you may get an inferior gin.

But if you specify El-Bart—the first and best English dry gin distilled in America—you know you will get a perfect drink.

Insist on El-Bart Dry Gin—distilled for years in Baltimore, Maryland, according to the famous, original Sceats & Willis process and formula of England, in imported English copper gin stills.

Fall "Blocks."

Doing as we are the greatest hat business in our history, we attribute it largely to confidence in our Quality!

While our $3.50 and $4 hats, for example, are just as generous values as always, our higher priced hats never were so fine as they are this Fall.

Why?

NOTABLE ABSENTEES FROM WOMEN'S GOLF TITLE PLAY—EIGHT LEFT IN COLLEGE TOURNEY

MRS. FEITNER WILL NOT TRY FOR TITLE

SENIORS' TOURNEY TODAY

List at Apawamis Has 400 Names—Mrs. Vanderbeck in the Play at Huntingdon Valley.

It was learned yesterday that Mrs. Quentin F. Feitner, present women's metropolitan champion, which title she has won five times, will not play for the women's nation golf championship at Belmont Springs in the first week of October. Mrs. Feitner is content to rest on her laurels for the remainder of the season, and the long drawn out struggle for the national title has no charms for her. This announcement will rob the tournament of considerable interest in a way, because Mrs. Feitner's long driving and general fine playing through the green was always an attraction to the gallery and a cause of trouble to her opponent.

On the other hand, with Mrs. Feitner out, and with the announcement of Mrs. C. H. Vanderbeck, the present champion, that she also will not play, the newer element will forge to the fore with a vengeance. Mrs. Vanderbeck has not been well all season, and under the doctor's orders she will avoid the Belmont Springs tournament. She wished to play in one more tournament this season, however, and for that reason she picked out the Huntingdon Valley event, which starts today, as it is near her home and lasts but three days.

The Curtis sisters, both former national champions, have made it known that they will once again enter the lists in quest of their former distinction. Margaret Curtis, three times holder of the title, was abroad for the greater part of this year and last year, connected with the relief forces in France. With Miss Stirling, Mrs. Letts, Miss Rosenthal, Mrs. Gavin, who has changed her residence and consequently her allegiance from Cherry Valley to the Taconic Golf Club, and the Curtis sisters, the national championship at Belmont Springs should be a fitting climax to a busy season in women's golf.

The Seniors' Tournament at Apawamis starts this morning with the largest entry list ever received for this event. When last year's list reached the mighty proportions of 270 names it was thought that the high-water mark had been touched, but Frank Presbrey, Chairman of the committee, announced yesterday that more than 400 bankers, lawyers, Judges, scientists, educators, diplomats, financiers, and just plain golfers will congregate at Rye for the annual event. The only qualification needed is a clear title to 55 years of more or less happy life on this planet. On account of the size of the field it has been divided into two parts, one half to play today and tomorrow and the other half to play Thursday and Friday. There will be gross and net prizes in all classes, with a just allowance of weight for age.

A fine field of women golfers will tee up this morning at Huntingdon Valley in the quest of the Berthellyn Trophy, and, as it is the last women's tournament before the national championship at Belmont Springs, the chances of the contestants for the national title will be made apparent by their work at Huntingdon Valley.

The entry list for the Berthellyn Trophy is of a high order, with Mrs. C. H. Vanderbeck, national champion, leading the list. Miss Alexa Stirling, the brilliant Southern golfer, will also appear at Huntingdon Valley, and others to keep her company will be Mrs. W. A. Gavin, Eastern champion, and Miss Georgianna Bishop, former national champion. With the exception of the national and the sectional championships the Huntingdon Valley tourney is one of the chief events of the women's golf season.

Mrs. S. A. Herzog won the low gross prize yesterday at the Mahopac Golf Club in the one-day tournament of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association. The rolling hills of the Mahopac course proved an almost insurmountable handicap to most of the women, and Mrs. Herzog had little trouble winning with a gross score of 98.

ALEXANDER HAS BEST CARD.

E. M. Alexander turned in the winning card yesterday at Siwanoy for the Press golf championship of seventy-two holes medal play, the first thirty-six of which were completed last week. His total was 366. Al Hedley took second honors with a single stroke more.

The closing round yesterday seesawed back and forth with the leadership in doubt until the home green had been cleared. Hedley led through the thirteenth hole by seven strokes. With five holes to play, Alexander began to cut down Hedley's seemingly final advantage. At the seventeenth it was all even. For the last hole Alexander took a 6 and Hedley a 7.

Additional honors of the two-day championship showed that J. C. Flinn won the first low net prize with a 105, 18—87. F. F. Pape, with 99, 11—88, and A. P. Roth, with 100, 12—88, tied for second. W. W. Harris won the low gross of the first day with a 89 for his morning round, and H. Serine turned in a 95 for first day low gross in the afternoon round.

MARSTON TO MEET LEWIS.

MANCHESTER, Vt., Sept. 18.—Paul Hunter of Midlothian will meet H. Wentworth of New Bedford, and Max R. Marston of Baltusrol will contend with R. M. Lewis of Ridgefield in the semi-final round of the annual golf tournament for the Equinox Cup tomorrow as a result of the second-round matches played on the links of the Ekwanok Country Club today.

In the second round Hunter put out R. D. Pierce, Braeburn, 2 up and 1 to play; Wentworth defeated W. G. McNight, Baltusrol, 4 and 3; Lewis won from W. D. Howland, Chicago, 4 and 8, and Marston defeated Dwight Partridge, Bedford Golf Club, by 3 and 1. Heavy rain interfered with the play.

It is generally admitted that the sportsmen connected with the various hunt club organizations of the metropolitan district are entitled to most of the credit for the revival of thoroughbred racing in this section, and, while it is conceded that they have done a great thing for the sport by their allegiance, it now appears that this is only a stepping stone to greater things which may mean much for the future of the horse and the breeding industry. They are putting themselves to another task by installing at the United Hunts racing meeting at Belmont Park Terminal, Sept. 27 and 30, a race at two miles and a quarter on the flat for the Stayers Cup, which is the prize given by a hundred of the more prominent sportsmen hereabout.

There was a time when the various great tests at this distance, namely, the Brighton Cup, the Annual Champion, and the Autumn Highweight for age race, attracted the real runners of the turf world, including Hamburg, Ethelbert, The Friar, Gold Heels, Hermis, Africander, Salvidere, Stalwart, Sysonby, David Garrick, Ben Holladay, Don De Oro, Nealon, Shorthoes and horses of that type, and it is the hope of the subscribers to the Stayers Cup that the race next week will serve to revive interest in tests of this type, which only make for the betterment of the breed and aid in bringing out that necessary adjunct to the breeding side, the race course test.

OCTET OF COLLEGE GOLFERS SURVIVE

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 18.—At the completion of an eighteen-hole medal play qualifying round and one round of elimination match play at the Oakmont Country Club here today, four Princeton and three Illinois men and one Harvard player remained to compete for the individual intercollegiate golf championship. Representatives of Yale, Williams, Pennsylvania, Cornell, and Northwestern entered, but they either failed to qualify or were eliminated in the first round. Those who survived were: Davidson Herron, Percy Parker, Jr., D. C. Corkran, and Howard Maxwell, Princeton; J. N. McDonald, C. L. Weems, and John Simpson, Illinois, and J. W. Hubbell, Harvard. Tomorrow Herron will play Corkran, McDonald will play Parker, Maxwell will play Hubbell, and Weems will pay Simpson.

In addition to the eight remaining players in the contest, there were two representatives of Princeton, two of Yale, and one of Harvard, Cornell, Pennsylvania, and Illinois who qualified, but met defeat in first round of match play. The two Yale men who qualified—Frank Blossom, the present title-holder, and Dwight Armstrong—were picked as possible winners, but Blossom fell before Percy Parker, Jr., of Princeton, and C. L. Weems, the Illinois Captain, eliminated Armstrong.

R. H. McCague of Princeton was beaten by his team mate, Corkran, and J. Moss, Princeton, lost to Howard Maxwell in nineteen holes. Cornell's hopes of winning the title were blighted when J. P. MacBean was defeated by J. W. Hubbell, and Pennsylvania's chances of the title were lost when John Simpson defeated Alex Heyburn. L. H. Canon of Harvard was beaten by J. N. McDonald of Illinois.

The scores in the qualifying round were high, possibly on account of the cold weather and a high wind. Davidson Herron lead the field with an 80. His card:

Out	4	3	5	5	5	4	4	4	5—39
In	4	4	6	3	5	6	4	4	5—41	—80

There were forty-four starters, but only twenty-five returned cards. There was a tie for last place in the sixteen at 91 between T. Davis of Yale and J. P. MacBean, Cornell, and in the play-off MacBean got in with a 5 to Davis's 6.

Dudley Mudge, the Yale Captain, did not complete and De Witt Balch, another strong player on the Yale team, picked up. F. C. Stiles, Jr., of Northwestern, who recently won the Western intercollegiate championship also picked up.

The best match of the afternoon was between the two Princeton players, Maxwell and Moss. They stood all even at the turn, Maxwell getting a 39 and Moss a 40. Playing the eighteenth, Moss was 1 up, but lost the hole when he took three putts, missing one two feet long. He also missed a short one on the nineteenth, and lost the hole to Maxwell, 5 to 6.

Corkran had a hard time with McCague. He was 1 down at the turn, but squared the match on the tenth and won out 2 and 1. The second and third rounds will be played tomorrow and the finals Wednesday.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., Sept. 18.—The opening of the second week of the Harford Agricultural and Breeders' Association race meeting here this afternoon was marked by a decided increase in the attendance. The crowd was the largest, with the exception of Saturday and the opening day, since the event opened.

Seven speedy selling platers took part in the handicap for all ages, which was the feature of the card. The race was an example of endurance as against early speed. The winner, Lady Teresa, was never in front during the whole distance, one mile and a sixteenth, until she came up from behind near the finish to flash past the judges' stand a nose in front of Ninety Simplex.

Fair Helen was the first to get away, and set a fast pace for the early part of the race. At the end of the first mile it looked as if the mare was going to make a runaway affair of the race, but she faltered turning into the stretch. J. McTaggart tried to urge her with his whip, but the daughter of Broomstick was too tired, having practically killed herself with her early efforts, and she refused to go any further. Meanwhile Ninety Simplex took command, with Lady Teresa at his heels. The former was going at a fast clip, and it was only in the last few strides that the winner was able to gain the small advantage which resulted in victory.

A field of eight jumpers went to the post in the steeplechase, which was a selling race for 4-year-olds and upward. J. C. Ewalt, bearing the colors of the Glen Riddle Farm, won his sixth victory of the season, when he easily defeated the other contestants in the chase. The victor, which won his first race about a year ago at the Rumson Country Club meeting, had five lengths to spare. The Milltown Stable's Abdon was second. The other winners were Palanquin, Admiration, Blue Grass Belle, Delancey and Virginia W.

THE REAL LADY IS VICTOR.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Sept. 18.—Three of the four favorites in this afternoon's opening races of the Columbus Grand Circuit meeting were from the Murphy Stable. Only the most pronounced one, The Real Lady, was successful. She took the Horse Review Futurity for two-year-old trotters in straight heats, getting no opposition from even Emma Magowan.

Don Macdonald, the Indianapolis driver, had in charge the horses that defeated the other Murphy first choices. Miss Harris M. won the King stake for pacers. She was a strong second horse to Roan Hal, which was four times second. The first heat was won away from him by Sayde Densmore, fresh from the Great Western Circuit.

Miss Harris M., after finishing fifth in the first heat, stepped away better in the next one, and won it in 2:02¾, the fastest time of the race. In this finish both Roan Hal and Sayde Densmore were close up, as they were at the end of the next two heats.

McCloskey, victor in the 2:11 trot, has been racing for three full seasons on the Grand Circuit, without being a winner until today. He was behind the money but few times, however, and last year, at San Francisco, won two races. This afternoon he had a little more strength than Virginia Barnett and Empress of Russia. In the third heat Pittsburgh was beaten by only a neck.

Little Frank D., a recent addition to the Valentine Stable, took the 2:14 pace. The field was the largest this year on the Grand Circuit. The first heat went to Queen Hal, a Canadian mare, with Little Frank D. finishing twelfth. In each of the next three miles Little Frank D. won with ease.

Hudson Super Six Breaks Another World's Record

Lowers Transcontinental Time by 14 Hours, 59 Minutes

HAVEN'T you noticed that the Hudson Super Six has won every record for which it has contended? The car came out last January. Since then it has established all worth-while records.

Some predicted when our first speed records were made that a car that would go so fast could not possibly stand up. It was natural that so little confidence could he held for a car of such unprecedented showing. There was no standard in all the history of the automobile on which to base an expectation of confidence for endurance when such speeds were maintained.

Here was a car that by a single improvement, invented and patented by Hudson, gave an 80% increase in efficiency. By eliminating vibration, motors that developed only 50 horsepower were made to give 76 horsepower. Motordom could not comprehend that what we claimed for the car could be true. So we set about to prove by official records just what the Hudson Super Six would do.

Now All Important Records Are Ours

The Transcontinental automobile time of 7 days, 11 hours and 53 minutes, when made last May, seemed an unbeatable accomplishment.

Within another month, however, another car made the trip across the continent in 5 days, 18½ hours.

Then we determined to prove again in this, the most terrific of all abuses to which a car could be subjected, that the Hudson Super Six excels all others.

The Hudson Super Six time from San Francisco to New York—3,476 miles—was 5 days, 3 hours and 31 minutes. That is 14 hours and 59 minutes faster than the time made by the next fastest car. The Super Six made the trip in 2 days, 8 hours and 2 minutes less time than was made in that startling trial run last May.

The average speed made by the Super Six for all that distance, including all stops, was 28.14 miles an hour. It meant that in crossing the Sierra Nevada Mountains and in climbing over the Rockies, up to an altitude almost two miles above the sea and in slowing down to the speed requirements of more than 350 cities, towns and villages, the Hudson Super Six averaged express train speed.

To realize how fast that 3,467 miles was made, just think how fast you went that day when you averaged 25.8 miles an hour.

Such Endurance Is Convincing

Here we prove again that the Hudson Super Six has more stamina, spunk and endurance than we have ever claimed for it.

What can be more convincing than that transcontinental trip made with a Hudson Super Six light weight phaeton which, with passengers, baggage and supplies, totaled more than five thousand pounds?

But here are other proofs of Hudson's endurance. A stock chassis travelled 1,819 miles in 24 hours on the Speedway. It went 327 miles farther in that period than any travelling machine ever went in that time.

Of course you don't want speed, but you do want endurance, and you do want hill-climbing qualities, and the Hudson Super Six has won the world's greatest hill-climb up Pike's Peak over the world's highest highway.

28,000 More Super Sixes

So you see, with these proofs of endurance and the fact that 28,000 more Hudson Super Six cars are in production, there is no reason why you should wait longer in placing your order.

There are 17,000 Hudson Super Sixes now in the hands of owners and the service those cars are giving is still a further reason for your buying now.

INTERBORO EARNED $8,892,015 LAST YEAR

Total Receipts of System Were $35,891,528, an Increase of 7.35 Per Cent.

Subway Showed Larger Gain Than the Elevated—Annual Report Silent on Labor Troubles.

The receipts of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company for the year ended June 30, according to the annual report, were $35,891,528, an increase of $2,457,785, or 7.35 per cent. over the previous year. The subway showed increased earnings of $1,513,458, which the report attributes to the revival of general business in the latter part of last year. The elevated lines gained $944,328, principally because of the opening of new third tracks for operation last January. After the payment of all expenses, taxes and fixed charges, the company had left for dividends $8,892,015, and after paying dividends of $7,000,000, or 20 per cent., carried forward a surplus of $1,892,015.

The number of passengers carried in the year was 683,752,114, an increase of 36,373,848, or 5.62 per cent. over the year before. As illustrating further the magnitude of the passenger traffic, the report notes that this total is more than six times the population of the United States.

"Operating expenses," the report continues, "were $14,008,165, as compared with $12,941,314 last year, an increase of $1,066,851, or 8.24 per cent., the result of an increase on the subway division of $672,121, or 10.83 per cent., and an increase on the Manhattan Railway division of $394,730, or 5.86 per cent.

"The increase in traffic on both subway and elevated divisions, as well as the enlarged express service upon the elevated lines, led to an expansion of the train service, resulting in an increase in car mileage on the subway division of 3,772,304 car miles, and on the elevated division of 1,255,749. This increase in car mileage, the shortening of the hours of station men, and increase in rates of pay of transportation employes were responsible for the increase in the cost of transportation amounting to $714,400.

"The net operating revenue was $21,883,362, as compared with $20,492,428 last year, an increase of $1,390,933, or 6.79 per cent., result of a gain on the subway division of $841,336, or 7.23 per cent., and a gain on the Manhattan Railway division of $549,597, or 6.21 per cent.

"The increase in passenger travel on the Manhattan Railway division for the six months ended June 30, 1916, as the result of third track operation, is very gratifying. Without any of the northern terminals, extensions, or feeders being included in this operation, there was an increase between Jan. 17, 1916, the date of initial operation, and June 30, 1916, of 11,893,155 passengers, as against a decrease of 976,972 passengers for the first six months' period of the present fiscal year, and 461,904 for the first sixteen days in January. During this same period there was an increase of 15,840,859 passengers on the subway division, as against an increase of only 6,216,718 for the previous six months.

"While these increases indicate that the number of rides per capita per annum increases as facilities for travel multiply, experience has demonstrated that the greatest benefits are derived from the devlopment of the new sections. In the case of the present subway this growth was gradual but steady and of substantial volume from the date facilities first became available, especially in the Bronx and the outlying districts.

"Both the subway and elevated feeders in these districts will be ready for operation in connection with existing lines in advance of the new subways, thus affording an opportunity for development and the creation of a permanent traffic pending the completion of the trunk lines."

The report makes no reference to the pending labor troubles, but does point out that wages were increased during the year by $349,000, without taking into account the increases effective Aug. 1, and amounting to $311,000 a year additional. All these advances, it is declared, were voluntary and "in furtherance of the established policy of the company in keeping the rates of pay and working conditions of its men equal if not better than those obtained in like capacities elsewhere in this vicinity."

WHITRIDGE DEFEATS CITY.

Frederick W. Whitridge, President of the Third Avenue Railroad Company, won a suit from the City of New York yesterday when Supreme Court Justice Lehman dismissed an action by the city to recover the cost of tearing up the Third Avenue car tracks for the purpose of repairing a sewer. It has been the custom to charge the cost of removing and relaying the tracks to the street car companies, but when a bill for $1,008 was handed to Mr. Whitridge he refused to pay.

The city's practice was based on a statute of 1884, but Justice Lehman ruled that the Legislature could not have intended to make a charge against a railroad company in a case where the company was not responsible for the damage the city was compelled to repair.

WEST 86TH ST. TRACKS GO.

President Marks Wins Fight to Have Them Torn Up.

Borough President Marks expressed pleasure yesterday when he learned that the car tracks in West Eighty-sixth Street between Amsterdam Avenue and Riverside Drive were being torn up. The rails were laid many years ago by the Forty-second Street, Manhattanville & St. Nicholas Avenue Railway Company, a subsidiary of the Third Avenue Company.

Cars passed over them for a few years and then were withdrawn except one that made daily trips for the purpose, it was said, of holding the company's franchise. Mr. Marks obtained an opinion from the Corporation Counsel in October of last year which was to the effect that he had the authority to direct the company to remove the tracks. Such a demand was sent and was followed by others at stated intervals, but the work of removal was only recently begun.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

The T. D. Downing Company, Boston, lost yesterday before the Board of General Appraisers in a protest claiming lower duty on cotton cord classified and returned by the customs authorities at 25 per cent. under the provision for "cords." The importers claimed the merchandise dutiable as "cotton thread and carded yarn, warps, or warp yarn," at the appropriate rate, or as "spool thread of cotton."

The Rudolf Saenger Company protested the Collector's assessment of 60 per cent. on merchandise as appliqued articles, the goods being described as dress trimmings and chiffon having paste dots sticking to the surface of the fabrics. Entry was claimed at 45 per cent. as manufactures of silk, while other paragraphs of the law were cited as applicable. The Collector's return was affirmed.

According to a decision for the board written by Judge McClelland, the making of flowers from straw does not operate to take such articles out of the provision in the tariff for "artificial flowers." The goods were claimed by Bradshaw Brothers, St. Paul, Minn., to be properly dutiable at only 25 per cent. as manufactures of straw.

Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne won in a contention for lower duty on collapsible metal drinking cups. They were plated with gold and inclosed in leather cases. The Collector held that, as they were to be carried about the person and were made of metal, they fell under the provision calling for 60 per cent. duty. Judge Sullivan held that as the articles were gold-plated they were properly dutiable at 50 per cent. as claimed.

CHARGE BETRAYAL OF CHINA

Newspapers Excited as Ministers Meet and Confer.

PEKING, Sept. 18.—Tang Shao Yi, newly appointed Chinese Foreign Minister, has arrived in Tien-Tsin, where Minister of Finance Chen Chin Tao is conferring with him. It is uncertain when Tang Shao Yi will arrive in Peking, as he demands the right to appoint all Chinese Ministers to foreign countries before he enters the Foreign Office.

Baron Gonsuki Hayashi, Japanese Minister to China, and Chen Chin Tao have discussed the recent fight between Chinese and Japanese at Cheng Chiatun, Manchuria, but have been unable to agree on the facts of the case. The Japenese allege that the Chinese pursued the Japanese soldiers, but the Chinese Commissioner emphatically denies this.

Parliament has interrogated Chen Chin Tao concerning a reported $5,000,000 loan agreement with Japanese bankers, the security being Yangtse Valley mines. Chen Chin Tao admitted signing the agreement, but said it was merely an advance of an $80,000,000 Japanese loan which is pending.

LEASE OF ISLANDS DEFENDED BY MAYOR

MUNICIPALITY IS PROTECTED

Mayor Mitchel and Corporation Counsel Lamar Hardy said yesterday that the statements issued by the Bureau of City Inquiry regarding the city's lease of three islands in Jamaica Bay were misleading, and Dock Commissioner R. A. C. Smith issued a statement calling the attack unfair and accepting full responsibility for the lease. The Dock Commissioner set forth the reasons for granting the lease of the land, a large percentage of which is said to be marsh land.

"The facts are," said Mr. Smith's statement, "I started negotiations for the improvement of this area prior to January, 1914, or over a year before they were consummated. The sanitary conditions of Big Egg marsh and the other areas were wretched. There was no water supply except rain water; there was no lighting system, except by the use of oil with the imminent danger of conflagration. I, therefore, concluded that such conditions should stop or such improvements be made as would enable people of moderate means desiring to spend their Summer months in that locality to have a proper, healthful, and wholesome resort."

Corporation Counsel Hardy also commented on the attack of the Bureau of City Inquiry, which is said to be a Tammany organization, and which has previously leveled a number of attacks on the Mitchel administration.

"A great deal of the land in question is marsh land," Mr. Hardy said. "Some of it is under water altogether. The city was getting between $10,000 and $15,000 a year in rentals from some fishermen's shacks and other buildings on the islands, and it was costing a good deal of that sum to collect the rents. The property has now been rented at several thousands more per year, and the expense of collecting the rent no longer falls on the city. Besides, under the lease, the amount of rental increases periodically throughout the thirty-year term."

Mayor Mitchel said the matter was carefully considered before the lease was granted, and that before the vote on it was taken he assured himself that the transaction would not interfere with any other development.

ACCUSE KLINE OF THEFT.

Treasurer of General Vehicle Co. Comes from Quebec to Cell.

Henry Kline, 31 years old, of 520 West 139th Street, Manhattan, and treasurer of the General Vehicle Company, whose plant occupies a block at Borden Avenue and Newtown Creek, Long Island City, was brought back from Canada last evening and locked up in the Fourth Street police station in Long Island City, on a charge of grand larceny made by the General Vehicle Company. The complaint accuses Kline of taking $500, but representatives of the company told detectives that his shortage was $13,000.

According to the detectives, Kline left his employment last week for a short vacation and it was then the alleged irregularities were discovered. The surety company which was on his bond was notified and it learned that Kline and his wife had left the city by automobile. They made the trip to the Canadian border at Niagara Falls by automobile, and when arrested Kline told the detectives that it cost him $600 for automobile hire to get from New York City to his destination.

He was found with his wife at the Hotel Chateau Frontenac in Quebec, and Detective Thomas Teeven of Long Island City was sent to Quebec with a warrant. Kline waived formalities and returned in custody of the detective. He said his wife was in ill health and he thought the automobile trip would do her good. He refused to discuss the charge against him. He will be arraigned in the Long Island City police court this morning.

AN ACCOUNTANTS' INSTITUTE

American Association to Reorganize—Plan to Standardize Profession.

The American Association of Public Accountants, which began a four-day annual convention at the Waldorf-Astoria yesterday, will consider today a reorganization plan, including the formation of a new corporation with more stringent admission requirements, to be known as the "Institute of Accountants in the United States of America." The aim is to create a national organization that will set a standard for the whole profession, as the national scientific institutes do in their fields.

The Reorganization Committee is made up of J. E. Sterrett (Chairman), W. Sanders Davies, Carl H. Nau, Waldron H. Rand, and E. W. Sells.

Hitherto, membership in the national association has been obtained through membership in State accountants' societies, of which twenty-six have affiliated with the national organization. Although the State organizations will remain active, as in the past, membership in the new institute, according to the proposed plan, will be gained by examination exclusively.

A business meeting of the Board of Trustees was held yesterday, with representatives from twenty-six States present. A reception was given the delegates at 4 o'clock by the New York State Society, and, in the evening, the society gave a ball in the Astor Gallery.

The session this morning will be addressed by Borough President Marcus M. Marks and Charles S. Hamlin. Among the other speakers during the course of the convention will be Dr. John H. Finley, Robert H. Montgomery and Edward L. Suffren. The Secretary of the association, A. P. Richardson, said yesterday that the attendance at the convention was the largest in the history of the organization.

Clearing House for Sugar Board.

Members of the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange voted 122 to 4 yesterday to organize a clearing house association along lines similar to those already operating on the Stock and Cotton Exchanges. A canvass will at once be made to obtain members. Two separate organizations are proposed, one to clear trades in sugar and one in coffee.

SAW ZEPPELINS FROM LINER.

Passengers on Noordam Could Read Name of L-30 Through Glasses.

Passengers arriving on the Holland-America liner Noordam yesterday, from Rotterdam via Falmouth, said that when the liner was in the North Sea on Sept. 2, late in the afternoon, the Zeppelin L-30, on its way from Germany to raid the English coast, passed directly over their heads. The L-30 came down to within about 600 feet of the ship and circled round her three times, so that the passengers could see the crew looking out of their car. Then the machine rose up to an altitude of 3,000 feet or more, and winged her way toward the English coast.

Dr. Hendrik Willem van Loon, professor of Modern European History at Cornell University, who was a passenger on the Noordam, said he could plainly read its number through his glasses. Before sundown other Zeppelins were sighted, the Professor continued, on their way to England. Dr. van Loon went on to say that the Londoners were not afraid of the Zeppelin raids now, as they had more confidence in the new anti-aircraft guns and the searchlights are flashing over the city from dark to dawn. England has become convinced that the war must be taken seriously, Professor van Loon continued, and that she must make a determined fight.

PARK ON RANDALL'S ISLAND.

A request has been sent to the Board of Estimate by the Institute for Public Service urging the benefits to the city in the use of Randall's Island as a great city park. It would mean the abandonment of the plan, practically completed by Charities Commissioner Kingsbury, to erect on the island a new building for feeble-minded children, at a cost of $600,000. The matter will come before the Board of Estimate for final action on Friday. The Institute for Public Service has associated in the movement for a park many active social workers.

In the letter sent to the Board of Estimate the Institute says that Blackwell's Island contains sufficent room near the present charities buildings there for the proposed structure for feeble-minded children, and that Randall's Island is virtually the city's last chance to obtain a 200-acre park with very little expense.

In its plea for a park the Institute calls attention to the fact that last April Borough President Marks presented a letter to the Board of Estimate from ex-Park Commissioner Henry Smith, showing how, without expense to the city, a great 200-acre park could be established on Randall's Island if the city authorities should decide to place the $600,000 building for feeble-minded children elsewhere.

Print Prices Go Up.

Advances of a quarter of a cent a yard went into effect yesterday on American and Pilgrim prints, which are sold through M. C. D. Borden & Sons of this city. These are the new prices: American prints—indigos, indigos and reds, indigos and golds, calcuttas, black and whites, plain blacks, and chambrays—7¼ cents; grays, plaids and checks, 6¾ cents; shirtings, Swiss effects, 6¾ cents; plain colors in shades 1, 2, 3, 4, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15 and 16, 6¾ cents; shades 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10, 7¼ cents. Pilgrim prints—indigos, indigos and reds, indigos and golds, light indigos, black and whites, plain blacks and chambrays—6¾ cents; grays, plaids and checks, 6¼ cents; shirtings, Swiss effects, 5¾ cents; plain colors in shades 1, 2, 3, 4, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, and 16, 6¼ cents; shades 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10, 6¾ cents; Capital shirtings 5¼ cents. Prices are subject to change without notice, and owing to color and other conditions beyond the firm's control orders will be taken only subject to ability to deliver goods and to reduction of quantity if necessary.

Burlap Demand Is Limited.

The week opened quietly enough in the local burlap market. There was little demand for either light or heavy goods, but prices continued firm enough. These figures were quoted on standard forty-inch goods: 7½-ounce, 6.80c; 8-ounce, 6.90@6.95c; 10-ounce, 8.25@8.40c; 10½-ounce, 8.50c. Jute for this month's shipment from Calcutta is a little easier in price, having declined to £34. Cables received from Calcutta yesterday placed the August shipments from that port at 40,000,000 yards, against 37,500,000 yards, as previously reported. The final forecast of the year's Indian jute crop is expected to reach this market some time this week.

Gray Goods More Active.

Gray goods, more especially printcloths, were pretty active in this market yesterday and prices stiffened somewhat as a result. Large sales of 39-inch 80 squares were reported at 8¾ cents for deliveries running to Jan. 1, while for shipment in September, October, and November, 38½-inch 64-60s were cleaned up early in the day at 6½ cents. There were unconfirmed reports heard during the afternoon that business on this construction had also been done at 6 9-16 cents. The market is tight at 5⅞ cents (asked) for 38½-inch 60-52s, though no sales have been reported at that figure. Bids of 5 9-16 cents for 60-48s in that width have been steadily refused and 5⅝ cents demanded. There was no great feature to the day's transactions in coarse cottons. Closing printcloth figures were:

39-inch, 68-72s	*7⅝c	38½-inch, 60-52s	*5⅞c

*Asked.

Taffeta Promised Another Run.

There are quite a few factors in the silk trade who believe that taffeta will see another run of popularity. The time set is next Spring. With the original effects which these manufacturers promise in the fabric, they are of the opinion that the construction should attain the success which it achieved during the season passed. At the present moment satins are leading in the demand, and everything on that order is eagerly sought.

Cost of Dyes as an Argument.

Manufacturing clothiers who would like to see a decline in piece goods have still to answer the "high price of dyes" argument put forward by the mill agents. The mill salesmen are giving instances where dyes costing 11 and 16 cents a pound before the war are now quoted at $11 and $16 a pound. Mill agents are rather hopeful over the chance that the heavy colors which have been popular since the dye scarcity became serious may pass out, giving an opportunity for them to use colors that are not quite so high in price.

Ask for Clothing Alterations.

The clothing retailers, in the large cities especially, have become accustomed to ask for so many alterations that the practice has finally reached a stage where it is regarded as an evil in the manufacturing trade. The idea behind the practice, so the wholesalers say, is a desire to add a distinct note to the clothing sold by each house. In the long run, the manufacturers say, the burden of alteration to suit the individual retail buyer's taste has added quite a penny to the cost of doing business. If the practice keeps up, the manufacturing industry may soon develop to a point where there will be little to distinguish it from the tailoring branch.

Dress Goods Trade Features.

At the present time broadcloths and velours seem to be engaging the principal attention of dress goods buyers. There has been somewhat of a halt in operations for the Fall season, but these two fabrics are being sold in large quantities. Premiums are being asked in the better qualities of velour finished goods and somewhat of a scarcity has developed on broadcloths. Operations for next Spring are not without interest in the trade. There seems to be a well-defined tendency toward the roughly finished fabrics. This is set down to continuance of the sport goods craze.

Spring Cottons Doing Well.

In spite of the busy Fall season, buyers of wash goods have not overlooked the possibilities of losing out on Spring lines if they do not get into the market on them earlier than usual this year. As a result, it is reported that there has been more advance retail ordering of these cloths so far than has been the case before in years, if ever. Both woven and printed fabrics are being taken, and it was said yesterday to be difficult to judge which was the more active. Voiles, both plain and seed, are leaders in the demand, with organdies close behind, and batistes, lawns, marquisettes and other sheer cloths following. Floral effects, checks, dots and "quiet" stripes are the favored designs. The broad "sport" stripes and crashing color combinations of last season are being more or less relegated to the rear.

The Treasury Department has given notice to Collectors and other officers of the customs that, at the expiration of thirty days, a higher rate of duty will be taken on curtains of Job's tear seeds on strings. An investigation showed that at this port officials were taxing the articles at the rate of 15 per cent. as unenumerated manufactured articles, while at Philadelphia classification was being made at 20 per cent. by similitude as curtains in chief value of bamboo, wood, straw, or composition of wood. The department now finds that 50 per cent. accrues on the merchandise by similitude, as to use, to curtains of beads.

From present indications it would seem that all trademarked lines carried by furnishing goods dealers will show substantial advances before the year is ended. Following increases on collars and certain brands of shirts, the movement to put up the retail price is extending to hosiery and neckwear. Some keen buyers are getting in larger stocks than usual of the articles they are certain will be advanced, so that they may reap the increased profit when the price goes up to the consumer. Credit men for the wholesale houses have noticed a tendency to extend purchases, and by some this is put down to the desire to get in goods at the old figures and sell them at the new prices.

Colored Cottons Prices Move Up.

In spite of the fact that the general demand of colored cotton goods in this market last week was not as active as that of the week before, higher prices were made on certain indigo and logwood dyed cloths. One of the leading concerns marked up its lines of denims half a cent a yard, while in other parts of the market it was said that indigo ginghams and drills were held higher than they had been. There was more talk of advancing staple ginghams another quarter of a cent a yard, especially Southern goods of this kind, but so far as known this has not yet been done. The next feature of the market will be the making of percale prices for Spring. While this is usually done not long after Labor Day, it was said yesterday by a prominent factor in this end of the trade that they would not be named until the cotton market became more settled. On this basis, it was asserted, the new prices might not be given out before Oct. 1, and possibly not then.

SEARCH FOR A MALT TRUST.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—An investigation by the Department of Justice into an alleged malt trust has been completed and the department expects to receive a report in the next few days from Charles F. Clyne, United States Attorney at Chicago, who has been in charge of the investigation of allegations that there is a movement to force upward the price of malt grain.

In its investigation the Department of Justice is receiving the co-operation of Adolph Keitel, whose struggle against the alleged malt combination landed him in jail after a conviction for libel. Keitel has moved his offices to Jersey City—"three minutes from Wall Street," as he states in literature he is sending out—where he is "out of the jurisdiction of corrupt public officials, telephone wiretappers, professional perjurers, jury bribers, and other tools of Wall Street."

The Department of Justice has been informed by Keitel, whose activity extends to all the Far Western grain centres, that the crop of malt grain this year is larger than usual and that the effort to combine to force up the price is already under headway. The new barley crop is estimated by Keitel at 195,000,000 bushels, and only 55,000,000 bushels are required for malting purposes, Keitel alleges. This year's crop being 9,000,000 in excess of the five-year average and 90 per cent. of the entire crop being fit for malting purposes, it is contended by Keitel that no good reasons exist for higher prices.

The inquiry by District Attorney Clyne has been in progress for several months. No advices have been received by Attorney General Gregory as to what conditions have been discovered in the malt trade. It is asserted that there is a disposition among the largest brewers to enter into agreements by which the price of malt grain may be held up so as to freeze out smaller concerns, but in the present movement of the crop and current prices no definite evidence of a combination in violation of law appears.

DRY GOODS MEN TO MEET.

Many retail dry goods merchants from all sections of the country reached this city yesterday for the purpose of attending the two days' meetings to be held at the Hotel Astor, beginning today. The gathering of dry goods men, which is under the auspices of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, will take up for discussion matters of efficiency in all departments of modern merchandising. The speakers will be men of exceptionaly wide and successful experience.

Frank H. Young, Field Secretary of the association, said yesterday that representatives will be in attendance from over thirty States, covering the small-town merchant as well as the big department stores of the large cities. The far States of the West, such as California, Washington, and Oregon, as well as the southernmost States of Texas, Louisiana, and Florida, will have a goodly representation, while the merchants of the Middle West States will attend in large numbers.

Today's meeting will begin at 10 A. M., E. L. Howe, Executive Secretary of the association, presiding. President F. H. Rike will make the address of welcome. He will be followed by Lew Hahn, editor of Women's Wear, whose subject will be "The Importance of Relations Between Buyer and Seller." Simon James Schwartz of the Maison Blanche Company, New Orleans, will have as his subject "The Ideal Buyer." Discussions from the floor will follow both of these addresses.

This afternoon the subjects and speakers will be "Market Conditions," by S. H. Ditchett, editor Dry Goods Economist; "Branded Merchandise and Reducing of Terms," by F. W. Coombs, Director in and merchandise manager of the Jordan-Marsh Company, Boston, and "The Change in Merchandising Methods of the Past Decade," by W. W. Everett, First Vice President and manager of Woodward & Lothrop, Incorporated, Washington, D. C.

The speakers at tomorrow's session will be Mrs. Lucinda W. Prince, John R. Simpson, and others. A question box will be placed in the meeting room, and at tomorrow's session questions dropped into the box will be taken up for discussion on the floor.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

So quickly does Wall Street accustom itself to prosperity that brokers were inclined to complain yesterday when it became evident that the total transactions on the Exchange would not run much over a million shares. Yet the session supplied the tenth consecutive million-share day, omitting, of course, one Saturday, and the activity was well distributed throughout the list.

Yesterday's movements were much more orderly than those of last week, and it was apparent through the day that the volume of fresh buying orders was being cushioned by sales for profits. The closing was irregular, with losses fewer and of smaller extent than would have been justified by the rapid advance of last week. Experienced traders have been surprised that the upward movement has carried so far without a sizable reaction to allow the market to catch its breath. Had the public participation not been genuine the professional element would have seen to it before this that stocks had a weak day to enable buyers to pick them up on the downward movement.

There were no new developments affecting prices. As a matter of fact, this market has been paying but little attention to news since the Maine election. The halt yesterday was due, obviously, to technical conditions. Brokers like to see customers get out of stocks in which they have large profits, and with quotations on so many issues at or near their record high levels, efforts have been made to get traders to discount the reaction that they expect to occur. It has been hard to convince most people that this market is subject to any of the rules of previous big movements.

Brokers reported that the public is still buying stocks, and this fact has undoubtedly had its effect in keeping down the volume of short selling which usually serves to clean out weak accounts every so often on a sustained rise. It was said that many holders of stocks who have refused to sell out at this level have compromised by putting in stop orders a few points down, and these always act as a challenge to these who operate on the bear side. Yet it remains to be seen whether the outside public, which has been watching for a reaction, will allow a decline artifically brought about to go far enough to catch any considerable volume of these orders.

If Steel common had not performed the same feat so often, it would be interesting to record that the leader in this market made a new high record yesterday when it touched 108½. There were fewer spectacular features than have stood out from any recent session. Texas Company jumped 14 points, but General Motors did not appear on the tape at all, and Bethlehem lost 5½ points. Stocks opened strong and enjoyed a short spurt, but they became reactionary in the afternoon, and by comparison with the recent excited days, the session was almost commonplace despite the very respectable volume of transactions.

The Computation of Foreign Holdings.

President Loree of the Delaware & Hudson and his statisticians have practically finished computation of their third list of foreign holdings of American railroad securities. All that remains is clerical work and checking up with such data as are provided by American collateral placed under loans to foreign Governments. The new list shows a remarkable decrease of foreign holdings in the year between July 31, 1915, the date as of which the last previous compilation was made, and July 31 last. The new list is more timely than its predecessors, for, by bringing the computation down to July 31 last, it offers a closer basis for comparison than did the others. The last previous list, for instance, was given out Dec. 23, but brought the figures down only to July 31.

Public Buying of Rails.

In the commission houses it was the consensus of opinion that the public had finally come to regard the railroad shares as excellent mediums for investment and speculation. The morning mail showed that clearly. Customers who, since the war, had been deaf to appeals to take on some railroad stocks, bought them freely yesterday. In most of the houses, as in most of the last weekly letters to customers, attention was directed more pointedly to the rails than to the industrials. One house, for example, showed that at current prices, and without increases in dividends, Union Pacific yielded 5.47 per cent.; Southern Pacific, 5.99; Atchison, 5.65; Great Northern, 5.91, and Northern Pacific, 6.23. It was also pointed out that stocks were exempt from personal taxation in New York and also from the normal income tax, increasing the preference for standard railroad shares as compared with bonds.

Reinvestment of Profits.

Brokers reported extensive buying of the railroad stocks by customers who had profited handsomely from the many brisk movements in the industrials since the early part of last year. Hundreds of these speculators have taken profits on their industrial commitments and find themselves with large sums which they are unwilling to risk at the moment in industrials, but are looking for an income return with a chance of profit from equities. The feeling among most of them is that they want to keep what they have made and not take the chance of losing it in securities which in the past have had violent swings in both directions. The bond market, as well as the market for standard rails, has benefited recently from this inclination.

Trader's Burden Gone.

The professional trader in the recent big market days has been able to operate without the chilling thought that every time he bought 100 shares and sold them out fifteen minutes later an $8 tax bill had afterward to be met. The new Revenue act removed the war tax of $2 per hundred, "or multiples thereof," depending upon the par value of the stocks dealt in. The extra impost was removed on Saturday, Sept. 9, and it may be that the succession of much-more-than-a-million-share last week was partly the result of stimulated professional activities. The State tax of $2 a hundred shares still stands, but this has been in effect so long that the trader hardly considers it, provided he gets a profit.

In important copper producing quarters the impression prevails that the pending purchase by the allied Governments will be made this week. In forecasts it has been said that the contract will call for 250,000,000 pounds. The last great sale to Great Britain and France jointly amounted to 100,000,000 pounds. All that could be learned yesterday was that the order would be the largest single one ever placed in this country.

Many Bond Bids Expected.

Dealers in Government bonds look for participation in the October sale of $4,000,000 Philippine and $700,000 Porto Rico securities from all parts of the country and on an exceptionally heavy scale. As the issues are not large, more individual bids by banks and bond houses are looked for than on many similar occasions of the past.

GOOD TONE IN LONDON.

But Traders Are Awaiting Settlement of Railway Trouble.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—The excellent war news received since Friday created a cheerful tone on the Stock Exchange, but there was little business, as operators are holding off pending the settlement of the railway trouble and confirmation of loan rumors.

Business consisted mainly of investment buying of Japanese bonds and oil and shipping shares, with the latter strong. American securities advanced well in sympathy with Wall Street. Union Pacific and Canadian Pacific were the most active issues. The closing was firm.

Trading Active on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, Sept. 18.—Trading was active on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes 63 francs ex-coupon. Exchange on London 27 francs 90 centimes. Five per cent. loan 90 francs.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

At the annual meeting of the Kentucky Natural Gas Company yesterday W. O. Walker was elected a Director to succeed C. N. Payne, former Vice President, and John C. Tonkin, general manager, was chosen a Vice President and re-elected general manager. President Joseph Seep reported that the bonded debt of the company had been reduced from $550,000 to $400,000.

The Youngstown & Ohio River Railroad has declared a dividend of 2 per cent. on its preferred stock, payable Sept. 30 to stockholders of record Sept. 20. Of the 2 per cent., 1¼ per cent. is the regular quarterly dividend and ¾ per cent. is to apply on accumulated dividends. The Directors elected Charles S. Thresher President to succeed the late Will Christy, and Warren Bicknell was chosen Secretary and Treasurer.

The Guaranty Trust Company is offering $420,000 St. Louis Southwestern Railway 4 per cent. equipment notes, Series F, at prices to yield 4.75.

The Owens Bottle Machine Company of Toledo yesterday declared a cash dividend of 8 per cent. on the common stock, in addition to the regular quarterly dividends of 3 per cent. on the common and 1¾ per cent. on the preferred. Dividend payments will total $1,131,223, payable to stockholders of record Sept. 22.

The Coffee and Sugar Exchange membership of O. Guillerault has been sold to W. R. Grace & Co. for $4,100. The last previous sale was at $4,200.

The W. R. Compton Company has issued a schedule of the new Federal income tax, showing in concise form the effect on incomes ranging from $5,000 to $2,500,000.

The Board of Directors of the Fidelity Trust Company of Newark yesterday declared the usual quarterly dividend of 5 per cent. This will call for the distribution of $150,000, the company's capitalization being $3,000,000.

TO SELL INSULAR BONDS.

$4,700,000 Philippine and Porto Rico Issues Offered Oct. 3.

Bankers in this city were notified yesterday in a circular letter that the Bureau of Insular Affairs, War Department, would receive bids up to 2 o'clock P. M., Oct. 3, for the purchase of $4,000,000 Philippine Government 4 per cent. bonds and up to 11 o'clock A. M. for $700,000 4 per cent. bonds of Porto Rico.

The proceeds of the Philippine bonds will be used by the Government to buy the chief railway system of the islands, a step announced as pending some time ago. The bonds are part of an issue authorized by Congress in February, 1905, and may be retired by the Government of the Philippines after ten years from date of issue. They fall due in thirty years.

The Porto Rico bonds are divided into lots of $200,000 and $500,000, the former to be used to extend irrigation work among the sugar lands of the south coast, while the proceeds of the larger block will be expended on the island's roads. The irrigation bonds will mature $100,000 on Jan. 1, 1959, and the other half on Jan. 1, 1930. The improvement bonds will be paid off in four series, the first, Jan. 1, 1927, and the last, Jan. 1, 1930.

In bond houses yesterday it was predicted that the subscription would be heavy, as the bonds are tax exempt and an excellent market for Government securities now exists. It is expected that the Government will realize more than par for the issues.

Monthly Dividends

There is no wondering for three to six months whether a dividend will be paid.

The earnings of a company under our management, serving gas and electricity in 22 States, are over three times the dividend on its preferred stock, and this dividend is paid monthly.

Present Issue, $3,943,500

We have received a letter from Mr. W. E. Porter, President of The Nevada-California Electric Corporation, in which he summarizes the salient features of this bond issue as follows:

To be secured by pledge of approximately $7,063,000 6% bonds of subsidiary companies (of which approximately $3,695,000 are direct first mortgage bonds, and $3,368,000 first and refunding mortgage bonds) and approximately $14,311,800 (over 99%) of their capital stocks.

Upon the completion of the present financing and the retirement of the outstanding first mortgage bonds of subsidiary companies in the hands of the public The Nevada-California Electric Corporation 6% First Lien Bonds will be secured by a direct collateral first lien upon all of the subsidiary properties.

Earnings for calendar year 1915 available for bond interest, $1,017,831.87, equal to approximately 1⅞ times annual interest on total bonded debt, including present issue of 6% First Lien Bonds, Series "A."

After deducting interest on underlying bonds outstanding in the hands of the public, the balance available for interest on bonds pledged as security for present issue of 6% First Lien Bonds, Series "A," amounted to $704,031.87, equal to approximately three times annual interest on this issue.

Replacement value of properties as of January 1, 1916, $17,877,530. This compares with a total bonded debt outstanding in the hands of the public of $9,173,500, including the present issue of 6% First Lien Bonds, Ser. "A."

The proceedings relating to the issuance of the bonds and the legality of the mortgage securing the same have been passed upon by Messrs. Masten & Nichols, New York.

Having sold practically all of these bonds, we offer the remainder, subject to prior sale or advance in price, at

LAW MAKES CHANGES IN BIG BANK BOARDS

RULE DISPLEASES BANKERS

The next three weeks will see the retirement of a number of prominent men form positions long held by them on the boards of large banking institutions in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, and Boston. The provisions of the Clayton act designed to break up interlocking directorates take effect on Oct. 15 next, two years after the passage of the law, and a number of men who applied to the Federal Reserve Board for permission to retain their memberships on boards falling under the ban of the law learned yesterday that the board is determined to end, in so far as possible, the community of interest among the larger banks.

While no ruling has been made public from Washington, Directors of large institutions have been told that no officer or Director of a bank in the Federal Reserve system, embracing all of the national banks and a few important State banks, will be allowed to serve two institutions having total resources of $150,000,000 or more each.

The Kern amendment to the Clayton act forbids a Director, officer, or employe of a reserve bank having resources in excess of $5,000,000 from acting in a similar capacity in another bank. It also forbids any member bank in a city of 200,000 or more having as Director or employe any private banker or Director of any other bank or trust company located in the same place. However, with the consent of the Reserve Board, an officer or Director may hold a similar position in two other banks if they are not in substantial competition with the member bank. The Reserve Board announced two months ago that in determining whether two banks were in competition no fixed rule could be prescribed, but that each case would be decided upon its merits.

Can't Hold Two Places.

Most of the men who have been serving on more than one board either made plans to retire from some of their boards or applied to the Reserve Board for permission to retain their memberships. They were told yesterday that two banks with resources of $150,000,000 or more are substantial competitors and that they would have to choose which places they would keep.

There are three trust companies and at least seven national banks in New York City which will have to make over their boards to comply with the decision. They are the Guaranty Trust Company, Bankers Trust Company, Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, and the National City Bank, Bank of Commerce, Hanover National, National Park, Chase National, First National and Mechanics and Metals. Also affected will be the Continental and Commercial and First National of Chicago, the Mellon National of Pittsburgh, the National Shawmut of Boston and one or more others.

The Bankers Trust Company has a board made up almost entirely of bankers, but of the twenty-eight members about two-thirds will not be disturbed, owing to the fact that the other institutions are under the limit set. Some of the men who will leave the Bankers are James S. Alexander, President of the Bank of Commerce; T. De Witt Cuyler, President of the Commercial Trust Company of Philadelphia; E. H. Ferry, Vice President of the Hanover National; A. Barton Hepburn, Chairman of the Chase; Francis L. Hine, President of the First National; Gates W. McGarrah, President of the Mechanics and Metals; Charles D. Norton, Vice President of the First National; Albert H. Wiggin, President of the Chase, and Samuel Woolverton, Vice President of the Hanover National. A number of others will have to choose between the Bankers and other institutions.

The Guaranty Trust Company has thirty Directors, some of whom have not decided whether they will stay or retain conflicting positions. Gates W. McGarrah, Daniel G. Reid, John D. Ryan, Valentine P. Snyder, a Director of the Bank of Commerce, and A. H. Wiggin will resign. T. De Witt Cuyler and two or three others will have to make their choice in the next two weeks. Mr. Ryan will stay with the Mechanics and Metals and will accordingly have to relinquish his place with the Guaranty.

Many Directors Drop Out.

There are twenty-seven Directors of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, several of whom represent the National City Bank, and these will have to resign, it is expected. Edwin S. Marston will remain President of the Farmers' giving up his place on the National City's board. Others affected are Cleveland H. Dodge, Moses Taylor Pyne, James A. Stillman, who will remain a Vice President of the City, Henry A. C. Taylor, Frank A. Vanderlip, President of the City, and Beekman Winthrop. George F. Baker is Chairman of the First National and will have to leave the Farmers'. Charles A. Peabody, President of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, will have to choose one bank among the Farmers', Guaranty, and the Bank of Comerce, and will probably stay with the last named. Percy A. Rockefeller and Henry Hentz will have to give up their places either with the Farmers' or with the Mechanics and Metals.

Charles H. Sabin, President of the Guaranty, will have to leave the Mechanics and Metals when Mr. McGarrah quits the Guaranty. Arthur Curtiss James of Phelps, Dodge & Co., must choose between the First National and Hanover National. William Rockefeller is expected to stay with the National City Bank, in which case he must resign from the Hanover. Daniel Guggenheim can remain either with the Guaranty or Bank of Commerce.

The ruling of the Reserve Board was not well received by the large number of men affected.

Longshoreman, Loading Munitions on Russian Vessel, Wounded.

While longshoremen were loading ammunition on board the Russian freighter Irtysch in Gravesend Bay last night a one-pound shell exploded near No. 4 hatch and wounded Joseph Miller of 272 Thirty-fourth Street, Brooklyn. The man was taken to the Coney Island Hospital, where it was said he had a fracture of the right leg.

The Irtysch had been loading munitions for the Russian Government at the Bush Terminal Stores, South Brooklyn, and went to Gravesend Bay to take on 1,000 tons of shells and powder for Archangel.

COTTON ADVANCES IN NARROW MARKET

SCARCITY OF CONTRACTS

Although the market in cotton yesterday was not a broad one, it showed a very firm undertone and prices worked up to a net advance of 35 to 36 points on the more active options, with scarcity of contracts rather marked. The opening was at an advance of 5 to 9 points, with Liverpool put down as a good buyer. There was some Southern selling in the early trading, but these offerings were easily absorbed. Liverpool reported limited offerings and one cable said that there was a better demand, with English spinners operating a little more freely.

Two private condition reports were issued, one being that of Miss Giles, who placed the average condition as of date Sept. 10 at 61, compared with 64.7 for Aug. 25. H. F. Bachman & Co. issued the report of the Watkins Bureau, which placed the condition of the crop on Sept. 9 at 59.3 compared with 64.7 for Aug. 23.

The New Orleans Times-Picayune also issued a report on the condition of the crop and stated that a very sharp deterioration had occured, taking the belt as a whole. The supply of labor was reported sufficient in most cases. Farmers seemed generally disposed to sell at current prices, at least enough of the crop to pay their debts.

Another news feature which gave encouragement to the bulls was the report that ocean freight brokers were quoting freight room from New York to Liverpool at $1.50 per 100, compared with a recent rate of $2 per 100. It was said that considerable cash had been booked at this rate. The cheaper freight rate, it is believed, will affect the parity between New York and Liverpool. Firms with English connections were credited with buying during the afternoon.

The markets for goods and yarns continue to advance. The margin of profit in manufacturing is now so large, that spinners are covering their sales as they are made. This has resulted in bringing a considerable trade demand into the market.

The weather over Sunday was generally fair. The forecast for the entire belt calls for generally fair weather.

It was reported last week that Neill Brothers had estimated consumption at 15,000,000 bales. This is denied by cable received yesterday in which Neill Brothers take the view that a crop of 13,250,000 bales will be sufficient for consumption needs.

WHEAT.

Operations in the wheat market were small, and traders were apparently inclined to be apathetic and to await developments. The absence of important news from abroad regarding political conditions and a show of firmness in the Liverpool market caused an early upturn of about 1 to 1½c from the final of Saturday. An increase of 1,481,000 bushels in the domestic visible supply was a bearish factor, but toward the close the market rallied quickly on export sales of about 600,000 bushels, and final quotations were 1⅝ to 1½c net higher. World's exports for the week were 10,730,000 bushels, against 12,690,000 last week and 9,425,000 for the corresponding week last year. In the local cash market No. 1 durum wheat was quoted at $1.72½; No. 2 hard, $1.64½; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, $1.77½; No. 1 Northern, Manitoba, $1.71¼, all free on board New York.

CORN.

The corn market showed a firm undertone throughout the day and closed with net gains of ⅛ to 1c. The visible supply showed an increase of 224,000 bushels, compared with an increase of 56,000 last year. In the local cash market No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at 97c, cost, insurance, and freight, New York.

OATS.

There was a quiet trade in oats, but the undertone was steady, and final quotations were ⅛@⅜c net higher. The visible supply showed an increase of 2,830,000 bushels for the week, as compared with an increase of 3,574,000 last year. Export sales were estimated at 200,000 bushels. The local cash market was steady; standard quoted at 51¼@51¾c; No. 3 white, 51@51½c; No. 4 white, 50¼@50¾c; fancy clipped white, 53¼@55¼c; ordinary clipped white, 51¼@53¼c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market was quiet with small price changes. The undertone, however, was a little easier, as in some quarters there were predictions of lower hog prices in the near future, although hog receipts were comparatively small, Chicago reporting 29,000, with 14,000 estimated for Tuesday. Kansas City received 7,000 and Omaha 4,600.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The market for cottonseed oil was unsettled and nervous. Early in the day prices advanced on scattered buying prompted by unfavorable reports on the cotton crop outlook, but later eased off under quite active liquidation. The strength in cotton proved a sustaining factor, however, and toward the close the market was again firm, with final quotations 1 to 9 points net higher. Total sales for the day were 20,000 barrels. Range of prices:

COFFEE.

There was a further decline in the coffee market yesterday, prices making new low ground for the movement under renewed liquidation and moderate trade selling. The more optimistic view of new crop prospects, combined with the uncertainty of the European outlet, again appeared to be the chief factor on the decline, which carried March contracts off to 8.86c, or about 86 points under the high record of Sept. 5. Closing prices were at about the low point of the day, or 8 to 13 points net lower, and sales were reported of 41,250 bags. The local spot market was about unchanged, at 10c for Rio 7s and 11¾ for Santos 4s. Range of prices:

SUGAR.

The market for sugar futures was fairly active after midday, due to a higher market for spot sugar, and prices rapidly advanced on trade covering. The close showed net gains of 1 to 10 points, with September showing a net gain of 20 points. Sales for the day totaled 8,750 tons. Range of prices:

The raw sugar market advanced at the close on a sale of 5,000 bags Cubas, from store to the Federal, at 5.52c, delivered, for Cuban centrifugals. There was a buying interest shown by local refiners at 4⅝c, cost and freight basis, with holders asking fractionally higher prices. Shipment Cubas were available at the close at 4½c, without takers. Quotations follow: Centrifugals, 5.52c; molasses, 4.62c; cost and freight, 4½c. The local market for refined sugar was steady and unchanged at 6.40c for fine granulated.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 6,573 packages. A fair quantity of stock was moved in a regular way, but the open trade was very quiet. Large operators seem to be holding off to test the situation a little more fully. Secondary grades are relatively scarce and firm. Ladles and packing stock hold a strong position. Creamery, higher scoring than extras, per lb., 34¼@34¾c; extras, 92 score, 33¾c; firsts, 88 to 91 score, 32½@33½c; seconds, 83 to 87 score, 31@32c; thirds, 29½@30½c; creamery, unsalted, higher scoring than extras, 35@35½c; extras, 34@34½c; firsts, 33@33½c; seconds, 31@32½c; State dairy, tubs, finest, 32½@33c; good to prime, 30½@32c; common to fair, 26@30c; renovated, extras, 29½@30c; firsts, 28½@29c; lower grades, 26@27½c; imitation creamery, firsts, 28½@29½c; ladles, current make, firsts, 27½@28½c; seconds, 26½@27c; lower grades, 25@26c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 26½c; No. 2, 25½@26c; lower grades, 24@25c.

EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 7,557 cases. The week opened with lighter receipts and advices of light shipments in transit. There is considerable accumulation of medium and ordinary qualities carried over from last week, and these are moving slowly at unimproved prices, sales ranging mainly from 29@32c; some inferior lots lower. Really fine to fancy qualities are scarce and firmer. Most of the well-graded and candled Western stock is selling at a range of 33@35c, but there are buyers willing to pay 36c for fancy stock, and occasional lots of extra fine quality may command even a little more money. Dirties and checks very firm in the top grades. Storage eggs steady; there is less recent speculative trading, but a fair business is doing in regular channels at fully sustained prices. Near-by white eggs of strictly fancy quality are generally rated steady, but there are few such; greater part of the supply is moving very slowly at a wide range of prices, much of the stock selling in range of 35@45c, with more seriously defective lots lower. Fresh gathered, extra fine, per dozen, 37c; extra firsts, 35@36c; firsts, 32@34c; seconds, 28½@31c; thirds and poorer, 27@28c; dirties, No. 1, 27@27½c; No. 2 and poorer, 24@26½c; checks, good to choice, dry, 25@26c; undergrades, 22@24½c; refrigerator, special marks, fancy storage and insurance paid, 31c; firsts, 29½@30½c; seconds, 28@29c; lower grades, 25@27½c; refrigerator, State whites, 32@34c; State, Pennsylvania, and near-by hennery whites, fine to fancy, 43@48c; ordinary to good, 32@42c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 30@43c; Western and Southern, gathered whites, 30@36c; State, Pennsylvania, and near-by hennery browns, 38@42c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 30@37c.

COMPANY: General Necessities Corporation was organized in 1916 under the laws of Michigan and has acquired the properties and assumed the liabilities of the following: General Ice Delivery Company, the General Cold Storage Company, the General Coal & Coke Company, the Absopure Products Company, the Detroit Arena Company, the Peoples Ice Company, the Detroit Ice Company and the Webb Packing Company. The business of these companies dates back to the organization, in 1902, of the Peoples Ice Company. Since then, the business has grown very rapidly and the company now supplies about 60% of all the ice consumed in Detroit and suburbs and carries on an extensive business in coal, distilled water, etc.

THE BONDS: This issue of bonds is a part of an authorized issue of $2,000,000, of which the unissued balance, $1,000,000, may be sold only to provide funds for 50% of cash expenditures for further improvements and additions under proper restrictions.

The purpose of this issue was to enable the company to carry out plans for improvements and additions made necessary by the rapidly increasing business and to retire the outstanding Peoples Ice Company First Mortgage 6's, Detroit Ice Company First Mortgage 6's and Webb Packing Company First Mortgage 5's. Funds will be deposited to call these bonds, after which this issue will be an absolute, first lien upon all of the fixed and personal property of the company.

SECURITY: The company's property consists of real estate in Detroit, Highland Park, Waterford, Fairhaven, Otter Lake and Clyde, Michigan; ice factories and storage houses and refrigerating machinery in Detroit; natural ice plants outside of the city; and complete, modern equipment necessary for the manufacture and delivery of ice, coal, distilled water and other products. On August 1, 1916, the total value of the company's fixed assets mentioned above, arrived at by the reports of competent appraisers and checked over by proper audits, was $2,141,089.00. Expenditures in the neighborhood of $400,000 for further additions and improvements are being made and these will go under the lien of the mortgage.

EARNINGS: The net earnings for the last six years (5 months of 1916 estimated) have averaged $158,786 per annum. Owing to increased facilities these earnings should show a marked increase in the future. The maximum annual interest requirement of these bonds is $60,000.

PRICE: Par and Interest, Yielding Six Per Cent Per Annum.

PLAN BY MEDIATION TO CUT COURT FEES

Municipal Court Justices Will Vote on Proposal to Settle Disputes Amicably.

BIG SAVING FOR THE POOR

Payment of $3 for Arbitrator's Service Will Supplant High Cost of a Regular Suit.

At its next meeting, on the second Tuesday in October, the Board of Justices of the Municipal Court will receive a report from the Committee on Rules on a set of resolutions introduced at the September meeting by Justice Edgar J. Lauer, providing for a system by which the Justices of the court may act as conciliators or arbitrators. Similar plans in connection with small suits are at present operative in Cleveland, Ohio; in Illinois and in other Western States, and it is expected that with possible slight modifications that may be suggested the committee will report favorably on Justice Lauer's suggestions.

The system proposed provides that any dispute may be submitted to any Justice of the court either for conciliation or arbitration or for both, and that the stipulations which are to control the judgment may be agreed on by the parties. The Justice is to possess all the authority which inheres in him in the case of a court action, and he may direct the clerk of the court to enter judgment. The submission of any case shall be accompanied by the payment of a fee of $3 to the Clerk of the Court, but this sum may be dispensed with at the discretion of the Justice acting in the case.

"The principal advantage of this system," said Justice Lauer yesterday, "is that an award as a result of arbitration, or even more a decision following conciliation, leaves the loser in the dispute in a much better frame of mind than if he had carried the case to court and lost there after considerable trouble and expense. It will be more in the way of getting together in a friendly manner and talking the case over in the presence of an experienced and fair third party, and deciding what ought to be done, instead of fighting it out. I am inclined to think that it will be possible to appeal from a decision made by a Justice as an arbitrator or conciliator as well as from a judgment in court, but the incentives that would inspire men so to appeal are not likely to be present.

"Moreover, there will usually be the added advantage of saving a good deal of money for the parties to the controversy. Instead of the court costs there will be only the fee of $3, and this may be remitted at the discretion of the Justice if the parties are so poor that it would seem to be an unnecessary hardship. It would be permissible for either party or both to employ counsel before a Justice acting as arbitrator or conciliator, just as in court, but the necessity for doing so would not be present, and in most cases counsel would perhaps be dispensed with, which would result in another saving. There is at present available the system of arbitration provided by the Chamber of Commerce, but in this there are various fees, including the compensation of stenographers, which make the process much more costly than the one I have suggested.

"I do not think that much time would be gained by this system, at least in the cases where arbitration was employed; the conciliated cases might be put through at a more rapid rate than the present court proceedings. And it would probably make more work for Justices of the Municipal Court, particularly for those who had established an exceptional reputation for fairness, and so would be more often called into service. But it would probably result in the settlement of a great many disputes which at present are allowed to hang on unsettled because the parties are unwilling to go to the trouble and expense of the court proceedings, and it would probably leave the losers much better satisfied with the results.

"This action, if taken by the Board of Justices, will be done under authority conferred by Subdivision 6 of Section 6 of the Municipal Court Code. To be in force the rules adopted by the Board of Justices must be approved by the Presiding Justice of the Appellate Division, but there is no reason to believe that this approval would not be forthcoming."

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

An east side deal which may lead to another apartment house operation in the Park Avenue district has been closed in the sale of the two old four-story flats at 112 and 114 East Eighty-ninth Street, plot 51 by 100.3, between Park and Lexington Avenues, by S. Bassil and T. Reilly. The property is opposite the site of the proposed apartment house operation of the Alliance Realty Company on the Park Avenue block front between Eighty-ninth and Ninetieth Streets. In part payment the buyer gave property at Deal Beach valued at $25,000. The entire transaction represented about $150,000.

The Cross & Brown Company, in conjunction with Duff & Conger, were the brokers in the transaction.

Buys Opposite Century Opera House.

The five-story flat at 31 West Sixty-third Street, 37.6 by 100, opposite the Century Opera House, has been purchased by Frederick Brown from William J. Norris. It was held at $70,000, which is the assessed valuation. The Houghton Company was the broker in the transaction.

Amsterdam Avenue Sale.

The five-story flat at 845 Amsterdam Avenue, 25.4 by 100, near 101st Street, has been purchased by Anna H. Koch from Emily and Charles M. Fercht.

Harlem Deals.

The two three-story dwellings at 45 and 47 East 123d Street, between Madison and Park Avenues, on plot 34.6 by 100.11, have been sold by the Lawyers' Mortgage Company. The buyer is reported to be the Jewish Hospital for Deformities and Joint Diseases, whose new building adjoins the houses just sold. The hospital also has a large frontage on Madison Avenue. Frank L. Feurst was the broker.

The six three-story dwellings at 60 to 70 East 130th Street, adjoining the southwest corner of Park Avenue, have been sold by Sarah S. and Robert J. Collier to A. Basil Casey. They cover a plot 100 by 99.11.

The Horn & Hardart Company has taken title to the building it has occupied as an automat restaurant for a few years at 1,557 to 1,561 Broadway, 70.10 by 83.4, on the west side between Forty-sixth and Forty-seventh Streets. Title was taken from William Funk of Philadelphia, representing the Finance Company of Pennsylvania. The consideration was about $760,000.

The Horn & Hardart Company last week purchased the property it occupies at 250 and 252 West Forty-second Street, adjoining the American Theatre, southeast corner of Eighth Avenue.

Bronx Sales.

McLaughlin House Offered for Sale.

The former home of Hugh McLaughlin, for many years the Democratic "boss" of Brooklyn, at 163 Remsen Street, has been placed on the market for sale. It has not been occupied since the death of Mrs. McLaughlin in April last year. It occupies a large plot in the upper part of the block near Clinton Street. Business interests in the last few years have caused the abandonment of many of the old-time homes in Remsen Street.

Brooklyn.

Long Island.

One of the choice country estates in the Bay Shore section, involving a ten-acre tract, with a private waterway to the Great South Bay and a large spring-fed lake, owned jointly with J. D. Adams, has been sold for the estate of Mrs. H. B. Livingston through Terry & Brewster. There is a large house on the property, in addition to a garage, boat house, and other buildings. It was held at $60,000. The same brokers have also sold the W. W. Hulse property on Awixa Avenue, Bay Shore, known as "Avondale," a plot 274 by 416, with a residence and outbuildings, for $16,000, and for R. J. Bolles, four acres on Fifth Avenue, Bay Shore, to Joseph Krejci.

Plans were filed yesterday for the new home for Henry P. Davison, a member of the banking firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., which will be erected on a plot 54.6 by 86 feet, at the southwest corner of Park Avenue and Sixty-ninth Street. It will be six stories in height, and is estimated by the architects, Walker & Gillette, to cost $200,000.

Uptown Lease by Worth Street Firm.

Ewing, Bacon & Henry have leased to Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., dry goods, now at 115 Worth Street, one and a half floors in the building under construction at 404 Fourth Avenue, northwest corner of Twenty-eighth Street. The firm has been for over forty years at its present quarters, and it evidently indicates another movement into the Fourth Avenue district.

Holt & Co. Lease in 44th Street.

Henry Holt & Co., book publishers, for many years in the Builders' Exchange Building at 30 to 34 West Thirty-third Street, have leased from the Berkeley Arcade Corporation the twelfth floor in the sixteen-story Berkeley Building now being erected at 19 to 25 West Forty-fourth Street and 18 to 22 West Forty-fifth Street. The Brett & Goode Company negotiated the lease, which is for ten years, at an aggregate rental of approximately $150,000. The floor includes about 16,200 square feet.

The James McCreery Realty Corporation has rented the second floor in the McCreery Building, at Twenty-third Street and Sixth Avenue, to Max Neuburger & Co., wholesale furriers, now at Fifth Avenue and Twenty-first Street. There now remains unrented in the old McCreery store, which has been rebuilt, two large showrooms on the Twenty-third Street front and the top floor.

Realty Notes.

The Cordette Realty Company, of which Nathan Hirsch is President, is preparing to improve the property it owns at 102 to 106 West Sixty-fourth Street, 57 by 100, with a twelve-story commercial building. Negotiations are pending with prospective tenants.

William D. Bloodgood & Co. have leased the store on the southeast corner of Jackson Avenue and Diagonal Street, Long Island City, for James H. Beals to "Harwood" of 1,212 Broadway, tailors.

Legal action to stop the opening of the city's schools next Monday is being considered by the League of Parents Association of the Eighteenth School District, according to David Rothschild, the Chairman. He said the league, believing the epidemic of infantile paralysis was not over, favored Oct. 2 as a safer date.

Commissioner of Health Haven Emerson said again yesterday that he believed there would be no danger in opening the schools on Sept. 25 as planned, and that the date would stand. The Commissioner pointed to the low record, the lowest number since last June, of new cases reported for Saturday and Sunday to support his contention.

The League of Parents Association of the Eighteenth School District takes in the section of the city bounded by Central Park West, the Hudson River, 100th Street, and Eighty-first Street. In it are six grammar and three high schools, with 12,000 pupils in the former and 4,500 in the latter. Mr. Rothschild, in behalf of the league, a few days ago addressed Commissioner Emerson a letter urging Oct. 2 as the school opening date.

A flat denial was issued from the Health Department yesterday of the assertion made recently that none of the children who took milk from the Nathan Straus stations had had poliomyelitis.

"I am loath to enter into any controversy with a man who has done as much for the community as has Mr. Nathan Straus," said Commissioner Emerson, "but the statements made by some of the persons connected with the Straus stations have led to such widespread misinformation this department has been forced to take official notice of the situation.

"Furthermore, the experience of the department amply refutes the claim, inasmuch as, out of 200 children under 2 years of age admitted to the Willard Parker Hospital during this epidemic, six, or 3 per cent. were found to have been users of the Straus milk up to the time of their admission to the hospital."

The following statement was issued last night by Miss Annie Nason, Superintendent of the Nathan Straus Pasteurized Milk Laboratories:

> The Health Department fails to give the names of the alleged cases among Straus babies. Therefore it is impossible to refute the report from our records. This is hitting below the belt. Mr. Straus's statement was made on the reports I gave him. My reports were the result of triple checking. The attendants at each station report to me weekly all cases of sickness among the babies.
> No cases of paralysis were reported. When the use of the milk is stopped, the reason is ascertained. If any Straus babies had been taken to Willard Parker Hospital suffering from paralysis, the milk would have been stopped and the facts would have been reported to me.
> Besides this, I personally checked up every day the daily list of cases issued by the Department of Health, and no Straus babies appeared on the lists the entire Summer. Therefore, according to the public record of the Health Department, the Straus babies all escaped infantile paralysis.

Thirty new cases of infantile paralysis were reported to the New Jersey State Department of Health yesterday, covering Saturday and Sunday. They were distributed as follows: Salem, 4; Trenton, 3; Camden, Bradley Beach, and Linden Township, 2 each; Atlantic City, Chester Township, Bloomfield, Newark, Westville, Jersey City, Kearny, Lebanon Township, Hamilton Township, Princeton, Perth Amboy, Allenhurst, Spring Lake, Boonton, Hanover Township, Morristown, and Elmer, 1 each.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 18.—A decided decrease in the infantile paralysis epidemic in this State was indicated in figures made public today by the State Health Department. These showed that for the week ended Sept. 16 189 cases had been reported in the State outside of New York City, as against 320 for the preceding week, 390 for the week ended Sept. 2, and 426 for the week ended Aug. 26, when the number of cases was the greatest since the inception of the epidemic.

Fifty-one cases and four deaths were reported in the forty-eight hours ended at 5 o'clock this afternoon, as follows: From Suffolk, 9; Westchester, 7; St. Lawrence, 6; Onondaga and Oswego, 5 each; Orange, 4; Otsego, 3; Rensselaer, Sullivan, and Dutchess, 2 each; Delaware, Montgomery, Albany, Madison, Steuben, and Ulster, 1 each. Fatalities occurred in Syracuse, 2; Pompey, Onondaga County, and Davenport, Delaware County, 1 each.

BUTCHER GUILTY OF BRIBERY

Eleven slaughter house owners and wholesale butchers who were indicted for having given bribes to inspectors of the Department of Health to pass meat unfit for human consumption were called to trial in the Supreme Court in Brooklyn, yesterday, before Justice James C. Cropsey. As the proceedings were about to open, Herman Braunschweig of 112 West Sixty-first Street, who conducts a slaughter house on Johnson Avenue, pleaded guilty.

The indictment against him charged that on March 17 he paid to Dr. Frederick W. Schoneweg, a cattle inspector for the Department of Health, $50 to approve carcasses of beef that were tubercular. William H. Boyle and Philip Johann attached to the office of Commissioner of Accounts Wallstein, aided in obtaining the evidence against Braunschweig.

Francis P. Garvan, ex-Assistant District Attorney, law partner of James W. Osborne, and son-in-law of the late Anthony N. Brady, was sued yesterday in the Supreme Court on a note for $25,000 he gave to John T. McGraw on June 23, 1915, payable in three months. The note was protested at maturity and the claim was assigned to Arthur W. Hay, who brought suit. Colonel McGraw has been Democratic National Committeeman from West Virginia for many years, and has been interested in railroad and coal development.

LORILLARD HOME ROBBED.

Thieves Enter House Near Bernardville, N. J., Second Time in Month.

BERNARDSVILLE, N. J., Sept. 18.—Superintendent Paul Reul made it known today that for the second time this Summer the mansion of E. E. Lorillard, on the Lorillard estate in the mountain district of Bernards Township, had been robbed.

When the family return on Wednesday they will notify the police of what has been stolen. Practically every bureau and closet in the place was broken open, furs and clothing were strewn about the rooms and several boxes of silver are missing.

The first robbery was Aug. 15, and the second on Sept. 12. The Lorillards have been at North East Harbor, Me., for the Summer, and Reul, who lives in a lodge near the mansion, was left in charge. It developed today that an assistant of his, a caretaker who slept in the mansion, is missing. The thieves in the course of their ransacking the house ruined valuable pieces of furniture by breaking them open.

Nujol For Constipation

IF YOU LIVED as THE CAVE MAN LIVED

—lived the active open-air life of the savage, and ate the savage's food, you would have the savage's freedom from health worries.

Civilization, particularly for city people, means office work, not enough exercise, too concentrated food—and consequently more or less frequent trouble with constipation.

Nujol is not a laxative. It acts in effect as an internal lubricant, preventing the contents of the intestines from becoming hard and in this way encouraging and facilitating normal movements.

All druggists carry Nujol which is manufactured only by the Standard Oil Company (New Jersey). Avoid substitutes. Write today for booklet "The Rational Treatment of Constipation."
